Didn't Know Of Spying in Steel Plants, Girdler Says

Calls Strike a 'Terrible Waste of Everything' at Hearing.

Men 'Out of Line,' Executive Admits

Accuses Committee of Being One-Sided in Labor Inquiry.

Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, chairman of the Senate Civil Liberties Committee, yesterday confronted Tom M. Girdler, board chairman of the Republic Steel Corporation, with evidence of organized violence and espionage by his subordinates and asked him how he could reconcile this with the enunciated labor policy of his company.

Girdler, prevented from reading a statement at the beginning of his testimony, in which he accused the committee of being one-sided and unfair and demanded that it prove its lack of bias by investigating C. I. O. violence, got in several criticisms of the Government and the La Follette committee.

"A Terrible Waste."

Girdler's most telling observation came when Senator La Follette asked him to sum up his reaction to the "little steel" strike of 1937.

"I think it was a terrible waste of everything," responded Girdler soberly.

He lashed out vehemently against Philip Murray, chairman of the steel workers' organization committee of the C. I. O., which called the strike. He challenged him on six points of fact which he read into the record, after classing Murray as an "irresponsible labor and political leader" who would "attempt to capitalize on the misfortunes of workers in industry by deliberately promoting class hatred."

Fence for Four Hours.

After four hours of fencing back and forth, Girdler admitted there might have been times when his men were "out of line" and he called it "very reprehensible" for employes in the Republic company to be laid off for union activities. He said he did not "approve" industrial espionage and had no knowledge that it had gone on in his plants.

Quick to press the advantage, Senator La Follette shot back:

"You say you don't approve of it

Warlords Meet In Truce for Russia, Japan

Firing Ceases 1½ Hours After Time Set; Both Sides Hopeful of Peace.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Aug. 11.—Optimism pervaded Moscow tonight with an official announcement that Soviet-Japanese hostilities had ceased on the disputed frontier between eastern Siberia and Japanese-supported Manchukuo.

A Soviet communique said fighting on the Changkufeng front stopped at 1:30 p. m. today (11:30 p. m. Eastern standard time Wednesday) in accordance with a truce agreed upon by Foreign Commissar Litvinoff and Japanese Ambassador Shigemitsu after long peace negotiations.

Although the truce stipulated that the fighting stop at noon today, the Soviet communique said it was an hour and a half later that the guns ceased firing.

The opposing military leaders met a few hours later south of Changkufeng hill and adjourned to meet again at noon tomorrow to fix a line to be occupied by their troops and lay plans for examination of the boundary by a mixed Russian-Japanese commission.

Soviet newspapers gave front-page space to the truce news, but withheld editorial comment.

500,000 Fight For China in Hit-Run Army

Red-Educated Guerrillas Seek to Stall War Till Japan Collapses.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

Guerrilla Headquarters, Hopeh Province, North China, Aug. 10.—Japanese soldiers fear Chinese guerrilla fighters more than the concentrated armies of Gen. Chiang.

The Japanese are educated in orthodox German strategy — positional warfare—which omits the hit-and-run attacks of the roving guerrilla bands of North China. Guerrilla tactics are long-term tactics.

"Our tactical instruction always emphasizes a protracted war," Gen. Lu Cheng-tsao, commander-in-chief of the central Hopeh forces, said.

"Time is on our side. We must never risk a decisive battle. Therefore we always retreat when the battle is only beginning, preferring to snipe and ambush rather than clash frontally.

Wait for Collapse.

"We know that our tactics are succeeding. My army cannot win this war against Japan, nor can any other in positional warfare. But we are all helping to prolong the struggle until Japan collapses internally."

Guerrilla armies are subdivided into units of 1,500, 500, 150, 50 and 15 men, each with a military officer and a political commissar. Organizers and leaders have come from the large Chinese cities—Communist agents and patriotic students.

The political commissar is a symbol of the fundamental difference between the guerrillas and the old warlord soldiers.

Trained Politically.

Each recruit receives 30 days of political training before entering his first maneuver. Even after taking up field duty he gives three hours a day to political lectures and tactical discussions.

Simple country youths are told about Japanese imperialism, the growth of the Chinese revolution, political conditions in China, the fundamental principles of a mass movement. They are taught to fight not for a leader but for their own homes, parents, livelihood and country.

More than half of the 500,000 guerrillas in North China are said to have taken up their rifles because their homes have been violated.

Hazen to Speed Traffic Safety Drive Today; Truck Co. Enlists

By Howard F. Wentworth.

As the District prepared to open an attack on the traffic problem with a safety conference scheduled for 10 a. m. today in the office of Commissioner Hazen, a Northeast delivery concern was the first to enroll in The Washington Post-Junior Board of Commerce accident prevention program.

Pledging support of Washington's current efforts to stem the tide of accident injuries and deaths, the Horlacker Delivery Service, Third and R streets northeast, agreed to uphold its share of responsibility in safeguarding the Capital's heavy truck traffic.

Horlacker officials, through Raymond E. Mahoney, office manager, made plans to begin intensive safety work among the company's 20 drivers.

Already active in the traffic safety field, Horlacker drivers have not had a single serious accident in more than five years. Safety signs and solgans line walls of the company's Northeast garage. Rewards and recognition of safety records among employes are given annually by company officials.

A definite and continuing plan of action against Washington traffic hazards is expected to result from today's meeting. Commissioner Hazen has summoned more than a score of safety leaders to the conference.

Fight to Save AAA Begun By Wallace

Sees Ruin of Capitalist System if New Act Doesn't Succeed.

'Law Is Wonderful,' He Tells 200 State Aides of Movement.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Wallace warned farmers yesterday they faced a possible collapse in agricultural prices and destruction of the capitalistic system if they heeded critics of the Administration's crop control law.

Answering criticism that developed in the Midwest corn belt this spring and more recently in Southern cotton and tobacco regions and the Northwestern spring wheat area, the Cabinet officer urged 200 State AAA committeemen to launch a militant campaign to "save the act."

"Suitable Action."

From President Roosevelt's special train at Barnesville, Ga., last night there came a statement that Mr. Roosevelt will take "suitable action" to smooth out Administration machinery for control of the 1938 crops as soon as he returns to Washington.

"I believe the law is wonderful as it is drawn and that it is the best possible solution to the farm problem," Wallace said. To the committeemen, who had been called to Washington to discuss next year's farm program, he gave this instruction:

"Go out and defend your farm program against those who are trying to divide the farmers . . . Make it work."

Playing Politics Denied.

The Secretary emphasized, however, that he was not urging the committeemen to "play politics."

Wallace's remarks were made at a time when tobacco growers in Georgia and Florida were contesting legality of marketing quotas imposed under the farm act and spring wheat growers were demanding exemption from a restrictive planting program for 1939.

Criticism also was being voiced in the South at failure of the AAA to provide loans on cotton that would raise the prices from about 8.5 to 10 or 12 cents a pound. Many corn growers, led by the Corn Belt Liberty League, criticized acreage

One of Washington's landmarks, peopled with ghosts of the Nation's great, soon may disappear to make way for a new $7,500,000 12-story, air-conditioned office building.

The huge brick home at 1500 I street northwest, built in 1905 as a town house by John R. McLean, is one of a group of buildings which will be demolished, it was learned yesterday, if plans of Weaver Bros., Inc., are carried through. The firm, it was learned, is endeavoring to obtain the entire block on which the old McLean home stands, bounded by I street, Fifteenth street, Fourteenth street and Vermont avenue, with the exception of the Shoreham building.

The proposed building will have facades fronting on all four streets, 10 stories high, surmounted by a two-story setback. Its architecture will be modernistic.

By the Associated Press.

Aboard President Roosevelt's Train, En Route to Washington, Aug. 11.—President Roosevelt for the first time called vigorously today for the defeat of a Democratic Senator he feels does not meet the tests of liberalism—and his challenge was promptly accepted.

Mr. Roosevelt told perspiring and cheering thousands assembled at Barnesville, Ga., for a rural electrification celebration he felt Senator Walter F. George should not be returned to the seat he has occupied 16 years and added firmly "I most assuredly would vote for Lawrence Camp" in Georgia's September 14 primary.

Senator George sat impassively on the platform through the President's hard-hitting speech and at its conclusion walked across to the party chief, shook hands with him and said:

"Mr. Roosevelt, I regret that you have taken this occasion to question my democracy and to attack my public record. I want you to know that I accept the challenge."

The President's answer was lost in the confusion of many persons moving across the platform, but Senator George later told newsmen Mr. Roosevelt replied:

"God bless you, Walter. Let's always be friends."

Frowns on Talmadge.

In making the young Federal district attorney from Atlanta his choice for the office, the Chief Executive frowned also on the candidacy of former Gov. Eugene Talmadge. He did not mention the fourth man in the race, William G. McCrae, Atlanta attorney and Townsend plan advocate.

There were cries of "Hurrah for George!" and "Hurrah for Camp!" as well as shouts for Talmadge and McRae when Mr. Roosevelt began talking about Georgia politics.

As he launched into his criticism of George's record, cheers were mingled with heckling shouts.

It was the second Georgia speech of the day for the Washington-bound President who is returning from a cross-country vacation and a Pacific fishing cruise. This morning at Athens he received an honorary doctorate of laws from the State university, renewed previous appeals for a sharp improvement in Southern economic standards and called for "constant progressive action" in the National Government.

"Privileges" Stressed.

Later tonight he told a cheering throng of South Carolinians at Greenville he hoped that "if you believe in the privileges for which we are striving" they would send Representatives to Congress "who will work toward that end."

He made the statement in a brief platform appearance before a crowd, estimated by Secret Service agents at 10,000 to 15,000, which had waited hours in the station yard to get a glimpse of the President and to hear what, if anything, he would say about the South Carolina Senatorial campaign.

State Faces 'Dictation' by Chief Executive, Says Augusta Paper; Would Make a Senate of Charley McCarthys, One Says.

Editorial comments on President Roosevelt's criticism of Senator George, as received here last night, included these:

Augusta Chronicle (Democratic): "If the citizens of Georgia do what President Roosevelt so pointedly told us that he desired we do, the South must bury its cherished traditions, forget its political independence as a thing dead, and reconcile itself to complete dictation from the Chief Executive . . . They (Georgians) will be surrendering their representation to Congress as a sovereign State, and saying to the President of the United States:

"'Mr. President, here is our Senator. He does not represent us any longer. He represents you. He is your servant, not ours.'"

Atlanta Constitution (Democratic): He would turn the United States Senate into a gathering of 96 Senate into a gathering of 96 Charlie McCarthys with himself as the sole Edgar Bergen to pull the strings and supply the vocalisms. He has asked Georgia to furnish one of these 'yes men.' Will Georgians accept the invitation?"

Macon Telegraph: "Reaction to Mr. Roosevelt's indorsement of Lawrence Camp for the United States Senate, as gathered by the most experienced observers, is that he has injured his own prestige without having contributed much, if any, to the strength of Camp.

"Hardly less in degree is the feeling of utter frustration and bewilderment at the course the President has taken."

Insull Bequeaths $1,000 to His Wife; Debts 14 Millions

Chicago, Aug. 11 (A.P.).—Samuel Insull, whose personal fortune once was estimated at $100,000,000, left approximately $1,000 in cash and debts totaling about $14,000,000. That was disclosed today when his will was filed in probate court.

His attorney, Floyd Thompson, asserted the simple document would end recurrent rumors that the erstwhile utilities titan had secreted some of his riches when his financial house collapsed in 1932.

His son, Samuel, jr., in applying for letters testamentary, reported his father, on June 14, 1932, placed his personal property and real estate, valued at $2,000,000, in trust for creditors who claimed $16,000,000. Attorneys said Insull's life insurance also had been converted for the benefit of those he owed. The will, also drawn on June 14, 1932, left what little money Insull had to his wife, Margaret.

Court Battle Seen Back of Slap at George

Senator Reported Platform Committee Ruled Out All 'Short-Cuts.'

President Roosevelt's attempt in Barnesville, Ga., yesterday to read Senator George out of the Senate, and even out of the Democratic Party as reconstituted under the New Deal, was interpreted here as more than mere renewal of the "purge" of Democratic Senators with anti-Administration records.

At once it recalled the differences existing between the two groups since the early days of the fight over the President's bill to enlarge the Supreme Court when Senator George accused the President of virtual disloyalty to the men who wrote the Democratic Party platform of 1936. No perfunctory professions of friendship such as were simulated on the platform at Barnesville could cover the bitterness definitely engendered as the result of the telling blows struck by Senator George at the very outset of the court bill battle.

Platform Recalled.

As early as February 28, 1937, when the Senate and the country were still wondering at the court reorganization proposal, Senator George in a radio address recalled the effort of the platform committee at Philadelphia in 1936 to cope with the court issue as the result of invalidation of New Deal laws.

"At the Democratic convention last June," said Senator George, "those of us who served on the platform committee of the party with the approval of the President pledged, by exclusion, against short

Berlin Plane Ends 1st Nonstop Flight Westward to New York

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 11.—Four German fliers, who dined last night in Berlin, dropped in on New York this afternoon, completing in 25 hours the first flight between the two cities.

Over 3,942 miles of land and water their 24-passenger Focke-Wulf transport flew to demonstrate, it was explained, the feasibility of air service between Germany and America.

The flight was under way hours before it came to the public's notice.

By one of aviation's pioneers, Al Williams, the feat was described as "one of the most significant developments in modern flying." He stressed that Alfred Henke, the skipper, and his crew of three had made the trip in a land plane, not a seaplane or flying boat.

A scheduled immediate return trip was postponed because of minor trouble with the cowling and hydraulic propeller brake on the inboard starboard motor. Oil poured from the propeller mounting, and the top of the cowling was loosened by vibration.

Henke said the motor trouble was minor and he hoped to get away on the easier return trip, with tail winds speeding his plane homeward in a couple of days.

Deutsche Lufthansa, the German airline firm said Henke brought the 19-ton plane over merely to demonstrate the ease with which the flight could be made. The ma-

Roosevelt Son Calls Article 'Miserable Lie'

James, in Interview, Says Figures on Income Are Inaccurate.

By the United Press.

New York, Aug. 11.—With such words as "liar" and "miserable lie," James Roosevelt, the President's eldest son and secretary, tonight replied to a recent Saturday Evening Post article which estimated his earnings in the insurance business as somewhere between $250,000 and $2,000,000 a year, and intimated that this income resulted from his close connection with the Administration.

In an interview granted to Collier's magazine and released to the press, Roosevelt made public his income tax statements of the last five years, disclosing that his income in that time had ranged between $21,714.31 (made in 1933) to $49,167.37 (in 1934). Recently he has been employed as his father's secretary at a salary of $10,000 a year."

"A Miserable Lie."

"Since I have been my father's secretary," the interview, first of two articles, quoted Roosevelt, "since I have been in Washington, I have not solicited nor attempted to solicit—no, and I haven't accepted—a single dollar of insurance from anyone, and time, anywhere. Anything to the contrary is a miserable lie."

Roosevelt admitted that he "got into places I never would have if I wasn't the son of the President."

"But son or no son," he added, "I got tossed out a lot, too. Prospects don't wilt just because you're the son of the President."

He named the North American Corporation, Paramount Pictures, Stone & Webster, and Ford Motor Co. as concerns he was unable to sell, partly because other agents underbid him.

Roosevelt said he did not want to be "naive" or "to seem falsely modest."

Success Troublesome.

"Perhaps it's so that my name—the prestige of my father—helped me. Certainly father gave me no direct aid. I had never asked him to speak for me. And anybody who says or suggests that he would have aided me in any questionable way, had I asked him to, is, of course, a liar—a rather cowardly liar whom I'd like personally but briefly to meet."

"Being the son of the President," he said, "they'd have been calling me a crook no matter what business I had entered, provided, of course, that I had been successful. If I had graduated from Boston University Law School (which I attended for a time) and had practiced law privately or in the Government service—well, use your imagination. If I had opened a neat little corner grocery store and was making anything above the rent they'd have been saying that relief money would have to be spent in my store, or else.

"My trouble seems to be a mixture of being the son of the President and not failing in business."

Income Tax Returns.

Roosevelt's income tax returns showed that in five years he has made as follows:

1933, $21,714.31; 1934, $49,167.37; 1935, $33,593.37; 1936, $44,668.60; 1937, $23,834.38.

The income was from miscellaneous sources, he explained, and did not altogether depend upon insurance selling.

Roosevelt said the sharp decline in his income from 1936 to 1937 was the result of his taking the job as secretary to his father in Washington.

Because the job would take his full time "and because we didn't want it said that the President's secretary was an insurance solicitor on the side (not that they aren't saying it, damn it)," Roosevelt continued, he resigned from the insurance firm of Roosevelt & Sargent, Boston.

There remained on the firm's books, he said, business that would "continue to fetch in yearly income."

"Darned Small Saving."

"I had helped place that business on the books," he said. "So John Sargent and I agreed that I should resign as an officer and director of the corporation and that thereafter the income he and I had enjoyed as salaries and bonuses should be paid to us as dividends. And we always split the net profit—carry nothing over.

"That sounded fine until our lawyers showed us that the laws of Massachusetts consider dividends of any kind to be unearned income and taxed such income at a far higher rate than straight salary . . . My lawyer assured me that it was perfectly proper to give my wife irrevocably—irrevocably, mind—no trick Indian giving or anything like that—to give her irrevocably one-half of my one-half interest in the Roosevelt & Sargent Corporation, which would reduce my State tax and by a very small sum my Federal income tax, too . . . It was a darned small saving . . .

"My salary as the President's secretary is $10,000 a year. I have an income of something like $380 (a year) from a trust fund father created for us children. That, plus what I get in dividends from the firm of Roosevelt & Sargent—that's my income."

As an example of how his firm, despite the prestige of the Roosevelt name, had been unable to sell insurance in some instances, Roosevelt told of his attempt to "land a liability contract with Paramount Pictures."

"Naturally," he said, "We pulled all the wires we could find and bid $340,000. But the Employers Liability Co. made a direct bid, eliminating brokers, through their general manager in New York—Charles D. Hilles, the Republican National Committeeman, his bid was $327,000. And he got it."

Roosevelt declare that "anybody writing or shooting propaganda about me was and is welcome to my records."

"I should have been glad to have given all this to any accredited writer," he said. ". . . and I would have been very glad to have given him my income tax returns. Too bad. Too bad. Who wouldn't hate to be smeared? Who doesn't? I suppose, though, that I hate most having the President smeared through me. Snide work . . ."

Alva Johnston Replies.

New York, Aug. 11 (AP).—Alva Johnston, who wrote the recent Saturday Evening Post article on James, Roosevelt's business activities, tonight issued a statement which follows in part:

"The statement of James Roosevelt is a plea in practically every respect except as to size of his income. In that respect he is not doing badly.

"His figures indicate that his firm has obtained more than half a million dollars in commissions from great corporations which, because of their relations to the government, are especially subject to political pressure.

"His figures show that his net income would have been more than $60,000 last year except that he split it for the purpose, as he admits, of avoiding higher income-tax brackets.

"His statement shows that his business boomed when he went into the White House as secretary to the President. His firm's gross income is reported at $108,000 in 1936. It jumped to $128,000 in 1937, his first year as secretary to the President."

Johnston also said Roosevelt's firm in 1937 sold a policy to a large publishing house which during 1937 got a stock issue through SEC.

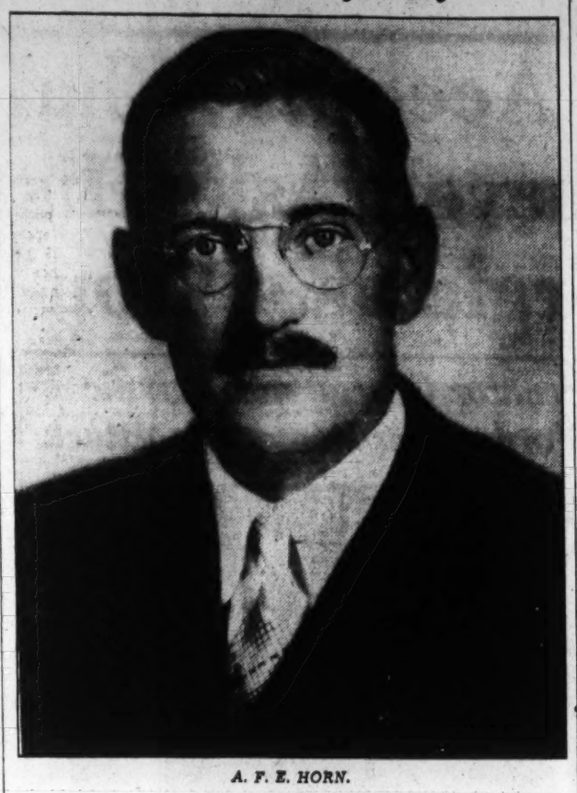
Horn, Leader of Both, Welds Tie Between Rotary, Boys Club



A. F. E. HORN.

Service Group's Many-Sided Program for District Welfare Now Points Mainly to Work With Juvenile Society.

By Christine Sadler

A many-sided program built around four basic interests keep 225 members of the 26-year-old Rotary Club of Washington busy in community and welfare activities. Although the club's plan is to sponsor but one major project at a time, it allies itself with the work of established agencies in many fields of community endeavor and therby serves the District on many fronts.

Boys' clubs are a special interest of the local organization at this time, with efforts centered on negotiations for a new site for the Georgetown Boys Club. This work was sponsored by the Rotarians in 1931 and continued under their direct sponsorship until 1934, when the Community Chest took it over. Camps for boys have received Rotarian support for many years. Land for Reeder Camp, used by the Boys Club of Washington, was given by a Rotary member and several cabins and camp scholarships there have been provided by the organization.

A. F. E. Horn, new Rotary president, is also vice president of the Boys Club of Washington.

One of the unusual community services furnished by Rotary is the 35-passenger bus which it keeps at the disposal of Community Chest agencies. Last year a total of 20,000 passengers were hauled in it. Most of the "trade" for the bus comes from neighborhood houses, hospitals, homes for the aged and from groups of children who are conveyed to swimming pools scattered in different parts of the District.

Some of the most effective work of the Rotary Club has been done in co-operation with Children's Hospital. Artificial limbs, braces, X-ray equipment and an electric cardiograph are among the "services" rendered there. Year before last, the club extended its health work by sponsoring an orthoptic clinic at which many youngsters had their eyes straightened.

Lead Internationally.

Due to their location in the National Capital, Washington Rotarians are in a position to assume leadership in the club's international good-will program. Each third year a diplomatic luncheon is sponsored. As part of the twenty-fifth anniversary celebration last year an Institute of International Understanding was sponsored at Memorial Continental Hall, with Pan-Americanism as the theme.

The first Rotary Club was established in 1905. Now there are 4,714 of them scattered in more than 70 countries of the world. Among the founders and moving spirits of the Washington organization still active today are George Harris, D. J. Callahan and Edward C. Graham. Thomas L. Egan is vice president of the club; Leo C. May, secretary, and Marcy L. Sperry, treasurer.

Horn was secretary of the group from 1929 through 1931, and last year served as vice president. He has been a Rotarian since 1927. He's a native of Delaware, came to Washington following the World War in 1919, and is manager of the Washington office of General Electric. He is on the budget committee of the Community Chest and a past president of the Electric Institute of Washington. He's married and the father of four children.

PWA Declares Dam Not Guilty In Texas Flood

'Man-Made' Inundation of Propaganda Charged to Old Dealers.

The PWA, conceding that "better preparations should have been made for emergency operations," yesterday denied charges that the PWA-financed Buchanan dam on the Colorado River had contributed to the recent disastrous floods in Texas.

Operation of the dam actually reduced the flood by 1 foot, said a report by Harry W. Bashore, of the Bureau of Reclamation, who was sent to the scene by the PWA to study complaints by Texans who suffered heavy losses. He contended that "it is doubtful if any careful forethought would have had much effect in reducing the damages caused by a flood having a peak flow and volume as great as that of July, 1938."

Whereas some farmers had charged the inundation was a "man-made flood," a PWA statement yesterday declared there had been a "man-made flood of propaganda" by critics of the Administration's public power policy as a result of the overflow.

Flood Inevitable.

Bashore's report says the flood stage at which damage begins on the Lower Colorado at Austin is 21 feet, while the July flood reached a maximum of 32 feet.

If the Buchanan dam gates had been opened two days earlier it would have reduced the flood depth by 2 feet, he declared, and if the reservoir had been emptied to the floor of the lowest battery of spillway gates the flood level at Austin would have been reduced by 3 feet, still leaving an 8-foot flood.

Acknowledgment that the dam was designed to produce power rather than control floods was seen in the PWA release.

"Buchanan dam is the property of, and is operated by, the Lower Colorado River Authority of Texas, a public body which was formed by the people of Texas to produce public power," said Howard A. Gray, assistant PWA administrator, in the statement. "Because it received financial aid from the PWA, the individuals and organizations opposed to public power immediately let loose a complete distortion of facts in an attempt to discredit Federal participation in aiding public power."

Blasts Utilities.

"I wonder," he added, "if the propaganda would have been as loud if the dam had been completed and operated by the private utilities as they planned and started it—for the production of power for private profit? In that case the flood at Austin probably would have been 33 feet instead of 32. Printed reports indicate that there have been seven floods on the Colorado River in three years, but this is the first one to be blamed on PWA instead of the rainfall."

Texas farmers have charged that operation of the dam as a flood control agency, rather than as a power project, would have lessened the damaged suffered. They held that the dam was kept full of water, for production of power, instead of being emptied when warning of the flood first came, so that the reservoir could be used to hold back some of the flood.

A committee of the Texas legislature is conducting its own investigation of the charges.

The Gallup Poll:

Many Voters Are Hostile Toward Labor Board; Believe It Unfair.

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Aug. 11.—The criticism leveled at the National Labor Relations Board, including Gov. Kraschel's refusal to permit hearings in the recent Maytag strike and William Green's charge last week that the Board's decisions are "terrifically awful," raises three important questions as to the public attitude toward the N. L. R.B.: Do Americans have definite views on the Labor Board, do they think it discriminates against employers, and do they feel it is more partial to one labor union than to another?

GALLUP.

In a national cross-section survey just completed the Institute has found that:

(1) The public, particularly voters in the lower income class, is not well acquainted with the activities of the Labor Board, and (2) those persons who are familair with its work have an unfavorable impression of the Board, the majority saying that its decisions are unfair to employers and biased in favor of the C. I. O.

These results, indicating a combination of apathy and opposition, suggest that the Board faces an uphill climb in winning the public's confidence and backing. However, even its critics generally admit that the Board's task of dealing with rowdy industrial conflicts and jurisdictional fights between unions has been difficult from the start.

Several Questions Asked.

One person in every three in the Institute survey answered affirmatively the question, "Have you an opinion on the National Labor Relations Board?" More persons in the upper income class had opinions than in the middle and lower group. All who said they had an opinion on the Board were next asked:

"In your opinion, have its decisions been fair to employers?"
The vote was:

|---|---|
| Yes | 41% |
| No | 59% |

The next question was: "As between the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L., do you think the Board's decisions have been partial to one union more than the other? If so, which union?"

Nearly seven in the every ten said they thought the Board was partial to one union. As to which union, the vote was:

|---|---|
| Partial to C. I. O. | 92% |

A preliminary study by the Labor Board in the 50 cases where there has been contention between craft and industrial units shows that in two-thirds the Board has adopted the contention of the A. F. of L. and in one-third the contention of the C. I. O. But present indications are that the Board's case in this respect has not been effectively "sold" to the public.

Attitude on Wagner Act.

The public's attitude toward the Wagner Labor Act, which the Board administers, was also measured by the Institute in a recent cross-section survey. This study revealed that a large body of voters—nearly one-half—had not formed an opinion one way or another about the Act, and that among the other half who did have an opinion sentiment for revising or repealing the act outweighed sentiment for leaving it unchanged. The actual vote was as follows:

"Do you think the Wagner Labor Act should be revised, repealed or left unchanged?"

|---|---|
| Revise | 43% |
| Repeal | 19% |
| Leave Unchanged | 38% |

Farley Won't Talk On Running for President in 1940

Mackinac Island, Mich., Aug. 11 (AP).—Postmaster General James A. Farley parried questions concerning his own Presidential prospects for 1940 with the remark today that "anybody who indicates his candidacy for the Presidency before Roosevelt makes up his mind whether to run again ought to have his head examined."

"And he's just as popular as he ever was," said the Democratic national chairman, who is returning from a cross-country swing.

May to Continue Fight for Airport

The fight to enlarge Washington Airport will be continued in the next session of Congress, Andrew J. May, chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee, said yesterday.

Explaining that the "place for Washington's airport is where it is now," he said he supported the Camp Springs site last spring because he thought it the best alternative.

"I am going to put this airport bill through at the next session of Congress, although it may get a veto," May declared. "I am going to take that land from the Department of Agriculture if possible. They may as well get ready to turn that hayfield back to the public."

Central 'Y' Boys Start Gold Fish Hunt Tomorrow

Boys of the Central Y. M. C. A. are going fishing tomorrow—but it's gold fish they're after and they'll have to catch them with their bare hands in the club's swimming pool.

The "gold fish chase" will be the first of a series of events scheduled for successive Saturday afternoons through September 2. More than 100 youngsters are expected to participate in the fish catching contest. The boy to catch the most gold fish—there will be 38 in the pool—will be permitted to keep them and a bowl will be provided.

Corrigan Flies To N. Y. to Fix His $900 Plane

Transatlantic Aviator Lets It Be Known He May Work as Co-Pilot.

Douglas Corrigan, a hero who promises to wear well, flew away to New York yesterday to get the 9-year-old, $900 "crate" that carried him to Dublin.

Before he can take it aloft again, however, Corrigan will have to remove one of the auxiliary gasoline tanks that he stacked up before the windshield, blocking his vision.

Denis Mulligan, director of the Bureau of Air Commerce, who took a strong fancy to "The Kid," sent Howard Rough, assistant director, to New York to inspect the plane and lay down the conditions for restoring a license for its operation.

Plans Tour Soon.

In the next few days Corrigan plans to start on a tour of the country, probably under the auspices of the Boy Scouts.

"You can be a first-class instrumentality in awakening interest in private flying," Mulligan told him. "There are 21,000 boys and girls learning to fly today, and you can set them a shining example of safe and sane flying. And I know that you will."

The truth is that Corrigan, despite all his blarney, has a horror that some youngster, inspired by his own daring flight, will jump into an ill-equipped plane and try to do something foolish.

Offered a Million.

What about Corrigan's future? A close friend revealed yesterday that the New York-to-Dublin flier had been offered contracts totaling $1,000,000.

"I've been offered a job as a copilot with the American Air Lines, and I'm seriously considering taking it," he told reporters yesterday.

"Copilot?" an interviewer said. "Aren't you good enough to be a pilot?"

"Well, I'm not so hot, you know," Corrigan said. "Maybe after I get a couple of years' experience as a copilot, I might learn to be a pretty good pilot."

Corrigan had breakfast yesterday at the Carlton with Edward J. Noble, chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Authority; Oswald Ryan and Harlee Branch, members of the CAA; William Douglas, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission; Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson and Robert Malone.

Corrigan, who ordinarily skips breakfast, took only a glass of orange juice. He left Washington as he arrived, his head stuck out of the pilot's window and wreathed in a cat-that-got-the-canary smile.

Back to His Plane.

New York, Aug. 11 (AP).—Alone at last, with the roar of welcoming behind him, Douglas Corrigan went back to his first love today—tinkering with his $900 transatlantic flying machine.

A crowd of autograph seekers delayed him for a while, but Corrigan, clearly impatient, slipped away to his plane's hangers donned an old pair of oil-soaked overalls and began checking over the 9-year-old craft.

"I'm going up in her as soon as I get her ready," he said eagerly. "The sooner, the better."

Wooer Jilts Girl To Mary Mother He Once Courted

Milan, Italy, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—Guglielmo Defendenti, 42, met and fell in love with Laura Rapollo, 20. He proposed and Laura said he would have to ask her mother.

His intended mother-in-law turned out to be his former mistress, whom he had not seen since the war.

Guglielmo and Laura broke off their engagement today. He's going to marry the mother.

Slater Again Held On Lottery Charge

For the second time in less than a month, John M. (Sport) Slater, 34, of 1311 M street northwest, yesterday was charged with violating the lottery law.

Out on bond and under indictment, Slater was arrested in the 1100 block Fourteenth street northwest. The previous charge was placed against him July 25.

Sergt. George C. Deyoe said Slater had a quantity of numbers slips in his possession when arrested.

Collapse of 2d Building Here Endangers Ten

Debris Still Is Hampering Inquiry on Collapse of Box Factory.

Collapse of a second building in two days yesterday endangered the lives of ten persons. The rear of a building caved in at 213 Tennessee avenue northeast when, it is believed, the foundations were weakened through the construction of a rear basement.

Two bricklayers and two carpenters escaped injuries from falling timbers.

George Saunders, colored, owner of the house; his daughter and four grandchildren were in the front when the collapse occured.

District building inspectors said they would investigate the crash this morning.

Investigating Another Crash.

Meanwhile, inspectors were still hampered by the debris of the collapse Wednesday of part of the two upper floors of the Specialty Paper Box Factory.

Acting Building Inspector James B. Daly said yesterday it was impossible to determine the cause of the collapse. He did state, however, it apparently was due to a defective central support.

The employes of the factory, 228 First street northwest, were in near-panic when the central support gave way, endangering the lives of som 50 employes.

Daly doubted that termites in the beams and uprights had weakened the supports of the building, since the only evidence of rotted wood was in the ceiling.

John Oehman, Building Inspector, is expected to ask for more inspectors when he sends his budget estimates to the District Commissioners. His present staff is 15, curtailed several years ago from 24. Spokesmen for the office believed the lack of inspectors had affected the inspectors of new buildings.

The Fire Department revealed that the factory's owners had been ordered to repair two of the building's three fire escapes. Edward J. Fay, manager of the firm, said workmen were already busy with the improvements.

Carroll's Defense Rests Case After a Weight-Lifting Show

Puny Boy Shows He Can Carry Load Dwyer Said He Couldn't; Extortion Plot Charged to Deputy in Murder Trial.

By the United Press.

South Paris, Me., Aug. 11.—The defense rested today after presenting 27 witnesses in two days in an effort to acquit former Deputy Sheriff Francis M. Carroll of the murder of a country doctor.

Tsimony was completed at 4:39 p. m. with a spectacular courtroom demonstration to show that Carroll's accuser 19-year-old Paul (Buddy) Dwyer, was physically able to carry the 150-pound murder victim from the second floor of his home to a waiting automobile.

Dwyer originally confessed the murder of Dr. James G. Littlefield but, after accepting a life sentence, named Carroll as the "real slayer" and charged that the deposed officer intimidated him into "taking the rap."

Boy, 16, Does Trick.

Defense Counsel Clyde R. Chapman introduced a 101-pound boy in an effort to blast the State's contention that Dwyer could not have carried the slain doctor from his home.

As spectators in the crowded courtroom stood on tiptoe, 16-year-old Philip Soucier, jr., thrice picked up a 150-pound witness and carried him 20 feet to a window and back to the witness stand.

Soucier stripped to the waist at the direction of Chapman and faced the jury to show his frail physique. Only last week the 120-pound Dwyer similarly bared his torso as proof that he was unable to lift a heavy body.

Says He Never Practiced.

Special prosecutor Ralph M. Ingalls thundered, coaxed and even pleaded with Soucier to disclose who taught him the "firemen's hold," but the youth steadfastly declared he had no tutor, but merely saw the hold three or four years ago at a beach. He never had practiced it, he said.

With Soucier's testimony, Chapman rested his case and court adjourned until tomorrow, when rebuttal testimony will be heard.

The biggest crowd of the trial, now in its ninth day, converged on the old, red-brick courthouse today. The courtroom was filled at 6:20 a. m. (Eastern daylight time), over three hours before the scheduled opening of the trial.

Carroll's pretty 18-year-old daughter Barbara, Dwyer's former sweetheart wore a Nile green dress and sat with her mother in the spectators' section. It had been expected that Barbara would testify in her father's defense, but she was not called.

The day's testimony was featured by disclosure that not only has Dwyer accused Carroll of slaying Dr. Littlefield, but he also has charged that the deposed deputy sheriff attempted to extort $50,000 from his former employer, George R. Morton, president and manager of the South Paris Manufacturing Co.

Attorney General Franz U. Burkett, called as a defense witness, testified that Dwyer admitted typing the extortion letter, but said he did so only when Carroll threatened his life.

Another defense witness, Adrian A. Cote, Lewiston attorney and fingerprint expert, testified that he did not find any of Carroll's fingerprints at the Dwyer home, where Dr. Littlefield was slain last October 13.

Docket Shows Speeders Lead Traffic Culprits

Auto Cases in Police Court Increase for Year as Others Decline.

Thirty-five per cent of all traffic cases heard in Police Court during the last fiscal year were attributed to speeding motorists, it was reported yesterday to Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal.

All told, 35,513 cases were prosecuted, of which 19,491 were speed cases. This figure was an 18 per cent increase over the number of similar cases presented during the previous fiscal year, the report stated.

Persons charged with intoxication continued to lead the offenders brought before the District branch of the Police Court. Of 19,907 persons tried in this branch, 13,240, or 61 per cent of the total were charged with intoxication. This figure was only 355 under the number prosecuted during the 1937 fiscal year.

20,000 Parked Illegally.

In the traffic branch of the court approximately 20,000 parking violations were heard during the last fiscal year. Other charges were: No permit, 1,195 cases; expired permit, 159 cases; loaning permit, 41 cases; suspended permit, 34; revoked permit, 48; attempt to obtain permit by misrepresentation, 20; obtaining permit by misrepresentation, 64.

One hundred and eighty-five persons were prosecuted for leaving the scene of an accident after collision; 346, driving while drunk; bad brakes, 339; reckless driving, 507; passing street car, 62; right of way, 529; tags by misrepresentation, 7, and tampering, 5.

Decreases Shown.

For the fiscal year ended June 30, 1937, a total of 34,085 traffic cases were heard.

Most of the cases heard in the District branch of the court showed small decreases in number for the fiscal year ended June 30, as compared with the previous fiscal year.

Washington Banks Challenge Will of Victim of Murder

Phoenix, Ariz., Aug. 11 (AP).—A contest over the $1,000,000 estate of Marcus Jay Lawrence, former Washington, D. C., resident slain in Prescott, Ariz., reached the Arizona Supreme Court today.

Appointment of the Phoenix Savings Bank & Trust Co. as administrator is challenged by the American Security & Trust Co., Washington, D. C.; Valley National Bank of Phoenix; Mrs. Carrie J. Lawrence, mother of Lawrence, and Paul T. Lawrence, Cleveland Heights, Ohio, a half brother.

Defendants are the Phoenix Savings Bank & Trust Co. and Mrs. Jane Stout Lawrence, the widow, who had filed divorce proceedings.

Mrs. Lawrence valued her husband's Arizona holdings at $175,000 and a Washington trust fund at $800,000. Lawrence's will left her the minimum under Arizona law, half the community property.

Lawrence was killed by Ernesto Lira, Prescott sportsman, now serving 30 to 40 years' imprisonment for second degree murder.

Ambulance Drivers Not Privileged, Judge Rules

Lynchburg, Va., Aug. 11 (AP).—In what may be a precedent-setting case, Municipal Court Judge J. P. McCarron ruled today that private ambulances are not privileged by law to speed, run under red lights and ignore arterial streets. Accordingly he fined W. F. Dorsey, attache of a mortuary, $50 for reckless driving. Defense Attorney Paul H. Coleman and Dorsey would appeal.

Franco Troops Batter Gateway To Mine Area

24 Miles From Almaden; Insurgents Tighten Ring Around Ebro Force.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, France, Aug. 11.—Insurgent armies in southwest Spain drove today to within range of Cabeza del Buey, key to the rich government-held Almaden mercury mines.

A pitched battle was reported in progress around the town, 24 miles west of Almaden. It is the last important position between the insurgents' Estremadura front and Almaden.

On the northeastern Ebro front the insurgents advanced in the Pandols Mountains, tightening their hold around government positions in the vicinity of Gandesa.

Central Front Quiet.

Persistent quiet on the central front, the Teruel-Sagunto road to government Valencia, indicated the government had relieved pressure northwest of Valencia with the July 25 Ebro River offensive and the Segre River drive of three days ago.

The insurgents reported that the Segre River thrust, about 80 miles from Barcelona, had been crushed and that government gains in the Ebro Valley facing Gandesa were being steadily liquidated.

The government, however, insisted the Barcelona "people's army" was holding its ground in northeastern Spain and even progressing slightly.

11,000 Clerics Held Slain.

New York, Aug. 11 (AP).—The slaying of at least 11,000 clerics was charged against Spanish government forces today by the Right Rev. Karl Joseph Alter, Bishop of Toledo, Ohio.

Bishop Alter, who returned from the Eucharistic Congress at Budapest aboard the Italian liner Saturnia, said he had spent four weeks behind the lines of Gen. Franco studying conditions among the civilian population.

In the province of Hesca, he said, he found only four churches left out of 400 that stood before the civil war began.

Britain Presses Duce, Franco on Volunteer Issue

By the Associated Press.

London, Aug. 11.—Great Britain has put discreet pressure on Premier Mussolini and Gen. Franco to hasten withdrawal of foreign fighters from Spain's civil war.

Premier Chamberlain's purpose is to aid the French government in an embarrassing situation and further the British plan for isolating the civil war.

With French Premier Daladier under leftist attack for stopping trans-Pyrenees shipments of arms to government Spain, the British government made these two moves:

A suggestion to the Italian premier that reports Italy was sending more troops and material to insurgent Spain were prejudicial to a settlement in Spain.

Advice to Franco that his explanation of delay in accepting the British plan for withdrawal of foreign soldiers was "unsatisfactory." Franco had said "the intricate nature" of the plan caused the delay.

These two moves appeared to put Franco on the spot. If he accepts the British plan he stands to lose valuable help in a critical phase of the war. If he turns it down there is every possibility the French frontier will be opened to a flow of arms to be used against the insurgents.

There was hope in London, however, that the winter stalemate might make it possible to effect a truce.

New Trade Treaty With Ecuador Cuts Panama Hat Duty

By the Associated Press.

The State Department disclosed last night that a new trade agreement with Ecuador halves the American duty on "Panama" hats, which come largely from the South American country.

In return, Ecuadorian tariffs were lowered on American automobiles, flour, lard and lubricants, among other products.

The "Panama" hat duty was reduced from 25 to 12½ per cent. Last year the United States imported $573,821 worth of unfinished headgear made from Ecuador's corludovica palmata.

The reductions on American passenger automobiles ranged from 25 to 50 per cent.

of two Russians and two Japanese is to contend with the issue. Shigemitsu promised to consult his government on one important factor concerning the basis for working out the frontier line—the Russian demand that the Russo-Chinese treaty of 1886 and its appended maps be recognized as authoritative in determining the boundary.

The Japanese have insisted that other data in their possession should be used in marking the line because they had no knowledge of the 1886 treaty's provisions and thus could not accept it.

Tokyo, Aug. 11 (AP).—Japanese and Russian troops kept a tense peace tonight, separated by only a few hundred yards of shell-torn no-man's land on the Manchukuo-Siberia border.

Scarcely 75 yards divided them at one point.

The Japanese war office said firing ceased in accord with the Japanese-Soviet truce.

A feeling of general relief was apparent throughout Tokyo, already deeply involved in the second year of an undeclared war in China.

Domei (Japanese news agency) dispatches from Hsingking, Manchukuo, declared "border patrol authorities believe a strict watch on Soviet troop movements must be maintained as a precaution against possible armed clashes resulting in violation of the agreement."

Logan Sees Barkley Boomed for President

By the Associated Press.

Senator Logan (Democrat) of Kentucky, predicted yesterday that Kentucky delegates to the 1940 Democratic convention would boost Senator Barkley for the Presidential nomination. He added that he had no knowledge of whether Barkley would desire the nomination.

He reiterated his opinion that the President would not seek a third term, but said, "if the President should be nominated, he would be elected."

3 'Flying Fortresses' Put In at Miami Field

Miami, Fla., Aug. 11 (AP).—Three Army "flying fortress" bombers returning from Bogota, Colombia, landed here at 2:50 p. m. today after a nonstop flight from the Panama Canal Zone. The planes went to Bogota for the inauguration of President Santos.

Act of Congress Required for U. S. To Accept Farm

Pity the Government. It can't accept a gift without an act of Congress.

Now an Illinois couple wants to give the Government a 120-acre farm. "It is our wish to have this farm turned over to the Government after our death for an experimental farm or for anything which the Government would appoint," A. C. Hehrke, of Chicago, wrote the Federal Land Office.

Agriculture Department officials began studying the methods of acceptance, but feared that an act of Congress might be required.

guerrilla territory in Hopeh Province and spent weeks traveling with a mounted detachment of 1,500 men, eating their food, sleeping on their hard straw mats and watching their maneuvers.

The usual guerrillas are in their early 20s, lean and muscular from years of farm work. Their uniforms are made from local cotton by patient country women on old-fashioned looms. Their shoes and socks are homemade.

They eat only corn mush twice a day, except for after-victory celebrations in which townsmen roast a few pigs for the local garrisons. Meat is a rare treat.

Japanese Pop Seized.

Much of their equipment and what luxuries they have are usually the fruits of war. This writer saw a company of troops at one headquarters, lying in the shade of a bamboo grove and drinking Japanese soda pop. They had seized more than 100 cases of the "made in Osaka" beverage.

Since the guerrillas operate in their native areas the total consumption of food is not increased. The men return to the fields for the cultivation and harvesting of crops, then off to fight again. They are China's Minute Men.

chine carried extra fuel tanks and no pay load. It had three hours of fuel left.

Henke's crew consisted of Rudolf von Moreau, co-pilot; Paul Dierberg, flight engineer, and Fritz Kober, radio operator.

Asked if anyone slept en route, Henke replied, "No, it was too interesting to sleep."

The transport is not unlike the American-manufactured Douglas "DC-3" 21-passenger plane in appearance, except that it employs four gasoline motors instead of two, sunk in wing nacelles. It might best be described as a cross between the Douglas and the Boeing four-motored "flying fortress."

Not quite so well streamlined as American transports, the Focke-Wulf is 78 feet long and has a wingspread of 108 feet. The top of the cabin is 24 feet above the ground.

Berlin, Aug. 11 (AP).—There was jubilation in Germany tonight over successful completion of the first German East-West nonstop flight across the Atlantic by the transport monoplane Brandenburg.

Taxes Will Break New Deal's Back, Glenn Frank Says

Kirksville, Mo., Aug. 11 (AP).—A prediction that the New Deal's back would be broken by the crush of increasingly heavier taxes was coupled today by Dr. Glenn Frank with an appeal to his own Republican Party to be "practical in its policy as well as human in its outlook."

"For all its talk about the abundant life," said the chairman of the National Republican Program Committee, "the present Administration has swallowed whole a program for the control of production, for the creation of scarcity and the boosting of prices, which has always been the policy of the least enlightened of our private economic leadership.

"When this program fails, as it is bound to fail, the present Administration has no answer save to set the stage for heavier and heavier taxation. . . ."

Bombers Inflict 400 Casualties In Wuhan Cities

3 U. S. Missions Damaged in Raid on Last China Industrial Center.

By the Associated Press.

Hankow, China, Aug. 11.—Japanese air raiders today exacted a heavy toll of dead and injured in a swift attack on the industrial heart of China—the Wuhan tri-cities.

Unofficial estimates said 400 persons were killed or injured.

Three United States Mission properties were badly damaged when 27 Japanese planes, heavily loaded, dropped their cargoes on Hanyang and Wuchang at the confluence of the Han and Yangtze rivers.

Only one of the three cities, Hankow, the provisional capital, escaped the attack on the last great central industrial region remaining under Chinese control.

Boone University and St. Hilda's School for Girls, both operated by the American Church (Episcopal) Mission, were hard hit. A direct strike demolished the Boone Boy Scouts' Building, where a number of Chinese had taken refuge.

Ten bombs were dropped on the compound of a refuge sheltering the aged and disabled in an eastern suburb of Canton, but the inmates fled in time to escape death. Only three were wounded seriously.

Shanghai, Aug. 11 (AP).—A Japanese army estimated as 60,000 strong today opened an offensive designed to crack the Chinese lines defending Nanchang, Gen. Chiang's greatest air base.

Nanchang, about 90 miles south of the Yangtze River, stands as a threat to the left flank of the Japanese drive up-river toward Hankow.

Valentine Allows 'Jitter Clinic' for His Morbid Police

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Aug. 11.—Police Commissioner Valentine gave public approval today to the "jitter clinic" established by the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association to curb the suicide rate. He denied the existence of "a wave of suicides" among policemen, however, and said the motives for self-extermination among patrolmen were identical to those in civilian life.

The "jitter clinic," existence of which became known today, has been operating for nearly six months.

Citizens by Error Ask New Papers

Mays Landing, N. J., Aug. 11 (AP).—Discovering they still were German aliens 32 years after they received final American citizenship papers, four men renewed applications for citizenship today.

They were among 90 persons granted final papers on October 2, 1906, by the Atlantic County Common Pleas Court which acted without knowledge of a Federal law, effective three days previous, which took from that court the right to grant citizenship.

The error was discovered when Joseph Weisbecker, applying for an old-age pension, discovered he was not a citizen and had to resign his seat on the Egg Harbor City Council, which he had held several years.

Berlin To New York.

At 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon (9 a. m. their time) German editors knew that they could go on a journalistic spree. The 24-passenger airplane Brandenburg had landed safely at New York. It was a magnificent achievement, and would have received pages of publicity here except that transatlantic hops are rapidly becoming commonplace.

The flight is to be hailed as the first successful Berlin-to-New York air crossing. Because of prevailing winds and other meteorological conditions, a westward flight across the North Atlantic is more difficult than one in the opposite direction. Plainly, Teuton flying talents are not limited to lighter-than-air craft. Having been rudely disappointed in their plans to obtain helium from the United States, the Germans have been quick to transfer their interest in transoceanic flying to winged machines.

As all who have followed recent transatlantic air activities realize, the Germans are by no means alone in this interest. In fact, they are but one party to a co-operative effort to outmaneuver Neptune by soaring high above his trident. Although the French have yet to begin, the Germans, British and Americans are combined in a survey of possible transatlantic routes.

The co-operation will extend only insofar as experimental flights are concerned. When and if commercial service becomes feasible, each nationality will be on its own. But, at that, the spectacle of Americans, British, French and Germans working constructively together now makes a compelling contrast with the sorry disunion that rules their relations in other fields.

Green Grows The "Dust Bowl."

Three years ago the "dust bowl" of the Great Plains was a matter of great national concern. Dust from the foot of the Rockies had clouded the skies over Eastern cities 1,500 miles away. It was an ominous sign followed by gloomy statements to the effect that the United States had created a new desert in an area that once had produced fertile crops.

Pictures of abandoned farms and the whitened skeletons of cattle in forbidding desert areas almost convinced the people that the Great Plains had become a man-made wilderness. The outlook appeared grim, especially after the Resettlement Administration began formulating plans for the evacuation of large areas. There seemed to be a widespread demand for the Federal Government to step in and heroically attempt to restore this vast region to a grassy plain.

Probably those exaggerated fears served a useful purpose in centering national attention upon the need of soil conservation. But today the so-called dust bowl is thriving with crops and grass. Lands which appeared to have been ruined beyond reclaim are once more green. Virtually no dust is blowing, for plentiful rains have converted it once more into fruitful soil. An area covered with sand dunes in Texas a year and a half ago, for example, is now producing a crop of corn.

For the most part this changed outlook is a result of a turn in the weather. It is the hope of Weather Bureau experts that the drought cycle has at last been broken and that a period of more abundant rainfall has begun. Whether or not that proves to be the case, however, there are indications that the "dust bowl" may solve its problems without any drastic change in its economy.

Undoubtedly some parts of the Great Plains should never have been plowed. If such areas can be restored to grazing lands, the entire country will profit, for that would reduce agricultural surpluses as well as check soil erosion. Some progress is being made through the Government's purchases of submarginal lands. A more important solution is the enlargement of private holdings so that stock-raising can be made profitable. That, however, is a long-range possibility.

Experts of the Soil Conservation Service are convinced, moreover, that a large percentage of the "dust bowl" can be properly farmed without danger of converting it into a desert. The secret of its process is conservation of water in the soil. That is accomplished through terracing, contour cultivation, strip cropping and similar practices which prevent a sudden run-off when rain falls. Both wind and water erosion is thus minimized. Experiments have shown, also, that the yield of wheat in this region can be roughly estimated by digging a few feet into the soil at planting time and measuring its moisture content. When there is not sufficient water for wheat farmers can plant drought-resisting crops.

Hope that scientific farming in this region will become general is based largely upon the recent creation of conservation districts. Twenty-six States have now passed laws permitting the formation of such co-operative agencies and 66 conservation districts have been formed. It is their function to carry out soil preserving programs with the aid of State and Federal funds and technical advice. By this means farmers are able to combat unfavorable conditions to the best advantage without giving up their lands or even changing their major crops.

Since the dust bowl has frequently been used to support the argument for increasing national control over agriculture, it is especially gratifying to note that an effective solution is being worked out through local agencies aided by the State and Federal governments.

"My Own Party."

It was not superfluous for President Roosevelt to tell the people of Georgia yesterday that they "have a perfect right to choose any candidate" they may wish to represent them. Otherwise his audience at Barnesville might easily have concluded that the marking of their ballots is at the disposal of a single omniscient and omnipotent Fuehrer.

A certain latitude "in details" is still permitted to members of the Democratic Party by its leader. The purge, however, is to be applied if the candidate "in his heart" does not "really believe in the objectives" of the party as it is constituted today. And the person who is to determine not merely the objectives of the party but also the degree of sincerity possessed by any party candidate is Franklin D. Roosevelt and Franklin D. Roosevelt alone.

In the American edition of Hitler's "My Battle," on page 187, the interested student of political evolution will find a very arresting parallel to Mr. Roosevelt's words at Barnesville yesterday. In his ideal state, said Hitler: "Neither Senate nor Chamber will have power to make decisions; they are appointed to work and not to make decisions. Individual members may advise, but never decide. That is the exclusive prerogative of the responsible President for the time being."

Decision, obviously, is also to be "the exclusive prerogative" of President Roosevelt. The first step is to eliminate the opposition. Next comes the regimentation of the party. When that is accomplished definition of what is liberal and what is conservative, of what is progressive and what is reactionary, rests in the hands of the party leader. He has achieved what Mr. Roosevelt rightly refers to as "modern civilization," in the sense that an increasing proportion of modern civilization is under the control of personal dictatorships.

Senator George is a Democrat of the old school, which is to say that he believes in democracy and not in dictatorship. There may be differences of opinion as to his insight, or as to his aggressiveness in behalf of reforms on the value of which he is not satisfied. But Senator George is beyond question upright, honorable, conscientious, sincere, and a Democrat to his backbone. For the President of the United States to call such a man a "reactionary," and in his presence to compare him unfavorably with the politically-minded Senator Barkley, is an incredible personal affront.

His dignified reception of this gross attack reflects the stature of Senator George. And the veiled insults which Mr. Roosevelt so lightly tossed at the man who has represented Georgia in the Senate for 16 years are likely to prove a boomerang in the forthcoming primary. The issue involved, however, is much bigger than that local election. It is whether the President of the United States is, like Hitler, to have as his "exclusive prerogative" the final determination as to who is fit to pass the nation's laws.

In fighting out this issue many a Democratic voter will have to make decisions which will try his soul. For there are excellent men who, seeing only his emphasis on essential reforms, are loyally following the President's leadership. Senator Pope, defeated in the Idaho primaries this week, was one. Congressman Lewis, seeking to unseat Senator Tydings in Maryland next month, is another. Not all the approved New Dealers in Congress are "liberals" of the Barkley type.

But if the Democratic Party is to continue in its old traditions; if it is to be more than a group of stooges and yes-men for a single all-powerful leader—then the fight against the growing tendency toward White House dictation must be fought and won.

"There should," said Mr. Roosevelt yesterday, "be co-operation between members of my own party and myself." To which the answer is a simple question, Since when has the Democratic Party become the personal property of any single man?

Encouraging Developments.

Wednesday's plebiscite in Paraguay bears out in striking fashion the growing will to peace in this hemisphere. The question facing the voters was whether or not the recently concluded Chaco peace pact ought to be ratified. The very fact that the authorities at Asuncion had seen fit to hold such a plebiscite indicates that they were not certain of popular approval for the settlement of the age-old and sanguinary dispute with Bolivia.

It was, in part, this uncertainty which held up the Chaco peace parley for so long. Although the armistice ending the Bolivian-Paraguayan war was concluded in 1935, the peace treaty was not initialed until this year. And of the two parties Paraguay appeared to be more reluctant to agree to a settlement.

It now turns out that nothing which the Paraguayan government has done in a long time is so popular as the Chaco peace treaty. The voters approved it by a 10-to-1 vote. And since, on the very same day, the Bolivian Constitutional Congress ratified the pact it is clear that the same peaceful settlement obtains on the other side of the line as well.

This is a cause for general rejoicing throughout the Americas. At a time when Europe and Asia are rent with wars and rumors of wars, it is encouraging that peace reigns in this hemisphere. And it is a peace which, partly as a result of Mr. Hull's valiant efforts, is steadily being bolstered up by improved economic relations.

At Quito, last Saturday, representatives of the Ecuadorian and United States governments signed a reciprocal trade agreement. It is the eighteenth such agreement to be made and the tenth with a Latin-American nation. Through such and similar measures of economic disarmament and co-operation peace and friendship are surely, if slowly, advanced.

The Russo-Japanese Truce.

After three weeks of uninterrupted fighting along the disputed border dividing Siberia, Korea and Manchuria, the Japanese and Russian governments have agreed to a truce. While both armies remain in the positions they have fortified, hostilities have ceased. A joint commission is to negotiate a definite frontier acceptable to both governments.

This is an encouraging development. The world already has two undeclared wars on its hands. The addition of a third, involving two great powers, would gravely disturb the delicate balance which at present keeps the Spanish and Sino-Japanese conflicts localized. If this balance were upset the resulting catastrophe might easily become world-wide.

Obviously neither Japan nor Russia wants war. Japan has her hands full in China and is in no position to take on an additional major opponent at this time. Russia, on the other hand, would not want a war in Asia even if the situation in Europe were less critical. The two powers have now taken the necessary steps to prevent a dangerous situation from getting out of hand.

It would be a mistake, however, to take too optimistic a view of the present improvement in Russo-Japanese relations. There is as yet no certainty that the proposed border commission will be able to draw a line between Russian, Manchukuoan and Korean territories satisfactory to all parties. And there is a further question of whether the decision of the diplomats will be loyally carried out by the troops on the frontier.

The Kwantung army has for years been a law unto itself. In 1931, for instance, it was this army of occupation in Manchuria, rather than the Tokyo government, which was responsible for the decision to conquer that province. Thus the Japanese foreign office was relegated to the invidious role of apologist for actions it had not ordered and probably did not favor. And the success of the Manchurian adventure obviously did not diminish either the Kwantung army's prestige or its independence.

It remains to be seen whether and for how long the Kwantung army will be satisfied with the Litvinoff-Shigemitsu truce. On the other hand the Soviet Union's Far Eastern army may also find intolerable a state of affairs under which only part of a strategically vital zone is in its hands while the remainder rests in the hands of the Japanese.

It may be an exaggeration to say that the Far Eastern army occupies in the Soviet scheme of things the same position occupied in Japan by the army of occupation in Manchuria. Possibly the former may be more amenable to control by Moscow than the latter is by Tokyo. Yet the fact remains that for years the Soviet government has worked to make its military establishment in Eastern Siberia as self-sufficient as possible. And it has in Gen. Bluecher one of the few Russian commanders whose prestige is so great that probably not even Stalin would be willing to assail it.

However, the Far Eastern army leaders have, for the time being, reasons to be content with the present situation. They have demonstrated to their own and Moscow's satisfaction that they were prepared for a showdown with Japan. And with Japan increasingly bogged down in China, time is on their side.

For the moment, therefore, peace is likely to obtain in the Changkufeng zone and elsewhere along that long, irregular border dividing Russian territory from that under Japan's control. And even the most uncertain peace is better than the most limited of wars. For that reason the conclusion of the Litvinoff-Shigemitsu agreement represents a turn for the better from all viewpoints except that of China's hard-pressed armies.

Oh, the futility of it all! This country spends millions in forest conservation work, and New Yorkers throw 3,600,000 pounds of paper on a returned transatlantic flier.

"The average man needs someone to tell him what to do," says a psychologist. Oh, no, he doesn't—the average man is married.

Undoubtedly general conditions are improving. We haven't heard "Happy Days Are Here Again" for several months.

An editor asks, "What would you do if you lived in China?" We'd move.

Puerto Rican Tourism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Scott Hart's column, "The Federal Diary" for July 19 was easy reading for Puerto Rican eyes. The friendliness and cordiality of the writer indicates that your traveling reporter really enjoyed himself while he was here. I think, too, that he has given a very pleasing picture of Puerto Rico. At least he called attention to some of the charms of San Juan and its people that we like to have talked about.

In commenting upon the belief held in some quarters that Puerto Rico is not ready for tourists he has advanced arguments that should put an end to such opposition. Although it is perfectly true that we have not developed the hotels, night clubs and swanky entertainment characteristic of some of the long established resort sections, such development cannot be expected to rise up in advance of the arrival of the customers. We have everything essential for the development of a resort center, but to wait for an "opportune" time would be to postpone exploitation of climate, topography and tropical loveliness indefinitely.

A very definite start has been made and this is best illustrated by reporting that we entertained 18,000 tourist visitors in the first few months of 1938 in contrast with the 7,000 during the same period of the year before. Travelers have responded to the suggestion that American dollars might just as well be spent in America as abroad.

We count upon the tourist business to assist in solving the unemployment problem. We look upon attracting tourists as becoming an important industry that will give incidental employment to thousands. There will be work for taxi drivers, bell hops, guides and others. But in the background will be well paid artisans manufacturing handicraft articles for the tourist trade. There are many who believe that this industry, if intelligently promoted, will gain a significance second only to the production of sugar cane. I am among those who believe this to be true. Very truly yours,

AGUSTIN RIVERO CHAVES.

In Pullmans?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In view of information received by the writer it appears that the Gallup Poll, so prominently featured by The Post, is New Deal propaganda, or that Gallup polls only beneficiaries of the New Deal and the proletariat.

Two gentlemen of unusual intelligence and powers of observation, who recently have traveled throughout the country, tell me they found people everywhere, on railroad trains, in the hotels and also the papers in the sections visited by them, overwhelmingly opposed to Roosevelt personally and to the New Deal in particular. Their experience certainly doesn't corroborate Dr. Gallup's investigations, at least in so far as the thinking and intelligent people of the country are concerned, which is the class these two gentlemen came principally in contact with.

It is surprising that a paper like The Post would lend itself to such subtle and unfair propaganda, or is The Post being imposed upon?

A Southern President.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Will he run or will he not? that's the question—not whether he can be nominated. That wobbling golden apple, the glamorous, elusive third term is all he has left on the tree. Will the temptation to outstrip all the great of our past prove irresistible? It's the President's own problem.

I think that after 70 years the time is ripe for a President from the South. Every stunting discrimination possible has been laid on her doorstep in Federal appropriations, consular appointments, freight, labor, tariffs, coast facilities—to mention but a few. Patriotic communal co-operation must no longer be ignored. The South contributes a preponderance of the brains in our Congress. Look 'em over. She pays in 12 times as much taxes as she gets in relief while most other States reverse that ratio.

Practically all the South gets from the Government is Congressional patronage. She hardly knows the smell of the pie counter. She deserves a fair dispenser, an impartial almoner. He can only come from a Southern State. The whole country owes her this sort of President just now.

It's either that, or the probable defection of quite a block of the Southern vote.

Power Of The Press!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It was very gratifying to read Mr. Pegler's "Fair Enough" column in the August 5 edition. I believe that much can be done by newspapers to educate the public into seeing the justice of giving Negroes a chance to display their abilities in the Big League ball parks. They can also help to make the public desirous of witnessing such performances.

It is known that newspapers more than any other means can direct people's thoughts. For instance, if papers took the second place "Cleveland Indians" and backed them—pointing out their assets and all the reasons why they thought the team would win the pennant, then all the readers, or a majority of them, would begin to believe that the Indians would win, whether they did or not. If a newspaper supported a politician it could influence quite a number of people, and if all newspapers in the particular city backed this man there would be no doubt that he would be unanimously elected.

I cite this to show the influence a newspaper or newspapers would have if a campaign were put on to carry out Mr. Pegler's suggestion—that Negroes be given a chance to participate in the great national sport of baseball, not merely as spectators, but as major league players. BERNARD F. SEWELL.

Kick Or Balk.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Keep entirely (not halfway) out of foreign wars; remove by amendment the dangerous discretionary fiction of the neutrality act; support the Ludlow war referendum proposal; and see to it that your Congressmen do these things, or else kick them out of office; or else balk and make the old group, who have all the say, go to war too!

Tydings Hits Back.

Efforts to roust around Senator Tyding's political friends in Maryland are not being allowed to pass without protest. The Maryland Senator objects to the dismissal of the Federal housing administrator for his State, and plans an appeal to the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee for action.

Frank R. Kent noted recently that with most of the Federal employes in Maryland owing allegiance to Tydings, the opposition to his renomination is having tough going. Evidently the New Deal also took note of this state of affairs and the ouster, which seems to have been made for purely political reasons, followed.

It looks clumsy from this distance and probably will help Tydings more than it will hurt him.

South's Rural Poverty.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your recent editorial relative to Mr. Hopkins and the attempt to alleviate or end rural poverty leans a long way backwards to the poetic illusions of the discredited Agrarians who used to hang out at Nashville and points south. Those of us who have been face to face with poverty in the South, who have seen share croppers and tenants, talked with them, thought with them, defended them and tried to carry their life of low wages and physical misery before the more fortunate people of America—we cannot much longer be satisfied with a policy of government and public opinion that constantly delays the solving of important social problems. Certainly, it is small comfort to men and women laid low by disease and poverty to learn that "during the next few years more and more attention will doubtless be centered on this problem, for which a number of solutions have already been advanced."

Until private industry and private agriculture work for the good instead of the exploitation of the people, is it not intelligent to believe that many problems of the poor "can be solved by a permanent policy of relief wages supplied by the Federal Government?" It is one thing to sit comfortably in Washington and request a slow and conservative approach to the problems of the underprivileged, and it is another thing entirely to meet these people face to face on their own territory—to see their children with club feet, syphilis, infantile paralysis, skin diseases, bad teeth, pellagra, hookworm and other disorders and deformities caused by an economic slavery largely the result of a blind worship of State's rights, the most inhuman curse to human progress and welfare that a heartless and greedy mankind ever devised.

There are more than 300,000 persons in the State of Virginia who do not have a decent standard of living at any time during their life. Private industry and private agriculture keep these people poor, diseased, illiterate and potential criminals.

Take your choice—government aid to the poor, or civil war and revolution. If you can't learn anything from Italy, Germany and Russia, you can't expect too much sympathy when things get muddled up over here. VIRGINIAN.

Meddling With Elections.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As the "Federal City" welcomes the return of a traveler who, to attain his office, represented himself as a successor to the political philosophy of Thomas Jefferson, certain of your readers may be interested in Jefferson's views concerning the current activities of this successor.

In 1804 Jefferson wrote De Witt Clinton: "I proposed soon after coming into office to enjoin the executive officers from intermeddling with the elections as inconsistent with the true principles of our Constitution. It was laid over for consideration; but late occurrences prove the propriety of it, and it is now under consideration."

West Is East.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The two prime requisites of first-class nonsense are originality and spontaneousness, the finest recent example being the one furnished by that merry jester, Douglas Corrigan, saying that his compass got mixed. Nevertheless, his case is not without a classic precedent. In Lewis Carroll's "Hunting of the Snark" we are told:

But the principal failing occurred in the sailing,
And the Bellman, perplexed and distressed,
Said he had hoped, at least, when the wind blew due east,
That the ship would not travel due west."

Little Miss Bermuda.

OUR driver spurred his horse until the clip-clops rang rhythmically over the coral road. Then he turned to us in the rear seat of his carriage and said: "We've a celebrity here—an actress from America."

"Gertrude Lawrence?" I asked confidently and hopefully, "I understand she's here—staying right on this part of the island."

The remark made no impression on the driver. He clucked his horse to a trot again and continued: "Shirley Temple arrived last Saturday. She's over at the Castle Harbour. I saw her. She's cute. Just like any other kid," he added with satisfaction.

"Who do you think's here?" asked Mrs. Hill as she took her place at our table that first luncheon. The question was only rhetorical. "Shirley Temple," she exclaimed. "Oh, I do hope to see her in the flesh—the dear.

"You know," she went on, "my husband says he won't go out of his way to see Shirley. He thinks she's too precocious. He prefers Freddie Bartholomew and Jane Withers. I wonder if Shirley really is precocious. It would be hard for her to be plain and natural like other children, wouldn't it? After all she's been through in the movies? I would like to find out if she's spoiled."

Mr. Hill didn't take up the issue, except to confirm with a nod his preference for Shirley's screen contemporaries. He didn't point out that a child would need to be somewhat precocious to earn more than the President of the United States. Shirley's followers would have rejected the idea. They were bent on proving the brightest of screen luminaries—see box-office reports—was not really "a bright child."

The evidence began coming in almost immediately. It was to pile up for the next six days. That afternoon some fellow guests at our house came back from Castle Harbour, just over the hill, with reports that they had seen Shirley in the swimming pool.

"She was completely natural," one said. "Not at all an unusual child."

"She was like any girl her own age," said another.

"She played and splashed about, having lots of fun."

Next day Shirley went shopping in Hamilton, and although "unprecedented numbers" pushed and shoved their way through department store doors to accompany her, it was again the same story. The Royal Gazette and Colonist Daily, in a story running a column and a half, reported:

Shirley Temple—for it was she only who could have caused such a display of adoration—accepted it all unconcernedly and charmed her audience with her delightful naturalness . . .

Among the spellbound was Mrs. Hill, who had made the trip to Hamilton in all anticipation. "How like a child to think of the dog," she said at dinner that evening. "And she isn't precocious at all. I didn't believe she was, and she isn't."

Mrs. Hill's conviction was strengthened with every edition of the local newspaper. No matter where she went—lunch at the Astors, reception at the Governor's, tea at the cottage of Miss Gertrude Lawrence (who made the public prints in this connection), or a visit to the Aquarium — everywhere Shirley, like any child her age, was herself. And there were pictures proving this was so.

Toward the end of the week the Castle Harbour gave a farewell party for its popular little guest. Seventy-five youngsters were invited; 75 more crashed the gates. But even so, the event was far from sufficient. Hundreds of admirers didn't get to frolic with their visitor. So the city of Hamilton came to the rescue. It welcomed all the children of Bermuda to its wharf to watch Shirley sail for New York next afternoon. For one hour before sailing time the youngsters, many of whom were brought by parents, waved and said goodbys. From a vantage point on an upper deck of her boat Little Miss Bermuda waved back. In doing so she was still, according to the Royal Gazette and Colonist Daily reporter, "perfectly natural and completely at ease."

Shirley was gone, but the stories of her unaffected ways lingered on every tongue. With them passengers on the Bermuda Railway passed the time of their commuting, carriage drivers broke the monotony of long waits between fares, shop-girls engaged their customers in conversation. No one got tired of telling, or hearing, them. They were still talking about Shirley when we left the islands four days later.

Meanwhile Shirley was in New York resuming her sightseeing in America. The day we reached the mainland she toured The Bronx Zoo, where she was the guest of Dr. Raymond Ditmars, the curator. An afternoon newspaper carried excerpts from the conversation between host and guest. A wave of nostalgia for the vacation isles I had left behind swept over me as I came upon this paragraph near the end of the story:

"She impressed me," said Dr. Ditmars, "as a mighty sensible, well-spoken little girl." JAY WALZ.

Two-Thirds Rule.

Certain anti-Roosevelt Democrats are canvassing the possibility of restoring the two-thirds rule in the Democratic convention in 1940. They hope thus to thwart the renomination of President Roosevelt, or any nomination dictated by him. They argue that even if the New Deal will control a majority of the delegates, it will not control two-thirds.

THE rule requiring a two-thirds vote for choosing Presidential and Vice Presidential nominees was abrogated by the Democratic national convention of 1936. The rule had been in effect for 101 years, possibly with a lapse in 1840. The G. O. P. has always nominated by a majority.

Each national convention adopts its rules early in its sessions—usually the rules of the preceding convention. At that time any rule can be adopted by a majority vote. After the rules of a convention have been adopted, a two-thirds vote is necessary to change them.

At the opening of the 1932 Democratic convention, the Roosevelt forces made a move to abolish the two-thirds rule. They were sure their man could get a majority, were less confident of two-thirds. The effort was abandoned when it gave rise to bitter cries that it was unsportsmanlike to try to change the rules while the game was being played. However, the 1932 convention voted to bring the question before the 1936 convention.

• • • •

THE RULES committee held hearings in 1936 on abrogating the two-thirds rule. Those in favor of abrogation held the rule undemocratic, as thwarting the rule of the majority. The other side pointed out that the rule gave a veto power over nominations to the South, the foundation of the party's strength. They insisted that the very essence of States' rights was that a majority should not ride rough-shod over a minority.

But it was pointed out that the South no longer controlled one-third of the Democratic conventions. In fact, the 13 States of the so-called Solid South accounted for only 26½ per cent of the delegates in 1936. The rules committee voted 36 for abrogation to 13 against. Only 6 of the 13 negative votes came from the South.

To appease the Southerners, the rules committee voted to recommend also that the convention in 1940 change the apportionment of delegates thereafter. The new arrangement would "take into account" the Democratic vote in the preceding elections. Thus normally Republican States would enjoy less power in Democratic conventions. The 1936 convention by a voice vote adopted this recommendation and abolished the two-thirds rule.

• • • •

THE TRADITIONAL explanation of the two-thirds rule is that President Andrew Jackson imposed it in 1832—the first year that the Democrats held a national nominating convention—to get Van Buren nominated for Vice President. John C. Calhoun, it was said, could garner a majority, but not two-thirds, of the votes for Vice President. But when the votes were taken, Van Buren had more than two-thirds on the first ballot, while Calhoun had none. So some modern scholars believe that Jackson wanted to show either his contempt for the opposition or else an overwhelming demand for Van Buren.

In 1844 Van Buren, trying for a third nomination for the Presidency, got a majority of the votes, but could not get two-thirds. The only other candidate to meet that fate was Champ Clark in 1912. His son, Senator Bennett Champ Clark, was chairman of the rules committee at the 1936 Democratic convention, which abolished the two-thirds rule.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

Among the people you know, or would be interested in is:

J. D. Lawrence—

Twenty-one years ago this fall when the old offices of markets and rural organizations in the Agriculture Department was publishing the first official survey of farmer co-operatives in the United States, J. D. Lawrence, a farm boy from southern Virginia, was digging in to keep his platoon from being shot to pieces by machine-gun bullets in northeastern France.

LAWRENCE.

This week, as deputy co-operative bank commissioner of the FCA, Lawrence announced the completion of a new survey which shows that the number and business volume of farmer co-operatives have more than doubled since 1917. The new survey, made by the 12 district Banks of Co-operatives under the general supervision of Lawrence, is the first actual door-to-door count of farmer co-operatives to be made in this country.

Organized for the purpose of securing more certain markets for farm products and buying farm supplies at a saving, farmer-owned associations have experienced a period of marked growth since the World War period, and, according to Lawrence, are today in the strongest position in their history.

Lawrence points out that through nearly 11,000 producer-owned associations in 48 States and the District of Columbia, farmers are co-operatively selling virtually every type of farm product from livestock to oranges, and are co-operatively purchasing feed, seeds, fertilizers, farm machinery and hundreds of millions of gallons of oil and gasoline for farm trucks, tractors and automobiles. He says there are also more than 1,900 mutual fire insurance companies in the United States, and over 2,400 co-operative and mutual irrigation companies in the Western and Pacific States.

Late in 1933, Lawrence became assistant co-operative bank commissioner in charge of maintaining relations with the 12 district Banks for Co-operatives which the FCA had organized that year to make loans to local and regional co-ops throughout the country. He was also appointed assistant vice president of the Central Bank for Co-operatives in Washington, which provides credit service to large-scale co-ops, some of which function on a Nation-wide basis.

Since then, the central and district banks have loaned over half a billion dollars and become the second largest source of credit for farmers' co-operatives. Commercial banks rank first.

• • • •

When Lawrence first came with the Government he was asked to fill out a yard-long questionnaire on experience and salary in all previous positions. The salary figure on his first job was so small that the Government officials who reviewed the statement thought it was a typographical error. It appears that Lawrence's first job as office boy at $10 a month was in the cotton belt town of McBee, S. C., where he began his education in the finance of cotton marketing before he was 16 years old. When Lawrence left the bank five years later to join the Army he held the position of assistant cashier.

After two years in the service, Lawrence attended the University of Virginia and then returned to South Carolina, where he was employed five years in retail credit work and in the lumber business. Studying in his spare time, he became a certified public accountant. While employed by an auditing firm in Atlanta, he was assigned to plan budgetary control of large cotton co-operatives in various Southern States. From then on, the business problems of cotton marketing associations absorbed his attention.

The Federal Government has been watching the development of farmer-owned co-operatives with close interest since the old Federal Farm Board was organized back in 1930. In that year, Lawrence was employed by the Division of Co-operative Marketing of the Farm Board. He was called to Washington three years later when the FCA was organized and the Banks for Co-operatives set up to provide a specialized service to farmer-owned associations.

'Write-In' Tactics Weighed for Pope

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

Boise, Idaho, Aug. 11.—High-ranking Democrats met tonight as a "board of strategy" to consider with defeated New Deal Senator Pope whether he should enter the State's general election in November as a "write-in candidate."

Pope declined to give an immediate answer and told the committee he would have to wait at least three or four days to consider the public reaction. If he should decide to run again the fight during the general campaign would be a bitter one. Other candidates would be Representative D. Worth Clark, conservative who defeated Pope, and Don Callahan, the Republican choice.

The Indecisive Primaries.

THE New Deal lost in Idaho, held its ground in Arkansas, and gained in Ohio.

The defeat of Senator Pope, of Idaho, is the nearest to a clear-cut reverse that the New Deal has suffered in the primaries. He had the blessing of James A. Farley and Secretary Hull and the full backing of the Roosevelt Administration. D. Worth Clark, who defeated him, unquestionably represents the right wing of the Democratic Party in Idaho. Former Gov. C. Ben Ross, who defeated Mr. Clark's pro-New Deal uncle, Gov. Barzilla Clark, is something of a one-man show, but was supported by the conservative Democrats. Two more colorless candidates than Senator Pope and Gov. Barzilla Clark would be hard to find. D. Worth Clark is a prepossessing young man and Mr. Ross is an exceptionally able campaigner.

ALTHOUGH many specific issues and influences, including the low price of wheat and several other farm products, apparently had an effect, the real schism in the Democratic Party in Idaho is over the power issue. Parts of Idaho are in transmission distance of the great Columbia River power developments. In addition, Idaho has abundant developed and undeveloped hydro-electric resources of its own. Many localities in the State have had relatively cheap electric rates from the private utilities for years back. But the publicity concerning cheap power from Grand Coulee and Bonneville on the Columbia has livened up the power issue. The private companies have been lowering their rates in many localities in Idaho, while fortifying themselves politically.

When President Roosevelt visited Idaho last September, he found that the power question had split his party wide open, and that the right-wing Democrats were determined to unhorse Gov. Clark, who advocated more publicly owned and operated utility systems, and Senator Pope, who had gone down the line for the New Deal power policies. The private utility interests attained their objective. But to do so, they seem to have called in reserves from the Republican Party. The Idaho primaries this year were open primaries: Republicans could vote for Democrats and Democrats could vote for Republicans. According to reliable Republican sources, a good many Republicans—perhaps several thousand—invaded the Democratic primary to help defeat Senator Pope and Gov. Barzilla Clark.

IN OHIO, the easy victory of Senator Bulkley, a moderate New Dealer, and National Committeeman Charles Sawyer's defeat of Gov. Martin Davey bring the Roosevelt Democrats closer than they have ever been to control of their party in that State. How firmly this gain can be consolidated depends largely on the outcome of the November election. From the viewpoint of control of the Democratic National Convention in 1940, the New Deal primary victory in Ohio is much more important than the New Deal primary defeat in Idaho.

• • • •

IN SUM total, the Democratic primaries to date have not altered decisively the balance between New Deal and anti-New Deal control of the party machinery. Except in Idaho, the New Deal Democrats have beaten off every important attack. Only in the gubernatorial primaries in Oregon and Ohio have they made material gains. In several States unusually large primary votes have been cast. But in most States outside the South, where the primary is ordinarily the real election, a big primary vote means about 35 or 40 per cent of the vote cast for the head of the ticket in a Presidential election.

The primaries are still largely contests among the professional politicians, and in the States which nominate candidates at convention the control of the professional politicians is almost unchallengeable. In the Democratic primaries so far the incumbents, whether New Deal or anti-New Deal or somewhere between, have won when they have had the backing of their State or local machines. In Pennsylvania, Illinois, Texas, Missouri and Tennessee, State and local issues and personalities have been dominant. Some of these primaries have yielded national by-products. Mr. Roosevelt probably gained in Tennessee, since the victorious Crump machine is strongly pro-New Deal and as immovably pro-TVA as Senator Norris. Mr. Roosevelt lost nothing from the rebuffs to the Kelly-Nash machine in the Illinois primary or to the Pendergast machine in the Missouri primary.

In Kentucky, where he put his personal prestige at stake most clearly, Mr. Roosevelt has won a defensive battle. In Georgia and Maryland, where he is taking the offensive, he must meet more severe trials.

• • • •

WHETHER Mr. Roosevelt wins or loses in specific tests during the remainder of the primary season, he already has won a basic victory. For nearly every Democratic candidate for any office has felt it advisable to say a good word for the President and his general objective. Gov. Martin of Oregon tried to pose as a buddy of Mr. Roosevelt's. Senator Gillette averred to the end that the President was neutral in the Iowa primary. Gov. Chandler made capital of the President's statement that he had been a good Governor and would make a good Senator. Senator George has felt compelled to speak of that "great and good man." Senator Tydings wants Maryland Democrats to think that he voted for the "bone and sinew" of the New Deal.

Mr. Roosevelt has given notice of his intention to fight for the completion of his program and for the continuation of the Democratic Party as a progressive Democratic Party after 1940. If he clings to that intention, he will not be balked by the apologetic anti-New Dealism into which so many of his opponents in the party have relapsed during the primary season.

The Addict.

Characters: Almost any American mayor in these days of multiple ground breaking for PWA projects, and his wife.

Wife—Well, dear, did you have a hard day?

Mayor—Life is just one hard day after another with me. Gosh, am I tired.

Wife—Can't you ease up a little?

Mayor—How can I ease up?

Wife—After all, you might cut out all those steam shovels. I never see a newspaper without a picture of you climbing into or out of one.

Mayor—It's all part of the job, my dear. It has to be done.

Wife—You don't have to be in them all the time, do you?

Mayor—You don't think I like getting into and out of steam shovels, do you.

Wife (frankly)—Yes!

• • • •

Mayor—Take it from me, I have no use for 'em. The city is always breaking ground for something these days and they have to have a steam shovel. And when they have a steam shovel they have to have me.

Wife—Are you sure?

Mayor—It's a custom, a matter of tradition.

Wife—Come, now, and confess everything! You really have the steam shovel habit, haven't you.

Mayor (shyly)—Well, there's no use hiding it from you any longer, dear. Yes, I have. (A little sadly.) And it's a terrible thing when it gets hold of a man. Every morning I go to the office and say that I will not have a thing to do with a steam shovel, but, well, I hear about one somewhere and I just can't resist.

Wife—I've been alarmed about it for some time.

Mayor—It's funny how it grew. At first I didn't have any use for steam shovels. I had never touched one in my life. Then one day I climbed into one at a bridge dedication or something and pulled a lever. It fascinated me . . . A few days later we broke ground for a school building and I got into another one . . . There's where I made my fatal mistake.

Wife—What was it?

Mayor—I pulled the whistle! . . . After that, I just couldn't resist steam shovels. Now I have to have 'em. I no longer can take a steam shovel or leave it alone. (He weeps.)

• • • •

Wife—You have to be strong. You must swear off steam shovels, derricks, cement mixers . . . everything! Promise me.

Mayor (firmly)—You're right, dear. I must be firm. Very well; right now I resolve to quit steam shovels. Maybe a little cement mixer, occasionally, but not steam shovels!

Wife—I knew you'd be strong.

Mayor (proudly)—Positively. I'm through with 'em.

(The phone rings. The mayor answers. His face turns white. His expression changes. He hangs up, grabs his hat and starts for the door.)

• • • •

Wife—Where are you going?

Mayor (weakly)—I can't help it, honey. I just got word from city hall. There's a new dedication—with shovels!

(He goes quickly.)

It looks as if a lot of countries would be disappointed if no world war broke out during August, with the weather so ideal for it.

Back Home Stuff.

Hi: I was over to Playland this week and was glad to see the Richard Peck when she came in there from New York and left at 6 p. m. for Bridgeport. Her whistle brought back the sight of her in the evening sunsets when she used to blow her whistle four times when passing into New Haven harbor years ago by Morris Cove. Don't know if Capt. Hardie is on her or not. We used to go to Glen Island years ago on the John H. Starin and leave Glen Island homeward bound on the Starin, and soon out in the sound we would catch sight of the Peck 'way down in back of us when she would come in sight and then it would be exciting until we would see her pass the Starin.

The Peck came into Belle Dock and the Starin down in Smedley's Country on Water street.

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett.

Frances Willard.

FRANCES WILLARD was for decades the moving spirit of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union; she is still its patron saint. Lydia Jones Trowbridge, author of "Frances Willard of Evanston" (Willett, Clark, $2), was Frances Willard's neighbor, friend and admirer; Mrs. Trowbridge's father had been president of that Northwestern Female College which started Frances Willard on her career; the book is dedicated "to my parents, William and Mary Jones, who with the Willards constituted a mutual admiration society," and it is written devoutly, though the devotion is accented by a sense of humor.

REFORMERS and prohibitionists aren't popular these days. But I found myself surprised into a warm sympathy for this rambunctious crusader.

On the evening of her eighteenth birthday Frances Willard, her hair still done up woman-fashion, sat down in her mother's rocking chair and began to read Scott's "Ivanhoe," the title of the book sinfully conspicuous.

"I thought I'd told you not to read novels, Frances," said her father.

"So you did, father. But you forget what day this is."

"What day, indeed! I should like to know if the day has anything to do with the deed?"

"Indeed it has. I am 18. I am of age. I am now to do what I think is right. And to read this fine historical story is, in my opinion, a right thing for me to do."

Josiah Willard scowled for a moment, then burst out laughing. "A chip of the old block," he said; and Frances went on reading "Ivanhoe." Josiah had a better sense of humor than did most fathers of impatient daughters in 1857, but he did not give up the battle.

All through Frances' term in college Josiah bought her clothes for her. Her spending allowance was 25 cents a term. However, her friends had scissors. Frances had her hair bobbed. Josiah remarked, "The fool and her hair are soon parted."

In those wild days at the Northwestern Female College Frances found a kindred rebel spirit named Maggie. One day Frances and Maggie dressed themselves as pirates, set a ginger-ale bottle on the table to represent whisky, crossed their knees and lit long cigars which they had somehow procured. A knock at the door announced Miss Dickinson. Miss Dickinson, another woman ahead of her time, surveyed the scene. "The mosquitoes have almost driven me out of my room this hot night," she remarked. "If you girls will come and smoke them out for me it will be a great favor to me." And she kept them smoking until they were well cured of it.

THE CRUSADE against alcohol was slow in claiming Frances Willard. She was 37 when she burst into it, and possibly stimulated by her tilt with President Fowler She had stopped off at Pittsburgh to visit college friends, and, properly escorted, visited the headquarters of the Women's Crusade. At once she joined an outgoing band, and, for the first and last time in her life, saw the inside of a saloon.

She stared at the horrid beer barrels pointing their spigots at the customers, the shelves alluringly aglitter with glasses and decanters, the floor thick with sawdust. The fumes sickened her. Quickly the leader of her group laid a Bible on the bar and read a psalm; the women sang; Miss Willard kneeled in the sawdust and prayed. Thereafter she was a dedicated woman.

There was a brief interlude in her W. C. T. U. career when she became Dwight L. Moody's assistant in a Gospel-plus-temperance campaign. But one day Moody found her scheduled to speak at a W. C. T. U. convention on the same platform with Mrs. Mary Livermore, a good temperance woman but a Universalist who, Moody held, impiously denied the divinity of Christ. Frances Willard yielded because of her contract, but the next year she went off on her own.

• • • •

SHE was always pretty much on her own. The W. C. T. U. itself did not unanimously follow her. She was for woman suffrage when that cause seemed a little worse than Communism today; she campaigned for "social purity" and scandalized her fellow church members; she found the leaders of the Republican Party wickedly wet, and helped build up the Prohibitionist Party, which some of her fellow workers regarded as fanatically fractious.

Seven years later the men of Illinois set up a white marble statue of Frances Willard in the rotunda of the National Capitol, the first woman to be honored in that chamber of horrors. Three years later her bust was set up in New York University's Hall of Fame. It belongs there.

Colonial Trade

From The London Economist

United States And The British Empire.

THE United States must needs be interested in the British colonial empire so long as her motor-car and other industries depend on its supplies of rubber and tin. Her interest was particularly marked at the time of the Stevenson rubber restriction plan of 1922-28, and the policy of the various regulatory schemes now in existence is still a matter of intimate concern to the United States.

The question of American trade with British colonies, as a whole, has special importance today, since the heavy surplus of imports which the United States takes from the colonies normally largely counterbalances her enormous export surplus with the United Kingdom. In 1937 the United States had an export surplus of $328,000,000 in trade with the United Kingdom, but an import surplus of $240,000,000 with the British colonial empire.

This balance has, however, been seriously upset in the present year. Compared with 1937, American exports to the United Kingdom have risen very rapidly, whereas imports from the United Kingdom have been halved. Imports from the crown colonies have also shrunk in value, helped by the fall in prices; imports from the Gold Coast and Nigeria were only a quarter their size in 1937, partly, no doubt, as a result of the slump in exports of cocoa.

• • • •

NO LESS than three-quarters of the total American imports from British colonies come from British Malaya, and consist almost exclusively of rubber and tin. Indeed, Malaya was second only to Canada as a source of American imports in 1937. Her importance is strikingly illustrated by the fact that American imports from Malaya in 1937 amounted to $235,000,000, whereas imports from the next two British colonies in order of importance—the Gold Coast (cocoa and manganese) and Ceylon (rubber and tea)—were only $21,000,000 each. The chief other colonies from which the United States drew supplies were Nigeria (cocoa and palm oil), Hongkong (tin and tungsten), Southern Rhodesia (chrome ore), Trinidad (cocoa), and Kenya and Uganda (coffee).

Rubber alone accounted for more than half the total American imports from the British colonies in 1936. No less than one-third of the world's rubber is used in the manufacture of American motor tires. In the case of rubber, however, as of tin and cocoa, there is little room for complaint on the part of colonial exporters, since all three commodities are admitted free of duty into the United States. Indeed, the boot is if anything on the other leg, thanks to the international rubber and tin restriction schemes, although these have not aroused anything like the same antagonism in the United States as the Stevenson rubber scheme of the 1920's. On the other hand, American imports of vegetable oils, which are important for many British colonies, have been subjected to protective duties in the interests of domestic producers of cottonseed oil.

• • • •

THE UNITED STATES buys over 25 times as much from British Malaya as she sells to her. The disproportion in this case is exceptional. But the United States has import surpluses with practically all British colonies except the West Indies—and there invisible American imports in the shape of tourist expenditure are important. American exports to the British colonies are therefore comparatively small, amounting to approximately $76,000,000, or little over 2 per cent of total American exports, in 1937. The United States is, in fact, probably less concerned with the absolute size of her exports to those territories than with the general principle of securing equality of treatment for American products in foreign markets. That is to say, in British colonial markets, as in the United Kingdom market, the United States objects not so much to the absolute height of the tariff as to the preferences accorded to British goods.

There are, however, important exceptions to this general tendency towards discrimination. In most of the African colonies British goods are given little or no preference.

• • • •

IMPORTS into British colonies from the United States embrace a wide variety of products, and it is quite impossible to state definitely how far diversion has occurred, and to what extent it has been due to imperial preference. The chief items concerned would appear to be motor vehicles, mineral oils and machinery. Textiles are of comparatively minor importance to the Americans in most of these markets, the field being left to Lancashire and Japan. Motor vehicles should provide a good test case as to the effects of imperial preference, since in the Anglo-Canadian Agreement signed at Ottawa most of the colonies (except, of course, those pledged to maintain the open door) undertook to grant a 20 per cent preference to British motor-cars. It is certainly significant that in British Malaya, Ceylon and Jamaica, the United States has lost ground, whereas in three open-door colonies—Nigeria, the Gold Coast, and Kenya and Uganda—she has actually improved her position.

It would, however, be a mistake to infer too much from this one instance, since mineral oils provide a contrary example. In this case, there has in many colonies been an equally striking fall in the American share, irrespective of whether they grant imperial preference on mineral oils; and the fall in the American share has usually been counterbalanced by a rise in the share of the Netherlands East Indies, the Netherlands West Indies, or Iran.

• • • •

A MORE general indication is provided by changes in the American share of the total imports of various colonies since Ottawa. Between 1931 and 1936 this fell from 29 per cent to 16 per cent in the case of Jamaica, from 18 per cent to 16 per cent in Trinidad, from 4 per cent to 2 per cent in Ceylon, and from 2½ per cent to 2 per cent, in British Malaya. These are all colonies granting preferences to British goods. Yet in two open-door colonies the American share has fallen rather more—in Nigeria from 9 per cent to 5 per cent and in the Gold Coast from 17 per cent to 10 per cent.

Enough has been said to show the extreme difficulty of deciding precisely how much effect the colonial preferences have had on American trade. Some effect they must have had, and some modifications of existing preferences may be expected in the agreement. But any serious reduction of the American import surplus with the British colonies is unlikely so long as the American export surplus with the United Kingdom is maintained. The United States is probably mainly concerned with preventing the present international rubber and tin controls from repeating the faults of the Stevenson scheme.

Knew Nothing Of Steel Spies, Girdler Avers

Civil

—could you stop it if you wanted to?"

"I'd say we had stopped it already," replied Girdler. "If it isn't, I'm very much mistaken."

"Congratulations!" the Senator observed dryly.

"It's taken a long time to get to that," the steel executive said as the crowd roared.

But the chief protagonist of "little steel's" stand against the C. I. O. drive was forced to sit and hear evidence of how walking arsenals, hired from other cities, broke up picket lines, beat up union sympathizers, intimidated workers, tapped wires and opened mail in addition to run-of-the-mine acts of espionage. From his expression, it did not seem to trouble Girdler.

Looks of wonderment were cast at Girdler when he casually mentioned that President Roosevelt had phoned and telegraphed asking that the Youngstown plant be kept closed during the strike to prevent bloodshed and that he couldn't recall if Mr. Roosevelt's message had been answered.

He denied that there had been any agreement between his company and the five other companies in "Little Steel" not to sign a C. I. O. contract. He did admit that the "steel people might have talked among themselves" on the subject.

He freely admitted that an article which had appeared last year in a St. Louis newspaper gave an accurate picture of methods which he had used when head of the Aliquippa plant of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Co. The article detailed the methods by which company police kept "trouble makers" and agitators out of Aliquippa, by meeting all trains and searching, beating up and running out of town those who looked like undesirables. In this way, the Aliquippa plant was the only large unit free from strikes in the steel strife of 1919.

Girdler insisted, that his steel towns, far from being "the Siberia of the industry," as they were called in union circles, were "model towns" peopled by the happiest, best-housed and best-paid workers in the steel industry.

"The main difference between now and 1919," he said, "is that then you were commended if you had close relations with your men—today it's an unfair labor practice. The main reason why we didn't have trouble is that the men didn't want to have anything to do with agitators. They took care of that matter pretty well, themselves. In fact, they had to be restrained."

His men, he insisted, were at perfect liberty to join a union.

"Only it didn't use to be called coercion," he added, "for you to say 'Bill, I don't think it's a good thing for you to join the union.'"

Captains on Stand.

Senator La Follette next began hammering on a statement of company labor policy which came out on May 11, 1937, in which the company stated that it left it up to each man "to determine for himself, free from discrimination, interference, restraint, coercion and intimidation by any one, whom he wishes to represent him in the matter of collective bargaining."

The Wisconsin Senator brought to the stand six captains of police in the various plants of the Republic Corporation and asked them about various acts of violence about which they had previously testified, then asked them if they had heard of the company statement on labor policy. Some admitted having heard of it. Others denied that it had ever been brought to their attention.

Girdler avoided further questions along this line by saying that he was "more interested in what we are going to do in the future rather than what's happened in the past."

A former police lieutenant, Frank O. Moore, testified that the company had armed men with revolvers, tear gas guns, tear bombs and lengths of steel pipe and sent them in an armored car outside the Buffalo plant to break up picket lines where "quite a few" were injured. He also testified to having tapped phone lines and read mail "lying around" to find out what workers were thinking, on instructions from his superiors.

Witness Was Fired.

When he had left the stand, Chief Todd, of the company police, rebutted his evidence by saying that Moore was an unreliable witness because he was "disgruntled" at having been fired.

"Why was he fired?" asked Senator La Follette.

"Because he ran away and left his wife and children for another woman and then ran away and left the second woman," said Chief Todd seriously. "I didn't care to have an unscrupulous man like that on the force."

In his statement which he never read although given a chance at the last, Girdler demanded that the committee investigate the violence and intimidation of the C. I. O. in the "Little Steel" strike of last summer. He bade the committee prove its good faith by calling an inquiry and promised to lay before it more than 500 instances of violence by the Lewis workers.

He said there had been "an undercurrent of rumor for months that because our company signed no contract with the C. I. O. the real purpose of the present session was to 'smear Republic Steel, crucify Tom Girdler and whitewash the C. I. O.'"

He also called for light to be shed on the $1,500,000 strike fund of the S. W. O. C.

Girdler contended the strike and its attendant disorder need never have occurred were it not that the C. I. O. leaders "arrogantly refused to recognize any form of collective bargaining unless it bears the C. I. O. label."

"Unfortunately for the country," he added, "that is a philosophy that seems to be largely shared by the National Labor Relations Board."

One portion of the statement reemphasized the company head's attitude on labor espionage and intimidation.

"Let me say flatly and emphatically that any activities of our company guards beyond the safeguarding of our properties against vandalism and sabotage and the protection of our employes from violence were without my knowledge.

"There is no justification for espionage which is aimed against unionization of employes or which would in any way interfere with their collective bargaining rights. Explicit orders against the practice in Republic are now in effect."

Arrested After Chase.

After a severe lecture, Judge Walter J. Casey told Strong he could spend 235 days in jail in lieu of the fine.

Strong was arrested after a wild chase by three policemen. When his car and the auto of Policeman L. D. Phelps, traffic division, collided near Fifth and K streets northwest, Strong allegedly fled.

The chase, at speeds as high as 50 miles an hour, lasted until the offender was cornered in the street car tunnel by Policemen T. V. Andrick and J. R. Luskey, who joined Phelps.

As city-wide safety efforts continued to keep the District's accident toll at a minimum yesterday, a new agency joined the fight to keep unattended youngsters off the streets.

The Council of Social Agencies announced plans to initiate extra programs to attract children to the group's day camps and settlement houses throughout the city.

Seven neighborhood councils are studying needs and facilities in their particular communities with a view to increasing and enlarging off-street play spots and enticing youngsters to use them.

In joining The Post-Junior Board safety program, the Horlacker Delivery Service urged trucking concerns in all sections of town follow its example.

Truck owners—especially small fleet and independent light delivery operators—will be asked to send their drivers to the junior board's accident prevention institute when sessions are resumed next month. Plans for this will be announced later.

In New York yesterday, the C. I. T. Safety Foundation announced 40 cities which sent representatives to the first seminar of safety last year have shown an average reduction of 29 per cent in highway fatalities during the first six months of this year. The Post was represented at this seminar.

"The direct causes of lessened traffic casualties," said John W. Darr, trustee of the foundation, "have been more rigid enforcement methods and improved engineering. Full co-operation of police departments and courts has also aided."

Newspaper leadership in safety movements and a changed public opinion have helped materially in bringing better conditions, Darr added.

Charged With Hit-and-Run.

In Washington yesterday, a 7-year-old colored boy received minor injuries when struck by a truck backing up near his home. He was Joseph Gaskin, 916 Sixth street northwest, and was treated by a private physician for cuts to the legs and hip.

Willie McClure, colored, of 39 I street northeast, was charged with hit-and-run after his car allegedly struck a motorcycle and slightly injured Roger W. Davis and Blake Bothell, soldiers stationed at Fort Myer. They were bruised.

McClure, according to police, fled from the scene of the accident and later reported his car stolen. He was arrested, and in addition to the hit-skip charge he faced counts of driving without a permit and making a false larceny report.

Following an accident at Blagden avenue and Allison street northwest, police took George Pabst, 36, of Charleston, S. C., into custody and held him on a charge of investigation at the Tenth precinct.

The taxicab Pabst was driving jumped a curb and ran 50 feet before it half buried itself in a clay bank. It was reported stolen early yesterday by Robert Smith, of Alexandria. Pabst was treated at Georgetown Hospital for lacerations of the hands and head and severe bruises.

Reich Prepares On Czech Border

Munich, Germany, Aug. 11 (AP).—The Bavarian population was much upset today over military preparations along the border between Germany and Czechoslavakia.

Despite official assurances the public was worried. Automobiles, trucks, furniture vans and even municipal buses have been requisitioned by the army. Physicians and railway employes have been ordered to keep themselves ready for service.

Farmers Face Price Collapse, Wallace Warns

allotments made under the law this spring.

Wallace placed "enemies" of the existing legislation in two categories:

Those who offer "unsound" substitutes which, he said, would destroy the farmer," and those who criticized without offering a remedy for the problem of farm surpluses.

In the former group he placed advocates of a "domestic allotment" plan which embodied a system of price-fixing and export subsidies. Under it farmers would be paid cost of production prices on their allotted shares of the domestic market and at the same time be free to produce all they desired for sale in domestic markets at whatever prices they could get.

Reviewing the agricultural situation, Wallace urged farmers to take advantage of Government loans to hold surpluses off the market until the supplies are smaller and prices better. He said that unless a large amount of corn was placed under loan, it was possible that hogs would drop to 5 cents a pound this winter.

The text of the White House statement on the farm act follows:

"The original agricultural adjustment act of 1933, after two years of administration, was working well, but there were people like Gov. Talmadge who went about the State saying if the act were declared unconstitutional cotton would jump immediately from 11 to 20 cents a pound. The act was declared unconstitutional and cotton dropped from 11 to about 9 cents.

"In January of 1937, the President asked Congress for a new farm act. If Congress had passed it at that session there would have been ample time to get cotton, tobacco and peanuts properly organized for the 1938 crop. Congress did not pass the act requested and the President called a special session in November. Different bills were passed by the Senate and House and went to conference. If at the special session, an agricultural act had become law, there still would have been time to properly organize for the 1938 crops.

"Actually, the new farm act did not go through until February and its was too late then to provide perfected administration machinery for 1938 crops. Under these very difficult handicaps we are doing the best we can to re-examine the 1938 crop results and as soon as the President gets back to Washington he will see Secretary Wallace and suitable action will be taken."

Crash Spoils First Drive in New Car

Out for a drive in his newly bought car for the first time last night, Alex Slutzky, 27, Treasury Department clerk, received a possible fracture of the left shoulder when another car collided with his on Connecticut avenue in front of the Zoo entrance.

Police said the accident occurred when a car driven by George Chiarappa, 43, of 3220 Connecticut avenue, crashed into Slutzky's vehicle, which was driven by Arthur Hockman, 25, Bureau of Standards employe. Chiarappa was booked at the Eighth Precinct station for failure to give right of way.

Slutzky, who lives at 1818 N street northwest, was treated at Georgetown Hospital and sent home.

the distinguished record of the senior Senator was a signal for the launching of an unrelenting fight against the forces that would take from the Senate a statesman of experience and courage and place in his stead a "hundred percenter," who would serve as a "rubber stamp" in voting upon all New Deal legislation. Senator George himself voiced the battle cry when he accepted the Chief Executive's challenge."

Roosevelt

hinted in this State that he had the Administration's indorsement.

Mr. Roosevelt came to the rear platform of the train a few minutes after Gov. Johnston had introduced him as "a man who has meant so much to the people of the United States."

At Barnesville, Mr. Roosevelt frequently called George "my friend" and said he "is beyond doubt a gentleman and a scholar," but "I am impelled to make it clear that on most public questions he and I do not speak the same language."

Senator George fought the Supreme Court reorganization plan, the Executive Department reorganization and the wage-hour bill as well as some lesser Administration proposals.

Camp as well as George sat on the platform—although neither had a part in the program—while the Chief Executive took the offensive for the first time in this year primary battles. Heretofore, he has said good words for Administration stalwarts but has not publicly sought the defeat of incumbent dissenters.

George Is His "Friend."

The President referred to Talmadge's sharp attacks against the New Deal in the latter part of his governorship in 1935 and 1936, said this "concerns me not at all," but added "I have read so many of his proposals, so many of his promises, so many of his panaceas, that I am very certain in my mind that his election would contribute little to practical government."

After saying "my friend, the senior Senator from this State, cannot, in my judgment, be classified as belonging to the liberal school of thought," the President referred again to the personal friendship theme when he told his listeners:

"What I am about to say will be no news to my old friend, Senator Walter George, because I have recently had personal correspondence with him, and, as a result of it, he fully knows my views."

Then he proceeded to an exposition of his conception of the responsibility of a legislator to the President, when that President also is his party chief.

"To carry out my responsibility as President it is clear that there should be co-operation between members of my own party and myself," he said. "That is one of the essentials of the party form of government.

"The test is not measured, in the case of the individual, by his vote on every bill. The test lies rather in two questions: First, has the record shown, while differing perhaps in details, a constant, active fighting attitude in favor of the broad objectives of the party and the Government as they are constituted today, and secondly, does the candidate really, in his heart, believe in the objectives?

"I regret that in the case of my friend, Senator George, I cannot answer either of these questions in the affirmative."

He said "the majority of the Senate and the House have agreed with these objectives and have worked with me and I have worked with them to translate these objectives into action. Some have given 'lip service' to some of the objectives but have not raised their little finger to attain the action itself."

Business Is Issue.

"Too often these few have listened to the dictatorship of the small minority of individuals and corporations who oppose the objectives themselves," he said, in obvious reference to the charges of George's opponents that he has been a spokesman of "big business."

In introducing the President, Gov. E. D. Rivers called him a "taxpayer, resident and part-time citizen" of Georgia and Mr. Roosevelt justified his intervention in the primary fight by saying "because Georgia has been good enough to call me her adopted son and because for many long years I have regarded Georgia as my 'other State' I feel no hesitation in telling you what I would do if I could vote here next month." He said also many Georgians have asked him to speak out boldly.

He took cognizance of efforts to turn his indorsement of Senator Barkley, on the grounds of long Senate service, into an argument for George's re-election. He said that in Kentucky "there was no cleancut issue between a liberal on one side and a dyed-in-the-wool conservative on the other" but that he felt in Georgia there was this issue and it transcended the question of George's seniority.

George Denies Charges.

Atlanta, Aug. 11 (AP).—Senator Walter F. George described as "slanderous or ignorant misrepresentations" the charges of campaign opponents that he represented big business in the Senate, in a radio address yesterday.

Senator George referred also to his support of vocational education and veterans' legislation disapproved at the White House as evidence "I was not fighting for big business."

"Let me tell you, my friends," the Senator said, "that when any man is unwilling or afraid to do justice to big business, that man will sell you down the creek whenever it is politically possible."

"I know that when I advocate for the soldiers of the World War I was not fighting big business. Yet six times have I taken the floor in the senate to override a presidential veto of bills that had been passed for the benefits of our veterans, or for their widows or orphans."

"I know than when I advocate bank deposit insurance, banking reform, mobilization of the gold reserve, control of the stock commodity exchanges, that I was not fighting for big business.

"I was fighting then—intelligently, I hope—for every small business man in this nation. But I have no such craven disposition in my soul as to hold up my hand against any honorable, against any useful, against any legitimate business in this State, or that may come in this State."

They are scheduled to die at 3 a. m. tomorrow on a double gallows in the recreation yard of the Federal prison for the murder of W. W. Baker, of Yuma, Ariz., Federal Bureau of Investigation agent, slain in the Topeka postoffice April 16, 1937.

There'll be Redskin war dancing on the Shoreham Terrace next Wednesday evening, August 22.

For the "Redskin' Pow Wow" will come off that night. All of the Redskins will be entertained by their boss, George Marshall, and Mrs. Marshall (nee Corinne Griffith). Many prominent officials of the Federal and District governments will also be on hand to greet Washington's champion footballers.

Barnee, now maestro of the Redskins as well as the Shoreham (he's big enough to go into the line, too), will play the Redskins' new rally song, "Hail to the Redskins" with emphasis on war whoops and drums. Barnee composed the music, Corinne Griffith the words. A sample—"Scalp 'em, swamp 'em! We will take 'em big score." Sports Announcer Tony Wakeman will present the Redskins, all of 'em, from star "Slingin' Sammy" Baugh to new recruit "Wee Willie" Wilkin.

Cream of the contestants in Powhatan Roof's talent contest are due to go to bat next Monday, Wednesday and Friday, with the finals taking place on the last-named night. If rain interferes, the contest may run over into next, but it will be wound up in plenty of time to let the lucky first prize winner take that trip to New York over the Labor Day week-end.

World traveller Johnny Slaughter (leader in Wardman's Metronome Room) tiels us that Turkish night club doings feature the consumption of many tiny watermelons between drinks of "raki," a liquid that has the flavor of absinthe, but not the enervating results and costs 22 cents American money for a pint. "It's my theory that this raki-watermelon combination brought about the fall of the Ottoman Empire," says Johnny.

Note.—In a couple of days Johnny will start to play the new tunes from "My Lucky Star," Sonja Henie's forthcoming picture. Right now he reports that the music from "Alexander's Ragtime Band" is customer-preferred.

Perry Martin will be back at Mayfair on Monday after a week in Manhattan. There's some confusion about Perry's favored transportation. Singer Phyllis Cromling says he went to New York "in a dither." And Pianist Frances Gill told us "Perry took the streamliner. What goes on?

GlenEcho music swings all the way from dynamic jive to the new "honey" tunes. That's the Dave McWilliams idea and it means not only contrast and color in the program, but that all dancers are pleased.

The same sharp idea applies to the few but rich specialties. Jack Schaeffer, singing such hot items as "Old Man Mose," is the jitterbugs' darling. But the cause of romance is served when Vocalist Jimmy Bright goes plumb melodic with "Music, Maestro, Please," "I Let a Song Go Out of My Heart," and suchlike. Special. Bulldog Jerry's missing from the Glen Echo bandstand, because he's slightly under the weather, as aren't we all? Jerry's taking it easy on a diet of ice cream and chopped liver. He'll be back on the job next week.

Time Out:

Hi-Hat's Oscar will leave town on Saturday to spend a couple of week's at Pinebush, in the Adirondacks. He'll probably wonder what's happening in Hi-Hat every minute he's away.

Helen Forrest, Madrillon's singer, is in New York for a few days. She's seeing new shows, getting new music.

Comes a postcard from Sid Cowen, singing linguist of the Mayflower Lounge. It seems he's in Atlantic City for the single purpose of having a good time. Maurice Kafka has a plenty-pretty new song for you, Sid, when you get back next week.

There's no regular vacationing for the Rainbow Room Orchestra this month. The boys are getting their relaxation by riding around the countryside on Sundays and hunting new places to eat. "Sometimes we're lucky," says Leader Milt Davis.

Another so-busy lad is Sammy Richardson, emcee-ing and singing at Bamboo Gardens. He's getting his vacation in snacks by horseback riding over in Virginia in his spare moments.

"Red" Pyle's tricks in dance music lend a special zest to Pine Grove evenings. Especially topside are his versions of "Josephine" and "Don't Be That Way." Vocalist Jerry Ralston is no one-song girl. She knows them all and can do swing, blue and sweet numbers with equal facility.

There'll be smart and sizeable floor shows at Pine Grove tonight and tomorrow in addition to the regular entertainment.

Court Bill Seen Back of Blow At Sen. George

cuts of any kind when we openly declared that if the social and economic program of the party could not be solved by legislation within the Constitution we would seek such clarifying amendment as would assure the legislatures and the Congress, each within its jurisdiction, the power to enact those laws.

"An increase in the number of Supreme Court justices had been suggested before the convention met in June, but we declared that we would go back to the people, who alone have the power to make or change the Constitution, if we could not carry out the program within the letter and the spirit of the Constitution."

Throughout the campaign of 1936, Senator George added, "no responsible voice was raised in any quarter for the legislation which is now demanded of Congress."

"Without warning," he said, "the President has demanded a subservient judiciary. He may be justified in repudiating those loyal Democrats who in every section of the country declared we would take no short cuts to obtain our worthy objectives. Others have repudiated their friends, and history records with what deplorable results."

Perhaps none in the Senate throughout the long fight over the Administration's Supreme Court project emphasized so strongly as Senator George, his views on the nature of the White House tactics or assayed so sharply its effect on the Democratic Party in and out of the Senate. More than once he predicted a party split if enactment of the bill persisted.

From that time the cleavage between the two has existed.

It was recalled yesterday that the President eschewed a foray into Indiana when it was apparent Democrats there had abandoned all hope of "purging" Senator Frederick Van Nuys, an outspoken opponent of the court plan. He also failed to excoriate Senator Alva Adams in Colorado, and was noncommital about Senator Pat McCarran during the Presidential visit to Nevada. All three had been marked by the New Deal "purgers," and after Senator George there remains Senators Ellison D. Smith, of South Carolina; Millard Tydings, of Maryland, and Augustine Lonergan, of Connecticut.

The direct attack on Senator George was taken to mean here that the President has been assured, doubtless by Gov. E. D. Rivers, that Senator George can be beaten in Georgia even if it means victory for former Gov. Eugene Talmadge, who Mr. Roosevelt has frankly indicated he would rather have in the Senate than George.

If the similar assurance is given in Maryland it is considered likely that the President will be prevailed upon to invade that State in behalf of the "100 per cent New Dealer," Representative David J. Lewis.

President's Barnesville Talk

By the Associated Press.

Barnesville, Ga., Aug. 11.—Here is the text of President Roosevelt's Barnesville address today:

Fourteen years ago a Democratic Yankee came to a neighboring county in your State in search of a pool of warm water wherein he might swim his way back to health. The place—Warm Springs—was a rather delapidated small summer resort. His new neighbors extended to him the hand of genuine hospitality, welcomed him to their firesides and made him feel so much at home that he built himself a house, bought himself a farm and has been coming back ever since. And he proposes to keep to that good custom. I intend to keep on coming back.

There was only one discordant note in that first stay of mine at Warm Springs. When the first of the month bills came in for electric light for my little cottage, I found that the charge was 18 cents per kilowatt hour—about four times as much as I paid in Hyde Park, N. Y. That started my long study of proper public utility charges for electricity and the whole subject of getting electricity into farm homes throughout the United States.

Birth place of REA.

So it can be said that a little cottage at Warm Springs, Ga., was the birthplace of the Rural Electrification Administration. Six years ago there was much talk of the more widespread and cheaper use of electricity, but it is only since March 4, 1933, that your Government has reduced that talk to practical results. Electricity is a modern necessity of life and ought to be found in every village, every home and every farm in every part of the United States. The dedication of this Rural Electrification Administration project in Georgia today is a symbol of the progress we are making—and we are not going to stop.

One month ago I invited a group of distinguished, broadminded Southerners to meet in Washington to discuss the economic conditions of the South. I said to them:

"My intimate interest in all that concerns the South is, I believe, known to all of you; but this interest is far more than a sentimental attachment born of a considerable residence in your section and of close personal friendship for so many of your people. It proceeds even more from my feeling of responsibility toward the whole Nation. It is my conviction that the South presents right now the Nation's No. 1 economic problem—the Nation's problem, not merely the South's. For we have an economic unbalance in the Nation as a whole, due to this very condition of the South.

Evil Must Be Righted.

"It is an unbalance that can and must be righted, for the sake of the South and of the Nation."

Yesterday I received the report and the recommendations based on their advice—and these will be made public in the course of the next day or two. I commend a careful reading of this document to all of you.

It is well said that this report "presents in only a small degree the manifold assets and advantages possessed by the South" because the report is concerned primarily not with what the South has but with what the South needs. It is a short report divided into 15 sections and it covers in a broad way subjects of vital importance, such as economic resources, soil, water, population, private and public income, education, health, housing, labor, ownership and use of land, credit, use of natural resources, industry and purchasing power.

The very fact that it is necessary to divide the economics of the South into 15 important groups—each one a problem in itself—proves to you and me that if you and I are to cover the ground effectively there is no one simple answer. It is true that many obvious needs ought to be attained quickly—such as the reduction of discriminatory freight rates, such as putting a floor under industrial wages, such as continuing to raise the purchasing power of the farm population, but no one of these things, no combination of a few of them, will meet the whole of the problem. We cannot capture one hill and claim to have won the battle because the battle front extends over thousands of miles and we must push forward along the whole length of its front.

Dangerous Types Stressed.

That is why the longer I live the more am I convinced that there are two types of political leadership which are dangerous to the continuation of broad economic and social progress all along the long battle front. The first type of political leadership which is dangerous to progress is represented by the man who harps on one or two remedies or proposals and claims that these one or two remedies will cure all our ills. The other is represented by the man who says that he is in favor of progress, but whose record shows that he hinders or hampers new measures. He tells his friends that he does not like this, that or the other detail and, at the same time, he utterly fails to offer a substitute that is practical or worth while.

The task of meeting the economic and social needs of the South, on the broad front that is absolutely necessary, calls for public servants whose hearts are sound, whose heads are sane—whose hands are strong, striving everlastingly to better the lot of their fellow men.

This, then, is the synopsis—a clear listing of the economic and social problems of the Southland. It suggests the many steps that must be taken to solve the problems.

Some of these steps, it is true can be taken by State governments, but you will readily realize that action by the States alone even if such action could be simultaneously and immediately obtained would be wholly inadequate. The reason is that most of these problems involve interstate relationship not only between the States of this region but between each and all of these States and the rest of the Nation.

It is not an attack on State sovereignty to point out that this national aspect of all these problems requires action by the Federal Government. I do not hesitate to say from a long experience that during the past five years there has been a closer and more effective peace-time co-operation between the Governors of the 48 States and the President of the United States than at any other time in our whole national history.

You are familiar enough with the processes of government to know that the Chief Executive cannot take action on national or regional problems unless they have been first translated into acts of Congress passed by the Senate and the House of Representatives.

Such action by the Congress, it is equally clear, must be vigorously supported by the Senators and Representatives whose constituents are directly concerned with Southern economics and Southern social needs. Senators and Congressmen who are not whole-heartedly in sympathy with these needs cannot be expected to give them vigorous support.

Translating that into more intimate terms, it means that if the people of the State of Georgia want definite action in the Congress of the United States, they must send to that Congress Senators and Representatives who are willing to stand up and fight—fight night and day for Federal statutes drawn to meet actual needs—not something which serves merely to gloss over the evils for the time being, but laws with teeth in them which go to the root of the problems; which remove the inequalities, raise the standards and, over a period of years, give constant improvement to the conditions of human life in the State.

Asserts Adopted Son Right.

You, the people of Georgia, in the coming senatorial primary, for example, have a perfect right to choose any candidate you wish. I do not seek to impair that right—but because Georgia has been good enough to call me her adopted son and because for many long years I have regarded Georgia as my "other State" I feel no hesitation in telling you what I would do if I could vote here next month. I am strengthened in that decision to give you my personal opinion of the coming senatorial primary by the fact that during the past few weeks I have had many requests from distinguished citizens of Georgia—from people high and low—from the chief justice of the highest court of Georgia and from many, many others.

Let me preface my statement by saying that I have personally known three of the candidates for the United States Senate for many years. All of them have had legislative or executive experience as Government servants. We may justly, also, seek to determine for ourselves what is their inward point of view in relationship to present and future problems of Government.

It has been pointed out by writers and speakers who do not analyze public questions very deeply that in passing through the State of Kentucky a month ago I gave as a reason for the re-election of Senator Barkley that he had had very long and successful service in the Congress of the United States and that his opponent did not have that experience. In Kentucky, there was no clear-cut issue between a liberal on the one side and a dyed-in-the-wool conservative on the other. Neither gentleman on his record could be classified as a reactionary, therefore the criterion of experience, especially that of the majority leadership of the Senate of the United States, weighed heavily in favor of Senator Barkley.

Issue Different.

Here in Georgia, however, my friend, the senior Senator from this State, cannot possibly in my judgment be classified as belonging to the liberal school of thought—and, therefore, the argument that he has long served in the Senate falls by the wayside.

Here in Georgia the issue is a different one from that in Kentucky. I speak in terms of liberal and conservative, for the very simple fact that on my shoulders rests a responsibility to the people of this country. Twice I have been chosen Chief Executive with the mandate to seek by definite action to correct many evils of the past and of the present; to work for a wider distribution of national income, to improve the conditions of life, especially among those who need it most, and above all to use every honest effort to keep America in the van of social and economic progress.

To the Congress I make recommendations—in most cases recommendations relating to objectives—leaving it to the Congress to translate the recommendations into law. The majority of the Senate and House have agreed with those objectives and have worked with me and I have worked with them to translate those objectives into action, some have given "lip service" to some of the objectives but have not raised their little fingers actively to attain the action itself. Too often these few have listened to the dictatorship of the small minority of individuals and corporations who oppose the objectives themselves. That is a real dictatorship, and one which we have been getting away from slowly but surely during the past five years. As long as I live you will find me fighting against any kind of dictatorship—especially that kind which has enslaved millions of our people for more than half a century.

What I am about to say will be no news to my old friend, Senator Walter George, because I have recently had personal correspondence with him and, as a result of it, he fully knows my views.

Let me make it clear that he is, and I hope always will be, my personal friend. He is beyond question a gentleman and a scholar—but so also are other gentlemen for whom I have an affectionate regard but with whom I differ heartily and sincerely on the principles and policies of how the Government of the United States should be directed.

For example, I have long acquaintance and great personal friendship for people like Senator Hale, of Maine, Representative Wadsworth, of New York and the minority leader, Representative Snell. All of these life-long Republicans are gentlemen and scholars, but they and I learned long ago that our views on public questions were as wide apart as the poles.

Therefore, I repeat that I trust that Senator George and I will always be good personal friends even though I am impelled to make it clear that on most public questions he and I do not speak the same language.

Test Is on Record.

To carry out my responsibility as President it is clear that there should be co-operation between members of my own party and myself. That is one of the essentials of a party form of government. It has been going on in this country for nearly a century and a half. The test is not measured, in the case of an individual, by his every vote on every bill. The test lies rather in two questions: First, has the record of the candidate shown, while differing perhaps in details, a constant, active fighting attitude in favor of the broad objectives of the party and of the Government as they are constituted today, and, secondly, does the candidate really, in his heart, believe in the objectives? I regret that in the case of my friend, Senator George, I cannot answer either of these questions in the affirmative.

In the case of another candidate for the United States Senate—former Gov. Talmadge—I have known him in Georgia for many years. His attitude toward me and toward other members of the Government in 1935 and 1936 concerns me not at all, but I have read so many of his proposals, so many of his panaceas that I am very certain in my own mind that his election would contribute little to practical government. That is all I can say about him.

United States Attorney Lawrence Camp I have also known for many years. He has had experience in the State Legislature, he has served as attorney general of Georgia, and for four years he has made a distinguished record in the United States District Court, his office ranking among the first two in the whole Nation in the expedition of Federal cases before that court. I regard him not only as a public servant with successful experience, but as a man who honestly believes that many things must be done, and done now, to improve the economic and social conditions of the country, and is willing to fight for these objectives. That is of the utmost importance.

Indorses Camp.

Therefore, answering the requests from many citizens of Georgia that I make my position clear, I have no hesitation in saying that if I were able to vote in the September primaries in this State I most assuredly would cast my vote for Lawrence Camp.

In dedicating this project, I want to express my abiding faith that we as a nation are moving steadily and surely toward a better way of living for all of the people. This electrification project is a symbol of our determination to attain that objective. But it is only one symbol, it is one hill out of ten thousand which must be captured. You and I will never be satisfied until all economic inequalities are corrected, until every one of us, North, East, West and South have the opportunity so to live that his education, his job and his home will be secure.

In many countries democracy is under attack by those who charge that democracy fails to provide its people the needs of modern civilization. I do not—and you do not—subscribe to that charge. We believe that democracy today is succeeding but that a necessity for its future success is the fighting spirit of the American people—their insistence that we go forward and not back.

President Roosevelt's Athens Speech

By the Associated Press.

Athens, Ga., Aug. 11.—Here is the text of President Roosevelt's address at Athens today:

It is with particular pride in and increased devotion to this State that I become today an alumnus of the University of Georgia. During many years I have had important contacts with your trustees and faculty and I can therefore appreciate the excellent service which you are rendering to the cause of education, not only in Georgia but in the Nation.

Many years have gone by since I first came to Warm Springs and got to know and to love the State and its people. I wonder if you, who live here all the time, can realize as well as I, who have been coming here once or twice a year, the amazing progress that has been made here in a short decade and a half—and especially in the past five years. If you see a person morning, noon and night you do not note the changes of growth or health of that friend as readily as if you see him only at intervals; and that is why I feel that I can speak with perspective.

In my earlier years here I saw a South in the larger sense forgotten in the midst of an unhealthy national speculation—a boom era which thought in terms of paper profits instead of human lives. And for those days what has the South to show today? A few fortunes, perhaps, but most of the profits went north.

Then came the tragic years of the depression, closed banks in almost every community, ruinous crop prices, idle mills, no money for schools or roads—a picture of despair.

Yet, through all those years, the South was building a new school of thought—a group principally recruited from younger men and women who understood that the economy of the South was vitally and inexorably linked with that of the Nation, and that the national good was dependent equally on the improvement of the welfare of the South. They began asking searching questions:—why is our pay—in other words our earning capacity—so low? Why are our roads so bad? Why is our sanitation and medical care so neglected? Why are our teachers so inadequately paid? Why are our local school buildings and equipment so antiquated?

I do not mince words because, first of all, I have a right—a Nation-wide right, a State right and withal a sympathetic and understanding right to speak them, and, secondly, because you as well as I know them to be true.

It may not be politic, but it is good American idealism to recognize, to state boldly, that in 1932 the conditions of human life in Georgia and in other States of the lower South were as a whole at the bottom of the national scale. At the same time let us rejoice and take pride in the undoubted fact that in these past six years the South has made greater economic and social progress up the scale than at any other period in her long history. It is my objective and yours to maintain that march and to accelerate its pace.

On the side of education a long experience teaches us that the improvement of educational facilities is inevitably bound up with economic conditions. Years ago I was told by a distinguished citizen of Georgia that a public school education was well provided for because there was a law—or perhaps is was in the State constitution itself — providing that every child should have a full school year—and that attendance for each school year through grade school was compulsory. But I soon discovered school after school in the rural districts—and most of them are rural districts—where the school was open only four or five months a year—or was too small to hold all the children—or couldn't employ enough teachers—or where children, whose parents wanted them to work, could stay away from school with complete immunity.

Apparently a law or a clause in the constitution was not enough. What is law without enforcement? Apparently the divine method 'let there be light, and there was light' did not work as mere man's dictum.

Then I began to analyze: Was it due to lack of money. Every man and woman I talked with deplored the wretched school conditions, wanted better schools, better trained and better paid teachers, wanted more teachers, wanted a full school year. But—the answer was always the same—we cannot get more money from taxes.

And why not? The answer is simple: The taxable values were not there. The tax rates were not too low, but the actual going values of property were so meagre that when taxes on those values were collected the sum received could not pay for adequate teachers or equipment. Public education was therefore dependent on public wealth. Public wealth was too low to support good schools.

That analysis of mine—made even before I was elected Governor of New York—led my mind to many other questions. Why were land values, and therefore taxable values, in Georgia so low? With that question came a study of land use, of wornout land, of cheaper fertilizer, of forestation, of erosion, of crop diversification, of crop prices, of marketing, of freight rates. And all of these things bore directly on the problem of better schools.

Why were people getting such low pay for a day's work? That led to a study of purchasing power, of decent wages, of the cost of living, of taxable income, of sound banking, of small merchants. And these things, too, bore directly on the problem of better schools.

In other words, social conditions—schools and hospitals and clothing and housing and food—were intimately dependent on economic conditions—higher wages, higher farm income and more profits for small businessmen.

So you will see that my thoughts for the South are no new thing. Long before I had any idea of re-entering publif life I was planning for better life for the people of Georgia. In the later years I have had some opportunity to practice what I have long preached.

Obviously the Federal Government cannot carry the load alone. In education, for example, Washington has greatly assisted by using the labor of people who really need help to build school houses, to give student aid, and to pay many teachers. And Washington will help by giving some grants in aid to those communities which need them the most. But Washington should not and cannot rightly subsidize public education throughout the United States. Education should be run by the States and their subdivisions.

Therefore in the long run, the best way for your National Government to assist State and local educational objectives is to tackle the national aspects of economic problems—to eliminate discriminations between one part of the country and another—to raise purchasing power and thereby create wealth in those sections where it is far too low—to save the waste and the erosion of our natural resources, to encourage each section to become financially independent, to take the lead in establishing social security—and at the same time to explain to the people in every part that constant progressive action is better than following either those who want to slow up or those who promise they will hand you the moon on a silver platter a week after they are elected.

At heart Georgia shows devotion to the principles of democracy. It has occasional lapses, but it really does not believe either in democracy or feudalism dressed up in democratic clothes. You of the university are greatly responsible for the present and the future. Well are you doing your part. From today onward I share proudly and more fully in that part.

Arthur J. Morris Predicts Business Upswing on Way

Arther J. Morris, founder of the Morris Plan Bank System, predicted yesterday a business upswing was imminent. "Indications are that good times are on the way, but I can't guess how long they will last," he added.

He based his forecast on an increase in volume of loans by the Morris plan banks. "The volume of our loans has so far in 28 years proved an unfailing barometer of business conditions. Rising volume is a forerunner of good times. The upswing started last fall and early this year," he said.

"There are indications," he added, "that the system will enjoy the best year of its 28 years in existence, and that we will loan $300,000,000 to about 1,000,000 borrowers."

Morris was in town to attend a board of directors meeting.

New D. C. Justice Inspects Office in Court Building

Preparatory to taking over his duties as an associate justice of the District Court, some time next month, Bolitha J. Laws, recently confirmed by the Senate, yesterday inspected the quarters assigned him on the third floor of the new Police Court Building as there is no space in the District Court Building for additional justices.

Justice-designate Laws, who is expected to be sworn in some time next month, was a former president of the District Bar Association. Workmen also are rushing completion of quarters for the two additional justices who were provided for in the last Congress. President Roosevelt has yet to nominate them.

Another jurist will be added to the District rolls when the additional associate justice of the United States Court of Appeals is nominated and confirmed. With the four new justices, the fall term of the courts is expected to move swiftly.

Attractive Lineup Is Planned For Next Year by RKO-Radio

Fifty-four Features and 199 Short Subjects Are Scheduled for Release in 1938-39; 'Going Native' Cast Is Complete; About Jack Powell; Jottings.

BRINGING its current season to a climax with the forthcoming release of the Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers-Irving Berlin filmusical, "Carefree," to be seen on the screen at RKO-Keith's about Labor Day, Ned E. Depinet, vice president in charge of distribution, makes known that RKO-Radio will release 54 feature productions and 199 short subjects in 1938-39.

BELL.

Scheduled for September release is "Room Service," bought as a starring vehicle for the mad Marx Brothers at the all-time high figure of $255,000. Completed, as well, is "The Mad Miss Manton," a comedy, costarring Barbara Stanwyck and Henry Fonda. The picturization of the Kipling ballad favorite, "Gunga Din," will be completed about the time "Room Service" is offered the public.

As in the past, Pandro S. Berman, vice president in charge of production, personally will produce a group of RKO's outstanding dramas, comedies and musicals. Among these will be the films of the Astaire-Rogers combination, now entering upon its sixth year.

Important negotiations, consummated during 1938, have brought Leo McCarey and Gregory La Cava, ace directors, to the RKO-Radio lot. Mr. McCarey's first picture under this company's banner will be "Love Match," going before the cameras in mid-September; Mr. La Cava's first now is in preparation.

The RKO roster of stars, headed by Astaire and Rogers, includes Claudette Colbert, Irene Dunne, Charles Boyer, Victor McLaglen, Douglas Fairbanks, jr., Cary Grant, Joan Fontaine, Barbara Stanwyck, Henry Fonda, Tommy Kelly, the "Tom Sawyer" kid; George O'Brien, Bobby Breen, Anna Neagle, Anton Walbrook, Peter Holden, the 7-year-old sensation of the Broadway stage; Anne Shirley, Jack Oakie, Lucille Ball, Joe Penner, Harry Carey and Bob Burns.

In addition to her costarring appearances with Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers will be seen in two individual productions. Claudette Colbert will be the principal in "Memory of Love," from the Bessie Breuer best-seller, and Irene Dunne and Charles Boyer will be the costars of "Love Match."

The new season, furthermore, will be signalized on the RKO-Radio lot by two feature series—the "Annabel" series and the "Saint." Jack Oakie and Lucille Ball are costarred in the first two of the series of four "Annabel" subjects, "The Affairs of Annabel" and "Annabel Takes a Tour." In these, Oakie plays a comic, hair-brained publicity man and Miss Ball a screen star. The "Saint" series, introduced by "The Saint in New York," will continue with "The Saint Strikes Back" and "The Saint in London." These are based on Leslie Charteris' detective mystery best-sellers.

Joe Penner, recently elevated to stardom, has the title role in "Mr. Doodle Kicks Off," to be released at the height of the football season. George O'Brien is to star in six action dramas and Harry Carey will be seen in "Law West of Tombstone." Anne Shirley is to appear in the leading role of "Sorority House."

"Virginia City—on the Silver Trail of Nevada" will bring the great Nevada silver rush to the screen in epic proportions. Numerous other important productions also are in prospect, including "Sixty Glorious Years," a Herbert Wilcox successor to "Victoria the Great," in Technicolor.

During the new season, RKO-Radio will distribute 18 Walt Disney short features in Technicolor, six of which will be "special attractions," and the Dionne Quintuplets will appear in another two-reel featurette. Sheila Barrett, often described as "the feminine Robert Benchley," will headline four Sheila Barrett specials.

This outlook should be a source of great comfort to Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's—not to mention the patrons of his Fifteenth street opera house.

The enrollment for parts in the sixth annual "Going Native" revue, to be staged at Loew's Capitol Theater the week of Friday, August 19, has been brought to a total of 65 by the selection of 14 principals in addition to those already announced. Producer Gene Ford has tapped Eulla Scholtz, acrobatic dancer, who recently attained some renown in Toronto, Canada, by her ability; Ellis Pike, a clever local impersonator, and six teams of shag dancers for spots in the show. The shag dancers all are resident in or near Washington. Mr. Ford states that he still is negotiating with several "Going Native" aspirants but that, tentatively, casting for this year's revue now is concluded.

It seems they sprout these juvenile screen stars in England with almost the profusion that is to be encountered on the fertile soil of Hollywood.

Comes along now another little fellow to take his place on the fringes of the group headed by Freddie Bartholomew, Terry Kilburn and some of the other youngsters who have migrated from Britain—although, so far as we know, this lad hasn't migrated, but has remained put at the Denham studios in England. He is Ted Smith, cast as the kid with Gracie Fields and Victor McLaglen in "We're Going to Be Rich," opening today on the screen at Loew's Columbia.

This precocious little shaver is only about so big, but apes the towering and slightly bulbous McLaglen in both speech and dress with highly comic effect. He has a Cockney dialect that you could cut with a dull board and by playing with complete seriousness takes his place among the more facile of the primary-grade comedians.

Master Ted may never be heard of again, any more than Sabu, the remarkable youngster in "Elephant Boy," was, but he is worth watching this once, anyway.

One learns much of the musical background of Jack Powell, the popular percussionist, who last night completed another successful week as a stellar feature of the stage bill at Loew's Capitol Theater, during a quite early morning conversation with him. Born of nonprofessional and nonmusical parents, Jack and all of his brothers and sisters—three are five of them—are musical to their finger-tips, as the saying goes. Although Jack plays a dozen musical instruments, he is known as "the drummer boy" and has executed his drumstick rhythm before most of the crowned heads of Europe on an unnumbered series of foreign tours to all parts of the world. Pianist, saxophonist, clarinetist, cornetist, violinist and whatnot, Jack elevated the drum to the dignity of a solo instrument simply because no one had ever thought of it before him and he perceived an open field for a distinctive innovation in entertainment. He began his stage career 20-odd years ago with Jack Powell's Quintet, which later grew into a sextet, all recruited from his immediate family. He later was featured with Tom Brown's Saxophone Sextet and finally branched out on his own as a "single." Ruth Powell, one of America's foremost concert violinists, is his sister. One of his brothers is a member of the Frank and Milt Britton Band and another sister is a solo cornetist. All now are happily married. When not touring, Jack lives with his family on his estate at Port Chester, N. Y. He is one of the most agreeable and unspoiled young fellows in show business. So now you know.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 11.—After picturing the history of all nations, Hollywood has found out that America has some historical background that's pretty snappy. And this coming year you're going to be shown many phases of it. "Union Pacific," "Jesse James," "Men With Wings." And now Twentieth Century - Fox will release "Splinter Fleet" under the title of "Submarine Patrol." Wish they had settled for "Anchors Aweigh," so we could remember it. Story is based on the work of our submarine chasers during the World War.

Director John Ford is the actor's delight. He's built up the parts of George Bancroft, J. Farrell MacDonald and Slim Summerville so much so that the lovers, Nancy Kelly and Richard Greene, now have a tough assignment.

Incidentally, Bancroft misunderstood an order the other day—not to let fly at Richard Greene. He let fly, knocked him out. Greene's closeup couldn't be taken till the following day.

John Ford is a lieutenant commander in the United States Naval Reserve. And the preview of "Splinter Fleet" will be held on the flagship Pennsylvania, with Admiral C. C. Block in attendance.

Did you know that George Bancroft served in the Spanish American War on that old tub, Oregon, as a gunner? When it anchored itself on a reef, he stripped to the buff, dove down to see how great the damage was, and received an appointment to Annapolis which he attended for two years.

We couldn't possibly let her go burdened with so little.

Pipe Concerns Told to Mend Unfair Ways

Virginia, Maryland, D. C., Firms Are Given F. T. C. Order.

The Federal Trade Commission yesterday ordered five manufacturers of pipes and other concrete products to cease and desist from certain unfair acts and practices "engaged in pursuant to a conspiracy to drive out competitors in the eastern seaboard territory, particularly in the District, Virginia and Maryland."

The commission found the companies "constitute a group so large and influential that they control to a substantial degree the flow of trade in concrete pipe and other products" in the territory.

It found that the companies do 75 per cent of the concrete pipe business in the District, Virginia and Maryland, and 40 per cent in the territory from New Jersey and Pennsylvania south to North Carolina.

Companies Named.

The order was directed against Arlington Concrete Pipe Corporation, South Washington, Va.; Lock Joint Pipe Co., East Orange, N. J.; F. B. and J. H. Gray, trading as The Gray Concrete Pipe & Products Co., Norfolk, Va.; Concrete Pipe & Products Co., Richmond, Va., and Jack M. and J. Scott Parrish and Harry W. Easterly, owners of all the capital stock of Concrete Pipe & Products Co.

To further the purposes of their conspiracy," the commission found, "Arlington Concrete Pipe Corporation was organized in 1934 by the other respondents, who, through stock ownership, dominate and control it, and operate it to drive competition out of Virginia, Maryland and the District.

According to findings, all officers and directors of Arlington Concrete Pipe Corporation hold some official position in either one or the other respondent companies.

Practices Listed.

Unlawful practices which the respondents were found to have employed and which they are prohibited from continuing are:

1. Refusing and failing to submit independent competitive bids.
2. Selling or submitting bids to supply, either in name of Arlington Concrete Pipe Corporation or any other jointly owned corporation, concrete pipe or other products to prospective customers.
3. Selling or submitting bids to supply, either in name of Arlington Concrete Pipe Corporation or any other respondents, concrete pipe or products to prospective customers below cost.

In its investigation the commission found that prior to February 10, 1934 when bids were to be opened on a contract to supply Arlington County with approximately $300,000 worth of pipe, a meeting was held in a Washington hotel by representatives of four of the companies. Prices of two of the companies were revised after the meeting.

On May 16 the county awarded the contract to the two low bidders, and on May 16 the Arlington Concrete Pipe Corporation was organized, a plant was constructed, and the contract was assigned to it by the low bidders.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 11 (AP).—Jack M. Parrish, president of the Concrete Pipe & Products Co., said tonight that the Federal Trade Commission's order alleging "conspiracy" between five concrete pipe companies will be appealed to a Federal Circuit Court of Appeals "where the investigator, prosecutor, judge and jury are not combined in one body as with the Trade Commission."

The decision "did not accord with the facts as found by the commission's trial examiner and ignored many of the important conclusions reached by the examiner who heard the lengthy evidence," Parrish said.

"The Arlington company," he added, "was organized when the national recovery act was in effect, with the approval of Arlington County authorities and Government officials, to give employment in Arlington County and save that county approximately $80,000 on the cost of pipe."

Lewis Acts to End C. I. O. Affiliates' West Coast Rift

Chairman John L. Lewis yesterday undertook to end the rift among local unions of C. I. O. affiliates, aroused by charges of Communist leadership on the West Coast, which has been described as threatening the success of plans to organize a California State Industrial Union Council to put the organization on a permanent basis.

Several Los Angeles unions have attacked plans for the State convention, which was called for August 20-21 in that city by Harry Bridges, West Coast director of the C. I. O., frequent target of charges of Communist leanings. John Brophy, national director of the C. I. O., announced last night that the California convention was called at the request of the C. I. O. national office and that Lewis had designated him to attend as "national C. I. O. representative."

"The ill-advised action of several Los Angeles locals in withdrawing from the city industrial union council and criticizing the calling of the State convention," he said, "already has been emphatically repudiated by the officers of two of the international unions concerned."

Earle Defies Prosecutor to Confront Judge

By the United Press.

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 11.—Gov. George H. Earle, waiving his Constitutional immunity from arrest, challenged District Attorney Carl B. Shelley tonight to take him and his 13 appointees and Democratic associates facing graft charges before a magistrate for arraignment.

Earle, Democratic nominee for United States Senator, issued the challenge in his first public statement since both the Legislative and grand jury investigations of the charges were halted Monday by Chief Justice John W. Kephart until the Supreme Court rules next month on constitutionality of laws enacted by the special Legislature to block the grand jury and "publicly air" the evidence at House committee hearings.

"I don't want this delayed a day longer," Earle said in a radio address over a Pennsylvania network. "I want the facts, all of them, out in the open—and the sooner the better.

"The district attorney, if he is an honest public official and not merely the tool of a corrupt political machine, has the solution in his own hands. He can arrest every one of the accused, present his evidence before a magistrate, and if that evidence stands up the accused can be held for immediate indictment and trial. In that way the accused can face their accusers and the public can learn the facts.

"I call upon the district attorney of Dauphin County to arrest me tomorrow. I call upon him to arrest anyone else whom he accused of wrongdoing . . .

"I have given fair play to every group of our population. Now, facing a vicious political attack because I have dared to challenge the industrial and political lords of this State, I demand fair play for the Governor of the Commonwealth—demand the simple justice guaranteed to any citizen, the right to meet my accusers face to face and publicly refute their charges."

The principal accuser was former Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti, defeated candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination whom Earle fired from his cabinet for refusing to turn over proof of his primary campaign charges of political coercion, extortion, blackmail and conspiracy to defraud the Commonwealth. Margiotti insisted upon a grand jury investigation and has assisted Shelley in preparations for one.

"So long as the grand jury procedure is followed," Earle said tonight, "its secret sessions can be prolonged and indictments can be returned against prominent Democratic officials just before election day, thereby wrecking the liberal cause in Pennsylvania, and trials to establish the truth need not take place until the election is over and the damage done."

1st Arkansas District Race Still Is in Doubt

Little Rock, Ark., Aug. 11 (U.P.).—Winner of the Democratic nomination for Congress in the First Arkansas District remained in doubt tonight and will be determined in the official canvass tomorrow.

Representative W. J. Driver, member of the Lower House for ten terms, and his opponent, State Senator E. G. Gathings, each contended he was winner on the basis of unofficial tabulations. According to one unofficial count, Driver was ten votes ahead. Gathings was winner by 230 votes, another unofficial tabulation showed.

Clever Seal Steals $1,400,000 Movie Away From Stars

Hollywood, Aug. 11 (AP).—Slicker, the seal, gave Hollywood the horse laugh today. And Hollywood deserved it.

The 4-year-old bewhiskered playboy of the Pacific is the most surprising movie news of the week: He "stole" a $1,400,000 picture.

The larceny was committed under the noses of George Raft, Dorothy Lamour and John Barrymore, who had been assured by some of our brighter minds that there was nothing to worry about, because a seal couldn't act.

Slicker showed them. He plays the buddy of Raft the pirate. When Raft is happy, Slicker claps his flippers. When his master is shot, Slicker cries. Frequently, he kisses Raft with his damp muzzle. He even kisses Dorothy Lamour.

His liveliest moment is when he dives into a tub of lemonade.

Roosevelt Aims On Trial, Farley Tells Meeting

By the Associated Press.

Mackinac Island, Mich., Aug. 11.—Declaring "the Roosevelt policies are on trial," Chairman James A. Farley of the Democratic National Committee appealed tonight for the return of a New Deal Congress to Washington.

The Postmaster General spoke at a testimonial dinner staged in his honor by Michigan Democrats. Guests included Gov. Murphy.

Farley dubbed the 1938 campaign "only a sham battle" so far as the Republican Party is concerned. "They know if Democratic headquarters closed its doors tomorrow, if not a Democratic speech were made," he said, "the Senate and the House of Representatives would remain Democratic. Their eyes are on 1940."

"Their only purpose this year is to try to break down the popularity of the President, with the forlorn hope that two years hence they may be able to convince the people the New Deal has failed and that they should put their trust in Mr. Hoover, or Mr. Landon, or Mr. Vandenberg, or some equally unimpressive figurehead."

Farley defended New Deal spending, hailing the "clean" administration of work relief undertakings and comparing the public debt favorably with the indebtedness of foreign nations.

"Billions of dollars have been expended," he pointed out, "but there have been no Teapot Dome scandals, no little black satchels with $100,000 in bills. About the worst that has been alleged is that some fellow has chiseled a basketful of groceries that he might have been able to pay for."

"Has Not Cured Every Ill."

The speaker conceded the Roosevelt Administration "has not cured every ill, and perhaps has not done everything as well as it could have been done had the emergency been less pressing."

"But," he said, "it has fulfilled, as far as it was humanly possible, the hopes of our people when they turned thumbs down on a drifting, reactionary regime and charged Franklin D. Roosevelt with the task of saving the country."

Interest Rate.

Twenty copies of a baseball uniform borrowed from the Virginia Military Institute for "Brother Rat" will be sent to V. M. I. with Warner Bros.' compliments when the picture is finished.

Martin Minority Controls Union, Says Ex-Leader

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Detroit, Aug. 11.—Richard Frankensteen, one of the ousted vice presidents of the United Automobile Workers, tonight charged that Homer Martin, president of the union, had installed in key positions in the union 15 members of the national committee of the Independent Labor League, left wing minority group led by Jay Lovestone, former secretary of the American Communist Party, who now assails the Communists as a "reactionary, bureaucratic clique."

Setting a precedent in American labor annals, Frankensteen called before the microphone of a Detroit radio station tonight officers of the Packard, Plymouth and Dodge local unions to protest against Martin's so-called anti-Communist purge of the auto workers' union.

Meanwhile, Martin offered a reward of $1,000 for the apprehension of the person or persons who set off a black powder bomb last night in Frankensteen's unused two-car garage.

His broadcast tonight was made possible, Frankensteen said, by a contribution from Plymouth Local 51, whose president, Leo Lamotte, has generally fought Martin on the union's executive board.

The Plymouth local, claiming 12,000 members, is one of the larger ones in the U. A. W. Pledges of loyalty were received from Curt Murdock, chairman of the plant bargaining committee of the Packard local, and John Zaremba, secretary of the big Dodge local. Zaremba is a candidate for State Representative in the Michigan Legislature in the current primary campaign and his indorsement by the C. I. O.'s labor non-partisan league last Saturday drew the ire of Martin, despite the fact that Martin is State chairman of the league.

Many of those listed by Frankensteen deny they are Lovestoneites.

10,000 Applaud Guest Leader At Watergate

Van Hoogstraten Conducts Symphony as Breeze Refreshes Listeners.

Nearly 10,000 music listeners cooled off at the Watergate last night—an evening that brought to the summer concerts' site not rain, but brisk music led by Guest Conductor Willem van Hoogstraten.

Mr. van Hoogstraten's conducting was, indeed, as refreshing as the breeze that blew off the river fluttering the National Symphony's brand new flag over the orchestra shell. Presenting the program that rain washed out the night before, the visiting Hollander stirred up real enthusiasm, and may consider himself a most welcome guest as today he prepares his second Watergate program to be given Sunday night.

The program started off last night with music by Beethoven, and stayed with that composer until intermission time. Beginning with a meticulously timed performance of the dramatic "Fidelio" overture, Mr. van Hoogstraten continued with an equally clean, equally dynamic reading of the Eighth Symphony. The symphony is breezy Bethoven, and the conductor did a creditable job of laying off the heavy side of symphonic treatment. It was presented as the lilting, melodic piece of music that it is—perfect for a midsummer night's listening.

While Mr. van Hoogstraten did exacting work with this Beethoven music, he saved his most difficult job for later in the evening. And it was in the last half of the program that he showed what a painstaking conductor and gifted musician he is. I don't know how well Richard Strauss' tone poem, "Don Juan," carried through the vast Watergate—possibly the performance wasn't so effective in the remote areas. But in the favorably located sections it was colorful and moving. It is a work so crowded with subtle tone effects that it may not be too well suited to outdoor performance. But certainly Mr. van Hoogstraten did all he could to make it tonally rich.

There followed the eight engaging Russian Folk-Songs of Liadov. Each number in the suite is simple and forthright, many of them naive melodies, yet the whole is a skillfully worked out composition. Last night's conductor did not find the piece too light to deserve anything but skillful direction.

Debussy's "Festivals" came from the shell with the brilliance and dazzle that those who know this score always hope for, but don't always get. Possibly it's too frequently played as realistic and descriptive. The conductor last night approached it as the piece of impressionism that it is; brought it off successfully by not playing too hard for brilliance.

Three of Brahms' Hungarian Dances, numbers 20, 2 and 1, brought the concert to the rousing close the audience wished for. At any rate the applause was whole-hearted and unreserved.

The appearance of van Hoogstraten at the Watergate is unquestionably one of the treats of this summer's symphony schedule.

Jones Assailed In Putting Lien Ahead of Pay

RFC Collects as Workers Sue in Bankruptcy; C. I. O. Angered.

Denunciation of Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the RFC, for placing an RFC mortgage lien above claims for wages in the case of a bankrupt coal company came yesterday from the forces of John L. Lewis.

In an article headed "Cold as a Fish," the United Mine Workers Journal, organ of Lewis' own union, published, with caustic comment, correspondence between Lewis and Jones on the subject. The Journal said the correspondence "will throw a bright light upon the administration of the RFC, whose chairman, Jesse H. Jones, is reported to have Presidential aspirations."

In a letter dated July 12, Lewis wrote to Jones:

"The Colonial Iron Company, of Riddlesburg, Pa., owing the RFC $235,000, is now in bankruptcy.

"Among the company's assets is about 14,000 tons of pig iron produced at furnaces by the company's workmen, who have filed some 450 labor claims, aggregating $30,000, in the bankruptcy estate.

"They are now advised that the RFC will assert its mortgage liens over these assets produced by their labor to the exclusion of their unpaid wages.

"Without discussing legal equations involved, I respectfully suggest that the inherent equity of these wage claims is obvious, and that an agency of our government can hardly afford to make itself the beneficiary of the unpaid labor of these workers.

"The statute authorizing the credit extended in this instance asserts that it is 'for the purpose of increasing and maintaining the employment of labor.' It would be somewhat ironical if the administration of the act led to the appropriation of labor without compensation."

Jones replied on July 18:

"I am advised by our legal division that, under the statutes pursuant to which this corporation derives authority, it has no legal right voluntarily to subordinate its lien to the claims of wage earners."

On which the Journal commented:

"No playwright could put in the mouth of a money grubber a more summary and contemptuous rejection of these wage claims. It will be interesting to follow the struggle of this Federal relief agency to enjoy without compensation the long hours of sweat and irksome toil of these impoverished workers."

DIRECTION SIDNEY LUST

Are you under the impression that good used cars are expensive? Well, you're in for a pleasant surprise. Prices on used cars have been materially reduced, and at the present time are at a new low.

For example, here are just a few of the many bargains that have appeared in The Post this week:

FORD—1936 Tudor De Luxe Sedan, black baked enamel original factory finish; driven 14,000 miles by a high Govt. official; does not burn oil; $369; $69 down, $21 month; no indorsers.

CHEVROLET—1936 Master 4-dr. Trunk Sedan. Will command attention everywhere. Beautiful black; dual equipment; mohair upholstery. Can't be beat for $485.

STUDEBAKER—1935 Dictator Custom Sedan. Black finish, clean interior; 5 good tires; owner's name on request. Only $347.

BUICK—1934 middle-size convertible coupe; newly painted Buick colors; good tires; excellent motor; $349; $49 down, balance $21 month.

DODGE—1934 Sedan. Bring a little cash and drive it away. Only $149. Exceptional opportunity for low-cost transportation at a bargain price.

PLYMOUTH—1936 De Luxe 2-dr. Touring Sedan. Condition shows care. Handsome black finish; whitewall tires. Clean as a pin and ready to roll. $435.

Why not take advantage of the current low prices and trade in your old car for a late model used car? The liberal terms and attractive prices bring the comforts and conveniences of a good used car within the reach of everyone. # MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Man Tells Strange Dilemma of Loving Two Women, 'As if They Were One Person;' Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young man 24 years of age. During the past three years I have been going with two girls simultaneously. Neither knows of the existence of the other. I have learned to care for them both, more as if they were one person than two. I know it sounds unbelievable that such a situation could exist—but believe me when I say that it does, and that I have tried to figure it out, to no avail.

* * * *

Each girl seems to be that mythical ideal that every man carries in his mind. If one has some little fault, it seems easy to overlook because the other has a compensating virtue. When one can't go to a party or dance with me, I know I can always depend on the other one. I won't bore you with details. Sufficient to say that it is an ideal set-up as it now stands, but both girls are beginning to hint matrimony. I don't need to be told it is against the law to marry two women; but it seems as if my whole life would be ruined if I had to give up either. Question: what to do? —ALBERT.

* * * *

DEAR ALBERT: In case you are trying to be funny, I beg leave to report that I have had much funnier letters of a genuinely farcial type; and in case you are piteously in earnest, you ought to have your ears boxed. The shock might restore your perspective. It's always hard to differentiate between a practical joker and a fool. I believe the main difference is that the former capitalizes his imbecility whereas the latter strives wistfully to correct it.

* * * *

We shall assume, for purposes of discussion that you are trying to overcome your handicap. Under the circumstances as described above, I suggest you break down and confide to each girl the existence of her hitherto unsuspected rival, giving to each a detailed explanation of how-come you've duped her all along into believing she was your one and only true love. The reaction of each lady to the (tall?) story may serve to throw more light on her romantic desirability. Maybe, after they have done reacting, so to speak, you will find that one or the other no longer measures up, entirely and in all ways, to "that mythical ideal that every man carries in his mind." Maybe the veneer of gentle femininity will crack under the strain of the disclosed deception and the real woman underneath will emerge as a holy terror from whose wrathful reproach you will pray heaven to be delivered, now and forever, amen.

* * * *

In any event, that is one enterprising way of attempting to solve the mystery of which girl of the two most deeply loves, understands and accepts you; really is your mental and spiritual complement, don't you know. Of course, if both of them react in such a way as to indicate that your devotion to them as a team is reciprocated in kind; that neither is willing to live without you; if each gives evidence of intending to be as wise as the serpent and as gentle as the dove in dealing with the disclosure and its repercussive implications—then I suggest that you arrange a grand get-together party for the three of you, and fight it out on that basis, if it takes all summer.

* * * *

Whereas each lady, inspired by the remotely possible desire to retain claim to such a really remarkable suitor, might contrive to play a masterly, noncommittal game of romantic poker in tete-a-tete session with yourself, it goes without saying that a lot more cards would eventually be laid face up on the table, if the three of you got together. You really owe it to yourself to do it. After all, you simply can't arrive at an honest estimate of the two girls' comparative merits until you have appraised them, point by point, in open competition.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Aug. 11.

I SUPPOSE the happiest phase of young America's life is when, to cop the dear old line, "Boy meets girl." The saddest, without a doubt, is when he doesn't. Heaven alone knows how many thousands, nay millions, of young people walk the country's streets, lonely and anxious for companionship. My spouse tells me that the most tragic times of his early years spent wandering the Midlde West in the newspaper business were those when he had no way of meeting the pretty girls he saw and inviting them to have a chocolate soda.

New York is even worse, in this regard. There's the hysterical rush of this insane town, the armor that even the youngsters assume. One day a college kid, just handed his sheepskin, strolled Forty-second street with a pal. They were lonely. They saw pretty girls. There was no way of meeting them properly—or at all. So an idea was born. The college lad, whose name was Joseph Clauson, figured some way to bring such lovely youngsters together. The result of Joe's figuring was the "Introductions by Clauson," complete with offices and files. For a modest fee, solitary lads of both sexes register, filling out enormous questionnaires. Preferences in looks, types of mind, dances and all that stuff. The clients, by checking, meet. "Would you like a lad who is good at the rumba?" "No, I want a wonderful waltzer." That's just one phase of this interesting thing.

All right—call this a business if you choose. But a youngster tried to do something for the unhappy problem of young people, boys and girls, alone in our cities. I hope it is properly run, and works out. I went up to see this Clauson kid, and feel sure he is honest about it. I could tell stories my helpmate has told me, of his solitary newspaper days as a kid, that would reduce you to tears. There are thousands like that. My niece Barbara, of Cornell, tells me that they have a "date club" run something like this. But Joe's is far more important!

* * * *

I sit here punching away, dying of heat and humidity, and a headline on a society page stares up at me. "Round of Parties at Southampton!" Oh, shut up!

How to Consume Fried Chicken Is Controversy of the Moment

Started in Atlanta, the Debate Over Forks and Fingers Has Spread Northward; Local Home Economists Express Their Views.

By The Post Food Editor.

THE ENGROSSING and potent question of how to eat fried chicken in public has been raised once more. It seethed into prominence a short time ago when Mayor Hartsfield, of Atlanta, visibly balked at publicly grappling with knife and fork over big halves of chicken. The downhearted gentleman from Georgia feels if you serve Southern fried chicken in large slabs, you're creating manual labor.

His Honor gets around to lots of banquets. He says he's weary of trying to dissect half a chicken while the "dratted" carcass slides all over his plate—or off. A pitiful candid camera shot of Mayor Hartsfield showed him wedged shoulder to shoulder with fellow guests, all of them struggling away with their half birds, ghastly pretenses of contentment shadowing their faces. Soon the Governor of Georgia was deep in the chicken-eating controversy.

Suggest Ruffled "Skirts."

Washington, being betwixt and between South and North, consumes staggering quantities of chicken. The controversial bird is more popular than ever this month, with its price tags reading less than certain meats. Local home economists and other authorities have been queried as to their stand on the question.

Miss Ruth Van Deeman, chief of the Information Division, United States Bureau of Home Economics, has firm convictions on chicken consumption. She feels that for most enjoyment, fried chicken should be eaten in the sanctity of one's home, or at a good old-fashioned picnic. Only at these two havens of comfort can chicken be eaten with the fingers.

She believes dictums of common sense govern chicken eating, for at a casual outing it's not a tragedy to grease your hands or even a washable cotton frock. She says, however, that time, place and circumstances make it necessary to eat fried chicken with knife and fork at public places.

Opposes Method in Public.

Mary Mason, blithely known as Cousin Mary to her WRC Home Forum fans, has the courage of her convistions (and the Southern Mayors caucus, too). She gaily says "Yes!" to eating chicken with the fingers. She cites the Continental custom of enjoying hearts of lettuce, and bacon strips by means of digit control, and everyone knows the French and Italians know a few tricks about fine foods. Miss Mason has traveled extensively during her public career, and she has observed particularly the Oriental habit of eating food to suit one's personal convenience. She believes good food should be enjoyed for its own sake, rather than for uncomfortable convention.

Miss Margaret A. Lunn, manager of the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women, is opposed to eating any food in public or private with the fingers. Miss Lunn believes that cutlery has been designed for just such delicate and exacting tasks as cutting chicken. Miss Lunn's professional association with fine foods and service leads her to believe the quality of cooking has a thing or two to do with simplified chicken eating. She insists if fried chicken is tender and thoroughly cooked, it will fall from the bone when cut with knife and fork.

Mrs. Strickland Gillilan, social leader, takes all culinary controversies in here stride. She declines to be oppressed over Mayor Hartsfield's melancholia. Instead she makes this wry comment about her past observations on the subject. "It's according to the age of the guest; I've noticed that all the older boys like to grab ahold of a chicken." Whether this variety is of the same lineage as the Mayor's will forever be a moot question. In more serious vein, Mrs. Gillilan hastens to add she's never seen fried chicken that was dry enough to handle properly with the fingers.

Best Meat Nearest Bone.

Miss Elinor Lee, home economist for WJSV, is a strong exponent of cutting the chicken at the joints. "It looks much better that way," explained Miss Lee, "and attains that nice golden brown crust that you can't get so well using larger pieces. Then it's not only easier to handle, but it looks much better on a platter. I always use a garnish of parsley, or watercress, and perhaps radish roses to give color contrast.

As to eating the chicken, Miss Lee advises starting in with a knife and fork 'to prove that you are a lady or gentleman," and then later getting down to work with the fingers.

Miss Lee is enthusiastic about the following method of frying chicken: Cut up chicken and soak in a batter of milk, egg and seasoning overnight in the refrigerator. The next day dip cracker crumbs and fry.

Margaret Wallace, recognized authority of etiquette, has this to say: "Good taste and good usage requires that chicken be eaten with knife and fork. The custom, so much in prominence a while ago, of picking fried chicken up in one hand has vanished. It is not considered proper any longer.

Miss Wallace was perfection of all that an etiquette authority should be as she rang the death knell to the Georgian Mayor's cause. "But," she added, quite unofficially, and with a twinkle in her eyes, "it does taste good the other way."

MENUS FOR TODAY

Polka-Dots Still A Heavy Favorite For Autumn Wear

Paris (U.P.).—Polka dots, if they be the size of a pinhead or of a dollar, continue to be heavy favorites for summer and early autumn wear. Paris not only sanctions "spots" for morning ad afternoon dresses, but features them in many evening gowns.

While the white dot on a classic background of navy or black or brown is seen most often, the advent of surah silk and the new pique prints brings with it new polka dot color combinations. There is Mainbocher's suit blouse of yellow surah dotted with red and black—with matching gloves. It is worn with a gray or black suit or combined with large black and white dotted skirt and coat with a tunic-length tight blouse of bright red and white dots.

Patou makes a very wearable afternoon dress of navy silk with tiny pink dots. A high collar and narrow belt are made of plain pink silk.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Hip-Slimming Program for Labor Day and New Fall Dresses Should Start Now.

By Ida Jean Kain.

THE GIRLS who played tennis this summer, swam every day and hiked before breakfast in regular Girl Scout fashion will have perfect figures by mid-August, but the rest of us need a little serious exercise, particularly in the region of the hips. Not only does this portion of the figure tend to spread with a summer's inactivity, but it loses its firm contour.

To really get in shape by Labor Day, your hip-slimming program should consist of spanking, rolling and kicking. The spanking firms the hips, rolling smooths, and kicking reduces. If you have been lazy this summer you will need all three measures, and they are combined for you in a compact little program that will reduce your hipline almost before you know it.

ROLLING

POSITION: Lying stretched out on the back on the floor, arms straight up and legs down so that you are at full extension.

MOVEMENT: Roll clear over on the stomach, back across the hipline, and over on the stomach again. This is a very easy exercise but you will like its results.

Now to knock off those little bulges!

POSITION: Sit up, cross the feet at the ankles and draw them up close to the buttocks. Place the hands on the floor at either side.

MOVEMENT: Rock from side to side, going away over on the thighs. Rest the thigh flat on the floor, rock back across the derriere, and over on the other thighline.

SPANKING

And here is a spanking good exercise!

POSITION: Sitting on the floor, hands slightly back, arms straight. Have the feet together and straight out on the floor.

MOVEMENT: Holding the feet together, spank up and down as you rotate the hips from one side to the other, turning so that you hit those side bulges. By rotating the hips you don't miss a bump!

Now, maybe that's enough exercise for you, but if you need to slim the hipline down by several inches, that calls for kicking, or leg swinging. One of the best exercises of this type is extremely simple. You merely stand with one hand placed against the door jamb for support and swing the outside leg back and forth, bringing it as far up in back as possible. Begin with ten times on either side and later increase to 100—if you can take it! The secret of success with your exercise is to begin slowly and to work up gradually.

Gelatin Recipes Are Fan's Choice For Post's Contest

"There is no limit to the versatility of gelatin. Literally from soup to dessert you can depend on it for a cool, appetizing result." This was the opening remark in a five-page letter received by the food editor from Mrs. J. D. Chamberlain, 1348 Kenyon street northwest. This helpful food page follower made the benefits of gelatin sound so enticing that it will be the theme of next week's recipe contest.

Mrs. Chamberlain wrote: "I don't recommend using gelatin in several forms at one meal. Heaven forbid. But whatever use is made of the gelatin, food concocted from it can be prepared well in advance." As there are literally thousands of foods possible as a result of mold experiments, gelatin desserts have been selected for contestants to try.

A fresh or canned fruit gelatin dessert may be your forte. You may surpass as a creator of dainty Bavarian or Spanish creams, wine jellies or puddings. If so, mail your tested entry at once to Alice Clayton, Post Food Editor. Prizes for the best gelatin recipes are $3, $2 and $1 each for three additional awards. All recipes must be received before August 20.

Plentiful Now in Washington, Virginia, Maryland, Corn Heads List of Favorite Summer Vegetables

Argument Perpetual as to Whether It's Best Eaten From Cob.

Many Kinds of Maize All Taste Equally Well When Cooked Right.

By Alice Clayton.
The Post Food Editor.

SWEET sugar corn graciously takes its place at the head of the list of summer vegetable favorites. Just as in periodic chicken controversies, the only interrogation ever raised over corn is whether to eat it from the cob or to cut it for less atmosphere and more comfort. Rabid corn connoisseurs will concede not one kernel in their loyalty to taking their corn straight or temperately.

The aborigines believed that corn was the gift of their Great Spirit, so they primitively linked their most stable grain with religous symbols. A cursory glance at any museums' Indian woven fabics indicates reverence for the beloved ear of corn, for it was used as symbolically as their tepees.

Timid colonists landing in New England were even more astonished to bring to life bean pods heavy with red, yellow and blue grains of maize. These kernels proved to be undisputably 100 per cent American, for the cheerful Chief Squanto and fellow Algonquins taught early settlers to plant, plow, preserve and grind corn into flour. First feeble attempts to serve this grain consisted in boiling it with lye, making it into hominy.

Many Varieties.

Sweet green corn is the nomenclature of modern table maize, but there are such big brothers as field corn, and the excitingly tinted purplish-black Mexican corn, regretably lacking in most city markets. The most favored of this family is the sugar corn of the Northern States which shows to its best advantage for immediate canning or eating in the form of Golden Cross Bantam. This is but one of the improved hybrids to attain an even texture, consistency of grain, and regularity of size and shape as a result of another miracle of scientific breeding. Corn is especially plentiful throughout Washington, Maryland and Virginia gardens. Years ago when I used to visit a tiny Maryland town with the impressive biblical name of Joppa, I was delighted with its verdant countryside after the drabness of a cosmopolitian city. In every truck garden or patch behind the houses were rows of bright green and golden corn stalks.

With sweet corn at its prime now, and plentifully and economically ranged, consumers' questions have arisen on the selection, storing and preparation of this peak vegetable. The United States Bureau of Home Economics, has prepared some timely tips on corn buying as follow:

Husks Should Be Green.

SELECTION. When buying sweet corn on the market—or selecting it from the garden—look for ears that are bound up in fresh green husks. If the husks are dry or strawcolored, the corn is probably overmature or has been damaged.

Immature corn may not be recognizable until the corn husk is peeled back. If the corn has not reached the right stage of maturity for eating, the kernels will be small and very soft. Such corn lacks flavor after cooking. Corn that is just right for eating will have a well-filled ear, bright, plump, milky kernels, that are just firm enough to offer a little resistance to pressure. It will be yellow, white or black, depending on the variety.

Look for worm injury in an ear of corn. This usually starts on the tip of the ear and works down. Along the side of the corn ear it is extremely objectionable.

STORAGE. Tender corn, if not eaten soon, will toughen. Part of the sugar in the kernels changes over into starch and makes the corn less sweet. If it isn't possible to use the corn right away it should be shucked and cooled immediately and kept in the coldest part of the refrigerator.

Succotash Popular.

To keep corn from drying out in the refrigerator, wrap in a damp cloth or keep in the special vegetable box. Even under these ideal pre-cooling conditions, shippers do not try to keep corn over 4 to 8 days.

PREPARATION. One corn dish that has left little room for improvement through the years is succotash, the white man's version of Indian misickquatash. The basic rule for succotash is that beans and green corn be stewed together, usually half and half, with or without salt pork. The beans may be white, green or speckled, and the seasoning the cook's inspiration. With Indian women the association betwen beans and corn began in the field. They planted both in the same hill and as the corn grew the bean vines twined around the stalks.

A cool back yard, a couple of contented little boys and corn on the cob. Similar summer idyls are being duplicated all over Washington, for sweet corn is inexpensive, plentiful and tender. Monroe Johnson and Michael Berla have quite forgotten the photographer in their abandonment.

Post Food Contest Winners Announced

By The Post Food Editor.

WHEN the tomato was circumspectly transported from tropical America to Europe in the sixteenth century, it was suspiciously accepted as being poisonous, and was immediately dubbed the love apple. To make matters worse, an overdiscreet botanist of that day ultimatumed that the bulbous looking fruit "had little nourishment for the bodie.

Contest entrants in last week's recipe competition are doubtless ardent tomato addicts, for their contributions contained many new ways of utilizing this plentiful Washington product.

Alphabetical Chowder.

First award of $3 goes to Miss Mary Lou Cameron, 1929 Sixteth street northwest, tomato chowder. Her recipe is one that combines high food value with rich, spicy flavor. No normal family could wish for a more tangy or satisfying one-dish meal during sultry weather than Miss Cameron's savory chowder. Her ingredients are full of vitamins C and A and some B+ and iron.

TOMATO CHOWDER.

2 cups fresh tomatoes
2 slices fat salt pork, cut in small pieces
2 medium sized onions, sliced
2 cups potatoes, cut in ½-in. cubes
2 cups boiling water
2 cups milk
¼ teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon minced parsley
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon flour

Fry the pork until crisp in a deep kettle. Cook onion in fat 5 minutes. Add potatoes and boiling water. Simmer slowly until potatoes are nearly done, then add the tomatoes, cut in small pieces. Continue cooking slowly for 20 minutes longer. Bring milk to scalding point and add the soda to chowder. Pour in the milk gradually. Add seasonings. Bring to boiling point and thicken with butter and flour blended. Serve hot.

The Campbells Are Coming!

Second prize of $2 went to Mrs. Donald Campbell, 4306 Tenth street northeast. Mrs. Campbell's tomato entry has a name as Scotch as Lorna Doone, but ingredients of this salad are anything but Scotch. Rose and thistle salad contains colorful, easily digested garden vegetables plus a piquancy of Roquefort and lemon juice. The attractive design of tomato and radish roses with the more decided sharpness of onion provides an unforgetable eating experience.

ROSE AND THISTLE SALAD.

Peel and chill 6 tomatoes. Cut each down from the top nearly to the bottom into 6 sections. Partly fill with 6 stalks of diced celery, top with Roquefort dressing, sprinkle with ½ teaspoon chopped pimiento and place each on a lettuce leaf on a chilled plate. Encircle with red button radish roses and spring onion thistles, alternately. For Roquefort dressing, beat ⅓ pound of cheese, 2 tablespoons lemon juice and 6 tablespoons mayonnaise thoroughly. For thistles, cut onions into 2½ inch lengths. Stand them on end and cut down several times nearly to bottom like a paint brush. Make radish roses, and leave them and thistles in ice water an hour or more to open and curl. The pale green and white thistles are lovely.

Marmalade That Isn't Sweet.

Mrs. Alice Pride, 2462 Ontario road northwest, receives an award of $1 for tomato marmalade. Hers is a marmalade that not only isn't sweet, but which has an unmistakable tartness. The effect is decidedly zestful for doldrum appetites. The ascorbic acid, so essential to the system especially in the summer, is not lost in the preserving of Mrs. Pride's tomato marmalade. In fact, the food value is strengthened through the addition of raisins and lemons.

Tomato Marmalade.

4 pounds ripe, yellow tomatoes
4 lemons, cut in thin slices
½ cup seeded raisins
3 pounds sugar

Skin the tomatoes and slice. Cut lemons into very thin slivers and remove seeds. Add to the tomatoes ½ cup of raisins. Bring the mixed ingredients to the simmering point and add 3 pounds sugar. Cook slowly until thick. Place mixture in glasses and seal.

Experiments Bring Results.

Mme. Elena de Sayn, 1026 Fifteenth street northwest, receives a $1 prize for her piquant tomato salad. Mme. de Sayn's recipe is the outcome of experimenting on the part of this talented continental virtuoso. She enjoys playing around with novel food arrangements almost as much as she likes her violin, which she has made famous here in the District as the guest artist of Mrs. Roosevelt. The use of sweet, young celery and an assortment of fresh sea food with firm, ripe tomatoes is a mild and pleasing one, especially when spiked with Roquefort or French dressing.

Mme. de Sayn.

Piquant Tomato Salad.

½ pound crab meat
¼ pound shredded shrimp
¼ pound lobster
Juice of ½ lemon, strained
Add heaping teaspoonfull mayonnaise
1 stoke of onion, chopped fine
A few stalks parsley, chopped without the stems

Mix and add several chopped celery hearts
3 young shredded carrots
1 diced cucumber
Salt to taste (preferably vegetable salt)
The scooped part of several ripe diced tomatoes

Place the above mixture and the tomato hulls in the refrigerator over night. When ready to serve, fill the chilled tomato shells with ingredients, chop and sprinkle 1 hard boiled egg and minced parsley over the salad and serve on a bed of chicory or watercress.

Two in One.

Miss Mary Cole, 113 East Church street, Frederick, Md., also wins a $1 award. She calls her entry Tomato One-Dish Meal, and no other name could better describe it.

Tomato One-Dish Meal.

Soak 8 ¼-inch slices of eggplant in salted water ½ hour; drain; dip in beaten egg and milk mixture, then in cracker meal; fry in deep hot fat (375 degrees); drain on absorbent paper, and salt. In same manner, dip and fry 8 tomato slices; arrange on eggplant in flat baking dish; sweeten to taste with small amount of sugar. Top with 1-3 cup coarse bread crumbs and ¾ cup grated cheese. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 30 minutes.

CONSUMERS COUNSEL

Spicy Cookie Recipe Is Requested by Home-Maker.

THE Consumers' Counsel is not yet a month old and already Washington homemakers have been querying the food editor on a number of things. Requests for simple summer preserving, pickling and cookie baking are consumers' problems discussed today. It is a source of encouragement to the counsel to realize the local interest aroused in this column. Continue mailing your culinary questions and suggestions to Alice Clayton, Post Food Editor.

Spicy Cookies Wanted.

Mrs. J. Charles Maguire, 3204 Nineteenth street northwest, desires a plain dropped cookie that can be spiked to take on a gingery tang.

Graham Crisps.

Mix together 4 tablespoons cream, ½ cup coarse entire white flour and ¼ teaspoon salt. Drop by teaspoons on greased tin sheets or on an inverted pan. With a wet fork spread very thin in rounds and bake at 350 degrees F. until crisp and delicately brown. To add spice to this easy little basic recipe, sift into the flour a small pinch of cinnamon, mace and nutmeg.

Craving for Brandied Peaches.

DEAR MISS CLAYTON: I wonder if you can tell me the amount of brandy to put in preserved peaches. I want to put some peaches up while they are good. Thank you.

THERESA BROOKE.
23 U street northeast.

Brandied peaches are not only very easy to prepare, but an inexpensive way of always maintaining a rich supply of spice for fall and winter meat or fowl dishes. The following recipe is a reliable one for any type of brandied fresh fruit:

Select peaches, apricots or desired fruit which is slightly under ripe. Immerse fruit in boiling water for about one minute or until skin will slip off easily. Plunge into cold water for a few seconds to prevent softening of fruit. Weigh the fruit and sugar, allowing ¾ pound of sugar in alternate layers in a large sauce pan, after having peeled, halved and removed the stones of the fruit. Cover the pan, let stand over night to extract juice. In the morning heat the mixture slowly to boiling point, stirring carefully to avoid breaking the fruit. Cook slowly until fruit is tender and clear and fill with the boiling syrup. For brandying follow the preceding directions to the point where the fruit has been packed in jars. Measure syrup, boil it rapidly until volume has been reduced by one half. Remove from stove, cool slightly, add an equal measure of brandy. Fill the jars with the syrup and seal. Six medium peaches or one pound will fill a pint jar.

Bread and Butter Pickles.

Mrs. Stewart Webster, 4607 Chestnut street, Bethesda, Md., requests a tangy recipe for bread and butter pickles.

Pickled Cucumber Rings.

Pare 1 or 2 large cucumbers and cut in ¼-inch slices. With cookie cutter make each slice perfectly round and with a small cutter or top of catsup bottle, remove seeds. For 1 quart rings add 2 tablespoons salt and cover with hot water. Let stand until cold, then drain and pack in a glass jar. Mix ½ tablespoon salt, ½ tablespoon sugar, 1 teaspoon cloves and 1 teaspoon cinnamon and put on top of rings. Add vinegar to cover equivalent to about ½ cup. Measure and put aside ½ cup sugar. Each morning add 1 rounding tablespoon of the sugar to the pickles until it is gone. One-half tablespoon dry mustard may be added, if desired, for a more tangy taste.

Australian Minister's Visit Enlivens Stagnant Season

Sir Ronald Lindsay Is Dinner Host to Sir Earle Page in Brief Revival of the Capital's Social Calendar.

By Hope Ridings Miller.
The Post Society Editor.

To Washington yesterday came the Minister of Commerce of Australia, Sir Earle and Lady Page, whose visit—brief though it is to be—has inoculated the collapsing social calendar with new life. Last evening the British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay, whose schedule of entertaining has become virtually a minus quantity since Lady Lindsay left for a vacation on Long Island, gave a dinner for the visiting cabinet officer.

HOPE R. MILLER.

An informal affair, the company included 18 guests, several of whom had met Sir Earle at Secretary of State Hull's luncheon yesterday at the Carlton.

The luncheon, incidentally, was a stag affair, at which the British Ambassador led the list of guests. Others in the company were the Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, Keith Officer, Australian Counselor of the British Embassy; L. T. McGregor, Australian Trade Commissioner in New York; Dr. Henry F. Grady, of the United States Tariff Commission; Pierrepont Moffat, Chief of the Division of European Affairs, of the State Department, and Harry C. Hawkins, chief of the Division of Trade Agreements, State Department.

Yesterday morning, Mr. Officer went to Baltimore to meet Sir Earle and Lady Page and accompanied them to Washington, where they are staying at the Mayflower. While her husband was being feted, Lady Page spent the afternoon sightseeing.

A very small luncheon at Mr. Officer's Georgetown home today will round out Sir Earle's social schedule here. He and Lady Page will leave this afternoon for Chicago, going on from there to Los Angeles, and then sailing for their homeland on August 16.

Berkshire Festival Draws Capital Residents

From Stockbridge, Mass., comes word that some of the most active patrons of the current Berkshire Music Festival are Washingtonians. In the audience for concerts presented this week by Boston Symphony Orchestra have been the Capital's No. 1 music enthusiast, Mrs. Tracy Dows, and her son, Olin Dows; Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, who are house guests of Mrs. Nine L. Duryea at her summer home in Stockbridge.

Meanwhile, other vacationers are taking an active part in entertainment schedules at countless other seasonal centers—including Saratoga Springs, where cultural pursuits long since have given away to livelier diversions, and Newport, which may not be what it once was, but is still leading the list of society's summer-time playgrounds. Mr. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock, who are spending the season there, now have as their guests Mr. and Mrs. Hulbinson Scott, of New York, who arrived early this week and, with their host and hostess, yesterday witnessed the Astor Cup race. Also on hand for the aquarian classic were Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Lorenzo D. Gasser, of Washington, who are guests of Col. and Mrs. Jere Baxter, at Fort Adams, R. . By way of rounding out yesterday's schedule for Gen. and Mrs. Gasser, Col. and Mrs. Baxter entertained at a dinner for them last evening.

Mme. Wankowicz Lingering in the South

There's no better place than at a small, informal party to gather scraps of news about vocationing Washington residents—both in this country and abroad. For example, casual conversation at the get-together Wednesday evening at the home of the Polish Counselor, Witold Wankowicz, turned up several social reports I hadn't heard before.

I had heard, of course, that Mme. Wankowicz and her daughters were motoring through the South and had spent some time in Florida, but what many of their friends may not know is that their itinerary includes several weeks in New Orleans and a stop in Asheville, N. C., where they will spend several days. Later, they will motor on up to Pennsylvania, where they will stay briefly at Eagles Mere and then return to Washington the latter part of next month.

The party Wednesday evening was the second in a series of informal suppers the Polish Counselor is giving this season—all by way of collecting congenial groups to help pass some of these long summer evenings pleasantly. Among the guests were the Charge d'Affaires of Finland and Mme. Sigurd von Numers, who have been here through the season, with the exception of brief motor trips to nearby beaches. This Saturday, they will be off to Ocean City, Md., for the week-end.

The Minister of Finland, who, with Mme. Jarnefelt, is now spending a vacation in their homeland, is expected to return the latter part of this month or early next. Mme. Jarnefelt probably will remain in Finland for a few weeks longer, coming back to Washington in October.

Now on his way to Canada by motor is the Second Secretary of the Polish Embassy, Rafal Lepkowski, who was another in Wednesday evening gathering. He left early yesterday morning, and plans to stop en route for a brief visit in Saratoga Springs.

Miss Nancy Stark to Become Bride Monday of Mr. Howard

Washington Girl and Pennsylvanian to Be Married in Cambridge, Mass., at Historic Christ Church.

Historic Christ Church in Cambridge, Mass., on Monday, will be the scene of the wedding of Miss Nancy Stark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wolcott Stark, of Washington, and John Hayes Howard. The ceremony will take place at 4 o'clock in the afternoon with the Rev. Gray Blandy officiating. Mr. Howard is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Hayes Howard, of Towanda, Pa.

The bride-to-be attended the Madeira School and was graduated from Wellesley College in 1937. The prospective bridegroom is an alumnus of the Kansas State College of Agriculture and Applied Science and is now a member of the electrical engineering staff of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology where he is completing his work for his master's degree.

Miss Stark will have as her maid of honor, Miss Mildred Overton, of Portsmouth, Va. Her two bridesmaids will be Miss Sari de Goencz, of North Adams, Mass.; and Miss Ruth Rawlings, of Washington. Little Shirley Powell, cousin of the bride, will be flower girl. Howard Nonken, brother of the bridegroom, will be ring bearer.

Martin Charles Stark, brother of the bride, will be best man. The ushers will be Richard Taylor, Arthur Eugene Fitzgerald, and Walter T. White, all of Cambridge, and Henry Backenstoss, formerly of Washington. The wedding will be followed by a reception at the Hotel Continental in Cambridge. After a northern wedding trip the couple will live after September 10 at 65-B Dana street Cambridge.

The Lees Hosts To Miss Varian

Western Girl to Go on Tour of the East's Historical Spots.

Learning lessons in early American history by visiting the places where that history was made, is on the calendar in the near future for Miss Jean Varian, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Miles Varian, of Los Angeles.

Miss Varian, who arrived in Washington just a week ago, will spend the next year with her aunt and uncle, Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Paul F. Lee, and will attend college here this fall.

Inasmuch as Miss Varian was born in the West and is in the East for the first time in her life, Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Lee plan to show her as much of the East as they can cover in a motor trip before school begins.

Leaving the first part of September they will drive up to New York, from there on through New England and up to Niagara Falls. Then they will swing down through Ohio, stopping at Wooster for a visit with relatives. The trip will be completed by a tour of the historic spots in Virginia.

In the time between now and the start of the trip in September, Miss Varian, who enjoys tennis, swimming and all outdoor sports, is spending her days at the Army-Navy Country Club, and is being introduced to the younger set there by her cousin, Miss Matile Griswold, daughter of Col. Oscar W. Griswold, United States Infantry, and Mrs. Griswold, who make their home at 2817 Cathedral avenue here. Col. Griswold is the brother of Mrs. Lee.

• • • •

Miss Alice Treat and Miss Elora B. Kilpatrick, of San Jose, Calif., are at the Dodge Hotel. Others recently registering there were Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Gray, of Scarsdale, N. Y.

• • • •

Miss Kay Titus, of Washington, is spending a few days at the Skytop Club, Skytop, Pa.

• • • •

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Bartlett have returned to their home in Washington after a brief stay at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York.

Dortha Pangborn Plights Her Troth

Mr. and Mrs. Hiram E. Johnson, of Woodside Park, Md., announce the engagement of Miss Dortha Jeanette Pangborn and Robert Neal Calhoun. The bride-elect, who has made her home with Mr. and Mrs. Johnson for the past few years, is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Pangborn. The prospective bridegroom is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. Thomas E. Calhoun, of Memphis, Tenn. The wedding will take place next month.

The bride-elect attended Ohio Northern University and Emmanuel Missionary College at Berlin Springs, Mich. She is also a graduate nurse of the Washington Sanitarium. Mr. Calhoun is a graduate of Manford High School in Tennessee and attended Lambeth College at Jackson, Tenn.

Mrs. Wilson Returns.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson has returned to Washington from York Harbor, Me., where she was the guest of Mrs. Lewis R. Cheney at the latter's summer home. Mrs. Cheney, who is widely known here, formerly lived here when she was Mrs. Robert Crain.

Clarence Dodges Are Vacationing at Spring Lake, N. J.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Dodge and Clarence Dodge, jr., of Washington, are now vacationing at Spring Lake, N. J., where they are staying at the Essex and Sussex Hotel.

On Saturday evening at the popular resort more than 400 members and guests of the Bathing and Tennis Club will take part in the annual "Baby Costume" party and supper dance, which will be under direction of Leon Thomas.

The Spanish Grill of the Hotel Monmouth will be the scene of the "barn dance" next Wednesday evening, while on the following afternoon the "pup show" for juvenile exhibitors will be held on the Monmouth's east lawn.

Other Washingtonians at Spring Lake include Mrs. K. D. Kneessi, Donald Kneessi and Miss Bertha Walker.

Elizabeth Jones, Mr. Rhodes Wed

Washington Friends Attend Ceremony Held at Barnesville, Md.

Witnessed by friends from Washington, the wedding yesterday morning of Miss Elizabeth Creighton Jones and Harry Clement Rhodes took place at St. Mary's Church, in Barnesville, Md. The Rev. Carl Hess celebrated the nuptial mass at 11 o'clock in the morning. The bride is the daughter of Samuel Creighton Jones, of Dickerson, Md. Mr. Rhodes is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Kennard Rhodes, of Queenstown, Md.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore French organdie over taffeta. Her veil of French organdie extended to her ankles and was draped from a heart-shaped coronet. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and gypsophelia. A pin of diamonds and pearls which had belonged to the bridegroom's grandmother was her only ornament.

Miss Lillian Eleanor Jones served her sister as maid of honor and was attired in aqua French organdie, fashioned along princess lines. She wore a shoulder-length veil fastened by flowers which matched her dress, and she carried a white prayerbook, showered with white ribbons.

The bridesmaids were Miss Margery K. Holland, of Kensington, Md., who wore a yellow gown similar to that of the maid of honor; Miss Constance Nicholson Jones, another sister of the bride, wearing orchid; Miss Margaret A. Rhodes, sister of the bridegroom, in peach; Miss Myrna Livingstone Jones, in blue; Miss Bernadine Mabel Jones, of Silver Spring, Md., in green; and Miss Ida Lutz Jones, in pink. Louis Kennard Rhodes, jr., was his brother's best man. The ushers were E. Page Bledsoe, jr., of Washington; Thomas Rhodes, another brother of the bridegroom; C. Merrick Wilson, of Poolesville, Md.; and Raymond Dugan, of Baltimore, Md.

Following the ceremony a reception and wedding breakfast took place at Creighton Place, home of the bride's father. Mrs. Louis Kennard Rhodes, mother of the bridegroom and one of those receiving, was attired in blue flowered chiffon.

The former Miss Jones attended St. Joseph College in Emmitsburg, Md. Mr. Rhodes is a graduate of Washington College, Chestertown, Md., and has done graduate work at the University of Maryland.

Mrs. Wilkinson Fetes 2 Guests

Entertains With Her Daughters at Summer Home.

Mrs. Theodore S. Wilkinson, wife of Capt. Wilkinson, U. S. N., and her two daughters, Miss Ann Wilkinson and Miss Joan Wilkinson, recently had as house guests at their summer home, Nonquit, Mass., Harrison Brand and Richard Wilmer, of Washington.

Mrs. Wilkinson and her daughters, who left Washington the latter part of June, will return to their home, Hockley, in Rosslyn, Va., about the fifteenth of September. Miss Joan Wilkinson will attend Vassar this fall, and Miss Ann Wilkinson will make her debut in Washington in the early autumn.

Of interest to Washington and Virginia is the announcement of the marriage August 5, of Miss Helen Rebecca Click, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Click, of Harrisonburg, Va., to Joseph C. Dell, jr. The ceremony took place at 7:30 in the evening at the Pleasant Valley Church of the Brethren and was performed by the Rev. Henry C. Early, great uncle of the bride. Mr. Dell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Dell, of Beatrice, Nebr.

The bride, a graduate of Madison College, was given in marriage by her father. She was attended by her sister, Miss Evelyn Click, of Chatham, Va., as the maid of honor. The bridesmaids included Mrs. Kenneth Cleveland, of Verona, Va.; Miss Nancy Flory, of Staunton, Va.; Miss Mary O. Miller, of Mount Sidney, and Miss Virginia Good, of Dayton.

Milton Dell, of McPherson, Kans., was his brother's best man. The ushers were George S. Click, of Staunton; Stanley Moore, of Mount Sidney; Sidney Crickenberger, of Weyers Cave, and Frank S. Driver and W. B. Moore, of Mount Sidney.

Rev. G. S. Hixon, Bride Take Trip

The Rev. and Mrs. George S. Hixon, whose marriage took place Sunday, are on their way to Canada and the West, where they will visit Yellowstone National Park.

With the Rev. James H. Miers, officiating at a double ring ceremony, the couple exchanged vows in the Fourth Presbyterian Church, which was decorated for the event with palms and white gladioli.

The bride, who formerly was Miss Alice E. Domino, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Domino, of Salina, Kans., was gowned in white mousseline de soie, made redingote style with short puffed sleeves, and worn over a white taffeta slip. Her shoulder-length veil was fastened with a narrow band trimmed with orange blossoms, and she carried a white Bible from which fell a shower of lilies of the valley and a single red rose on a white ribbon.

Miss Elizabeth Komaromy, the maid of honor, was gowned in blue chiffon. Miss Ruth Blackburn, bridesmaid, wore pink marquisette. Both had on corsages of pink roses and blue delphinia. Ushers were Fred Schupe and Culvin S. Totten.

Prior to the ceremony Miss Frances Larson and Miss Grace Wooden gave a brief musical program. Following the wedding there was a reception at the Meridian Hill Apartments for members of the bridal party and relatives of the couple.

R. R. Waesches Giving Party for The Munters

Coast Guard Head and Wife to Entertain for Departing Couple.

Rear Admiral Russell R. Waesche, Chief of the United States Coast Guard, and Mrs. Waesche will entertain at dinner and bridge tomorrow evening at the Army-Navy Club Roof Garden, in honor of Capt. and Mrs. William R. Munter. There will be 25 at the dinner.

Capt. and Mrs. Munter will leave Washington August 31 for Seattle, Wash., where Capt. Munter will be division commander of the Coast Guard. He and Mrs. Munter and their daughter, Miss Barbara Munter, plan to motor leisurely across the continent, taking a month for the trip and taking in all the national parks, including the Yellowstone, on the way.

Upon their arrival on the West Coast, the Munters will motor to Vancouver to join Mrs. Munter's mother, Mrs. A. Hocking, who makes her home in Honolulu, but is spending the summer at Old Colony Inn in Vancouver. Mrs. Hocking will go with the Munters to Seattle for the midwinter holidays, and upon her return to Honolulu will be accompanied by Miss Barbara Munter.

Miss Munter, who has been spending the past week in New York, returned yesterday to Washington.

Mrs. Carter, Sons Back at Fort Myer From New England

Mrs. Leslie D. Carter, wife of Capt. Carter, and their sons, Robert and Leslie, jr., have returned to their quarters at Fort Myer after a vacation in New England.

Accompanied by her parents, Col. and Mrs. Robert Fleming, Mrs. Carter motored through the White Mountains after placing the boys in Camp Abnaki in Vermont. Later she stopped by the camp for her sons and they returned with her to Fort Myer.

Col. A. B. Barber Back in Capital

Ends New England Motor Trip; Wife to Stay With Daughter.

Col. Alvin B. Barber, who was on a motor trip through New England, has returned to Washington. Mrs. Barber, however, will remain for some time longer in Cambridge, Mass., where she and her daughter, Mrs. Samuel Drury Clark, are visiting.

Col. and Mrs. Barber left Washington several weeks ago, going first to Rochester to visit their son, Godfrey Barber, who accompanied them when they left there for the Adirondacks. At Indian Lakes in the Adirondacks they collected their young son, Barton, who had been spending the summer at a camp there.

From there they motored to Bristol, R. I., to visit their son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. Clark, and their young grandson, Geoffrey Ennis Clark, who was born last May.

Mrs. Barber will return with her daughter for another short visit to the latter's home in Bristol before returning to her own home, "Sky Meadows," in Bethesda, Md., around September 1.

Margaret Riley Is Married to John J. Phelan

Ceremony and Nuptial Mass Take Place in Chapel at Catholic University.

In the chapel of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University yesterday morning at 9 o'clock, Miss Margaret Anne Riley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Riley, of Takoma Park, Md., became the bride of John J. Phelan, jr., son of Col. John J. Phelan, United States Army, and Mrs. Phelan, of Washington.

The Rev. George B. Stratemaier officiated at the nuptial mass that followed the ceremony. Prior to the latter, organ selections were played by Malton Boyce who accompanied John Charles Quigley, tenor.

Mrs. Charles Johnson Is Matron of Honor

Departing from the custom of approaching singly or in pairs, the entire bridal party proceeded to the altar together. The bride wore a white frock fashioned with a bolero and a hat of navy blue starched net trimmed with daisies. Her bouquet was of pink roses, gardenias and delphinium.

Mrs. Charles Johnson, of Dundalk, Md., the matron of honor was gowned in powder blue with navy accessories, and she carried a bouquet of red roses and delphinia.

Nancy Anne Harrison, the bride's niece, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Harrison, of Takoma Park, was flower girl. She wore yellow-dotted swiss with a wide-brimmed hat, and she carried a small bouquet of talisman roses. Fred Nelson, of Arlington, Va., was best man, the ushers being John Robert Riley, brother of the bride; Mackin Long and Wendell Jarvis, of Washington.

Wedding Breakfast Follows Ceremony

Following the ceremony there was a wedding breakfast at the home of the bride's parents. Mrs. Riley, who received the guests, was gowned in orchid chiffon worn with a wide-brimmed, horsehair hat and a corsage of orchids. The bridegroom's mother was in figured chiffon, worn with white accessories and a corsage of gardenias.

When the couple left on their wedding trip to Virginia Beach, the bride had on a navy-blue sports dress with white accessories, and a corsage of gardenias.

Mr. Phelan is a graduate of Catholic University. He and his bride will make their home here at 1359 Park road.

Van Hoogstraten Guest Of Arts Club at Tea

Famed Netherlands Conductor, Here to Lead Symphony, Finds Watergate Nation's Finest Outdoor Musical Setting.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,

Keeping a weather eye on the clouds, members of the Arts Club yesterday assembled in the garden behind their historic clubhouse at 2017 I street, to honor William Van Hoogstraten, distinguished guest conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra. It was their concern for last night's Watergate concert, which nearly all expected to attend, more than for the tea that occasioned frequent glances skyward.

The Naval Attache of the Netherlands Legation and Mme. Meijer Ranneft and their daughter, Mlle. Coby Meijer Ranneft, were among the guests at the garden fete in honor of their countryman. Frank B. Steele, president of the Arts Club, and Mrs. Steele received with him and Lewis Lofton Moneyway, former president, made the introductions. Others assisting were Mrs. Ralph Richards, Mrs. Robert Le Fevre, Mrs. Charles H. Stratton and Mrs. L. M. Leisenring.

Dr. Hans Kindler, conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra, who had come to Washington to attend the scheduled concert at which Mr. Van Hoogstraten was to have conducted Wednesday night, returned to Rehoboth Beach after the deluge of rain had caused its postponement until last night.

Setting for Concerts Praised by Conductor

Music in general and the concerts at the Watergate in particular were the chief topics of conversation at the Arts Club party. Mr. Van Hoogstraten not only praised the orchestra but remarked that the setting for the summer concerts in Washington was the most spectacular of any of which he knew in this country for open air programs.

He proved himself a genial guest and appeared to enjoy meeting the Washingtonians as much as they did greeting him. He even looked cool, despite the sultry afternoon, in white flannels, a gray coat, blue shirt and gray tie, striped with red.

During a brief lull in the arrival of guests, he and Mr. Steele indulged in an animated discussion of musical selections during which the club president hummed a snatch or two of a familiar air, while the conductor joined in, accenting the rhythm with his hands just as though the orchestra were before him.

The receiving line was in the garden and the "tea table" where punch instead of tea was served, was in the dining room of the clubhouse.

Among the guests was Harold A. Brooks, chairman of the summer concerts committee, who, like C. C. Cappel, business manager of the orchestra, who also was present, said he had almost developed a crick in his neck watching the weather. Despite the rain on all but three of the concert nights, the response has indicated that Washington really loves music, he said.

Musicians Are Among Guests Who Attend

Many musicians were among those at the tea. One was Miss Sylvia Meyer, gifted young harpist, who is a member of the orchestra. Another was George Gaul, the concertmaster.

Miss Sade Styrom, the pianist, was there, accompanied by Miss Margaret Ashford. Miss Helen Belt, one of Washington's talented violinists, also was in the company as were Miss Blanche Polkinhorn, Miss Virginia Diedel, Mrs. R. S. Despard, Mrs. George W. Johnston, Mrs. Mary Steele, of the WPA, Miss Louise Endicott and Mrs. E. E. Valentini.

Mrs. B. A. Bowman, who before her marriage was Miss Dorothy Hoog, of Honolulu, was comparing notes with Mr. Van Hoogstraten on her family name, which was originally the same as his.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mess were there as were Mrs. Samuel Kimberly, Miss Edith M. Pyles, Mr. and Mrs. A. Ted Meurer, John Edwards, Miss Frances B. Johnson and Miss Anne Darlington.

D.C. Social Aides Meet at Church

Agencies Acquainted With Household Workers; Discuss Problems.

Representatives of social agencies in the District, who have occasion to call on the WPA for the assistance of housekeeping aides, met yesterday afternoon at Lincoln Congregational Church, 1701 Eleventh street, by invitation of the citizens' committee.

The purpose of the meeting was to acquaint the agencies with the extent to which the group is ready to assist them. Workers are being trained to be sent to keep house where the homemaker is temporarily unable to look after the family. The aides receive compensation and their services also solve a problem for the social agencies which find need for such assistance.

Yesterday Mrs. Mary Steele, director of the women's and professional division of the District of Columbia WPA, and her assistant, Mrs. Bernice Schultz, were both present to discuss the project and explain in detail its operation. Mrs. Minna Adams, supervisor of the undertaking, described the training the women—both white and colored—receive, and called in one of the aides to show the uniforms they wear and to display the kits they take with them.

Many homes into which they go lack the simplest conveniences for housekeeping—soap, cleansing powder, scrubbing brushes—and all of these are provided so the cleaning and washing can be done without waiting to send for supplies.

Letters of appreciation come daily to Mrs. Adams from families who have been tided over an emergency by the work of the household aides, attesting their efficiency. Others come from the aides themselves in appreciation of the training and employment afforded them by the project.

Mrs. Willis J. Van Devanter heads the citizens' committee which is co-sponsor for the project with the public health department.

Mrs. Prentiss Wilson is treasurer of the committee and was among those present yesterday. Others there were Miss Helen Shuford and Miss Bertha Gerber, of the Family Service Association; Miss Inez Cadel, of the Instructive Visiting Nurse Association; Miss Julia L. Dubin, of the public assistance division; Mrs. Florence Conlin, of the American Legion; Miss Mary McCracken, of the public assistance division; Miss Katherine Schindell, of the Central Auditing Bureau; Mrs. Madorah Donahue, of the child welfare demonstration unit, Board of Public Welfare; Miss Winona Rorby, Georgetown Children's Home; Miss Ethel Gill, of the Jewish Social Service Agency; Mrs. Marjorie Simon, of the public assistance division; Mrs. Lucie M. Irone, investigator of relief in the District, and Mrs. Mary Lente, Social Service Exchange, Council of Social Agencies.

Two Events Set For A. A. U. W.

Two events are scheduled for the Washington branch of the American Association of University Women Monday. There will be the regular tea in the afternoon and, in the evening, the Players' Group, which has been having informal summer meetings, plans a program.

Miss Eleanor Berge will be presented in a song recital following the tea, with Miss Cicely Adams Brown as her accompanist.

The Players' Group will meet at the home of one of the members, Miss Mary Vaccaro, who will entertain at a garden party. Miss Jeannette Rudellat is the leader.

The program will be the reading of a current play in which members will participate. Those taking part in the reading of the play will be: Miss Lola Long, Miss Floreine Hurley, Miss Marca Broken, Miss Janet Knight, Miss Freda Junck and Miss Jacquelyn Pringle.

Benefit Fete Held By Railway Mail Group Auxiliary

Mrs. D. M. Tice, president of the Women's Auxiliary of the Railway Mail Association, opened her home last night for a benefit fete for the auxiliary's philanthropic and ways and means fund.

The party was one of a series of benefit affairs given each year. Part of the proceeds will go toward the $50 contributed annually by the local association to the scholarship loan fund of the national organization.

The Washington Auxiliary, which is affiliated with the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs, was established in 1916 and now has more than 100 members. Its regular meetings are held during the winter season at the Capitol Park Hotel, and, in addition to these, three social affairs are arranged, usually luncheons given at one of the tea rooms in nearby Maryland or Virginia.

Officers beside Mrs. Tice are Mrs. D. D. Brower, vice president; Mrs. William M. Collins, treasurer; Mrs. Tate Culberson, recording secretary, and Mrs. C. D. Wilson, corresponding secretary. All were present last night, except Mrs. Collins who is spending part of the summer in the West.

A sale of cakes and candy helped swell the auxiliary fund. Mrs. E. L. Blessing was in charge of the cake table and Mrs. P. A. Taylor in charge of the candy. A ten-pin game was one of the diversions of the evening and this was directed by A. F. Lingle. Despite the heat, there also was dancing in the large living room.

BEDTIME STORIES

By Thornton W. Burgess

The Old Naturalist.

The simple heart that understands
The love of all the world commands.

—Old Mother Nature.

They always spoke of him as the Old Naturalist. He had come just after the end of the sugar season that spring and arranged to occupy Farmer Brown's sugar house among the sugar maples over in the Green Forest, saying that he wanted to do some work and studying where he could be at all times in close communion with Old Mother Nature. There with his books and papers he had lived ever since.

He was well on in years, but he didn't seem old in years, for the spirit of youth was still his, untouched by the years that had traced fine lines around the keen blue eyes with the hint of laughter in them. Sue called those lines his laugh wrinkles. He was rather short, thin, wiry, quick in his movements, yet with the patience that would keep him motionless for long periods when there was something he wanted to observe. His ready smile lighted his whole face and the twinkling keenness of his eyes seemed, as Sammy expressed it, "to see everything at once."

He had many visitors, for somehow in that mysterious way that is one of Old Mother Nature's secrets the word had gone all through the Green Forest and over the Green Meadows among the people in fur and feathers that here was an understanding heart from whom there was naught to fear. So by day and night his callers came—Reddy Fox, Jumper the Hare, Lightfoot the Deer, Timmy the Flying Squirrel, Thunderer the Grouse, Chatterer the Red Squirrel—these and many more. Little Whitefoot the Wood Mouse had moved right into the sugar house and was living high, coming forth at mealtimes to accept bits of food from the Old Naturalist's hand. Jumper the Hare had more than once ventured inside the open door.

"He knows everything about animals and birds and bugs and plants," Tommy had told Sue and Sammy as he took them over to make his acquaintance, and when Sammy asked him if this was true the Old Naturalist laughed.

"No, laddie," said he. "No one knows everything about Mother Nature and her children. I know just a little and every day I learn a little more. But if I should live to be older than Methuselah I could never know it all. No one could. I wouldn't want to know all even if that were possible."

"Why not?" Sammy asked.

"Because the real joy is in the gaining of knowledge rather than in the mere possession of knowledge. There is little Whitefoot peeping out at you from behind the broom over in that corner. If I knew all there is to know about a Wood Mouse I wouldn't be interested in Whitefoot any more. But I don't. Every day I learn something more about him. So I never lose interest in him. We are great friends. I feed him and protect him and he teaches me," explained the Old Naturalist, the lines around his eyes puckering into laugh wrinkles.

"Just the same I guess there isn't much you don't know about Wood Mice," said Tommy.

"That is where you are wrong, Tommy," replied the Old Naturalist. "You are very wrong. It is true that I know a lot about this Wood Mouse, but that doesn't mean that I know much about others of his kind. I know certain things that are true about all Wood Mice, but there are certain things about little Whitefoot over there that may not be true of others at all, and undoubtedly there are things about others that are not true about him. You see each one is an individual, with individual ways. Just as no two human beings are just alike so no two of the lesser folk are just alike. That is why it is never safe to make a positive statement as to what a bird or animal will do under given circumstances."

After that visit Tommy, Sue and Sammy were frequent visitors. They always found the Old Naturalist glad to welcome them and as eager to try to help them solve their nature problems as they were to have them solved. So, after the discussion as to whether it was intelligence or instinct that had enabled Striped Chipmunk to get the peanuts that had been suspended by strings in such a way that he had to first walk a tightrope and then pull up the strings hand over hand, it was decided to consult the Old Naturalist.

Mrs. Streitberger To Be Chairman of D. of A. Convention

Mrs. Deborah Streitberger, past State councilor of the Daughters of America, has been named chairman of the annual convention of the order to be held at the Mayflower Hotel September 14, 15 and 16. The 3,000 members of the Daughters of America in the District will participate in the sessions and many guests also will be here from nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Mrs. S. Belle Gibson, past State councilor, who now resides in Virginia, will be vice chairman, and Mrs. Ethel T. Joiner, another past State councilor, will be secretary.

Loyalty Council, which has made the largest net gain in membership during the past year, has been selected to conduct the initiation work and rehearsals are in progress.

Mrs. Ethel B. Foland, State councilor of Virginia, has invited State Councilor Viola L. Henley and her staff to accompany her to Tangier Island August 17. The occasion will be the annual visitation of the State officers of Virginia to the council there.

Past Councilor Helen Steivers, with Mrs. Mary Tindall and Mrs. Pearl Torney, will be joint hostesses to the next monthly meeting of the Past Councilors Association of Anacostia Council.

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne.

MERCEDES JORDON, graduate of a course in library science and now in the Library of Congress, told members of the Zonta Club at their luncheon this week that girls who avail themselves of the club's membership loan fund can't fully appreciate what it means to them until after they are graduated and go to work. And Miss Jordon knows, for she is one of 20 girls who have been helped by the local Zontians during the past ten years, to complete their educations.

The scholarship loan project is designated as the Zonta Club's "permanent work" and is considered by the members as the organization's most worthwhile undertaking. The money is lent to girls over 21 who are without other funds for pursuing their education for business and professional careers. They must have shown ability as scholars and have good recommendations to be eligible to receive the assistance. After they complete their schooling and find their places in the business world, they pay back what they have borrowed, plus a small interest.

• • • •

OF THE GIRLS on Zonta's list, three have completed their study of medicine and are now practicing physicians; two have majored in home economics, one in journalism, one in art, one in social work, another in occupational therapy and several in library science. Miss Jordon, as one of the latter, was guest of honor and speaker at the weekly luncheon.

Ruth Sheldon is now chairman of the permanent work committee for the club.

IN KEEPING with the Williamsburg colonial design of the new clubhouse of the Chevy Chase Woman's Club, the color scheme inside will be old red and palace blue, with the backgrounds of woodwork and walls in natural tints. The frames of the tables and chairs will be black and the card tables, will have ivory white tops.

The kitchen will have marbelized linoleum floor and drain boards of delft blue with ivory woodwork.

All this has been decided this week by the members of the Building Company of the club who met yesterday at the home of the club president, Mrs. John Travers Maguire, and Monday at the home of the Building Company president, Mrs. Frank A. Linzel.

Mrs. Alexander McC. Ashley, a past president of the club, was among the members of the company present as were Mrs. Harrison Fitts, chairman of the house committee, and Mrs. Otis Johnson, assistant secretary of the company, who were named as a committee to select kitchen equipment; Mrs. Frank M. Hoadley, Mrs. Orville S. Peters and Mrs. Kenneth D. McRae, resident manager for the clubhouse, who were appointed to select the furnishings for the dressing room.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

FOR THE RESCUE OF ZILCH.

On the last day of the last Congress, there were 145 bills on the calendar, the pale, haggard survivors of thousands . . . Fifty-six of these were bills for the benefit and "relief" of individuals, out of hundreds of such bills which members had been cudgeled to introduce . . . Most of these still lie where they fell, and I have been poring over them.

Sen. Wheeler . . . no consent.

* * * *

If you have a claim against the Government and can't make any headway, someone will suggest sooner or later that you induce your Representative or Senator to introduce a bill for your relief. He won't really want to; you'll have to blackjack him into it; it's a forlorn hope.

* * * *

Even if your Senator can get it over all the hurdles, and by a miracle it passes both houses, the President's apt to veto it . . . That, unless my memory betrays me, is what happened to the bill for the relief of the gentleman whose turkeys' family life was disturbed by Army planes so they didn't procreate.

"—relief of Guy, Calton or Carlton"

Many of the claims are so tenuous that few members will let their names appear on the calendar opposite a bill . . . Maybe they do not wish to be associated with a pathetic little raid on the Treasury; perhaps they just don't want other Zilches among their constituents to harass them.

* * * *

Not all these petitioners for justice are after money; some merely want justice or glory . . . The aim of H. R. 667, for instance, was merely to correct the records of the War Department to show "that Guy Carlton Baker, and Calton C. Baker, or Carlton C. Baker is one and the same person."

* * * *

You can almost hear this lad telling the sergeant "I'm the guy, Carlton Baker," and see the sergeant writing it down Guy Carlton Baker; and later you can see another sergeant taking his drawl literally and writing it down Calton. Such might have been the background of S. 2864, "a bill to correct the military record of Clayton C. Miller," sponsored by Ohio's Bulkley.

* * * *

Most of these personal bills are like H. R. 9795, for the relief of Michael J. Muldowney, who spent $2,000 in defense of an election-contesting case against him, or H. R. 4691, for the relief of Pompeo Ercolano, "who shall hereafter be deemed to have been lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence," or S. 1339, authored by Senator Walsh for the relief of Lieut. Svend J. Skou, of the Navy, who wants his retirement pay raised; or stranger or more commonplace.

"for musical Februarys"

More of these bills might pass were it not for the stern conscience or natural cantankerousness of a few lawgivers like Senator Wheeler, Montana's Cicero, who is on his feet much of the time on the final day declining to give "unanimous consent." . . . They often object to acts like the one designating February as "the Month of American Music," sponsored by the late Senator Copeland, of New York . . .

* * * *

Or like Senator Lee's bill to force people to lend money to the Government in war-time; or Senator Logan's bill for experiments with rotary-wing planes; or the one to proclaim the week of May 31, 1939, as National Flood Prevention Week—perhaps on the ground that it might rain every day.

* * * *

But nearly half of the legislative grist is composed of bills like H. R. 3589, for the relief of Pasquale Lobrano, who doesn't want to be deported, "existing law to the contrary notwithstanding," or blithe Senator Reynolds' bill to make John Sneed Adams a second lieutenant in the Army . . . Lawmakers must think of everything; maybe Second Lieut. Sneed Adams is the man to win the next war for us.

127 Boys and Girls At Health Camp Hold Open House

Open house for officers of the Tuberculosis Association, public officials and health officers of the District was held yesterday by the 127 boy and girl patients at Bald Eagle Hill Children's Health Camp. Guests were received by Mrs. Ernest R. Grant, managing director of the association, and Miss Sara Shriner, superintendent of the camp, assisted by nurses and counselors.

After dinner the children and their guests were entertained by the Navy School of Music Band. A surprise wedding supper in the mess hall was given in honor of Dr. and Mrs. Paul Lameshewsky, who were recently married. Mrs. Lemeshewsky was Miss Mildred Showalter, for six years personal secretary to Mrs. Grant. Dr. Lemeshesky is resident physician at the camp.

Boost Asked In Juvenile Court Funds

Judge Bentley Requests $22,170 More for Increased Work.

Ten additional workers and a 71 per cent increase over the 1939 fiscal year appropriation was asked yesterday for the Juvenile Court for the 1940 fiscal year.

Judge Fay Bentley in her request to the District Commissioners said she would need a total of $128,740, a boost of $22,170 over the present appropriations.

Chief reason for the increased appropriation request is the need for extra workers made necessary by the recent amendment to the juvenile court law. Under the new law the jurisdiction of the court has been greatly extended Judge Bentley said.

Judge Bentley asked for five case supervisors and seven probation officers at aggregate salaries of $21,800 for the year.

P. U. C. Asks Workers.

Meanwhile the Public Utilities Commission asked an increase of 16 employes for its staff in order more effectively to supervise the work. The commission asked for a total of $120,660 for the 1940 fiscal year. This figure is an increase of 56 per cent over the 1939 appropriation.

Chairman Riley Elgen of the commission said the gross receipts of the concerns under its control have increased by 344 per cent since 1913, the year the commission was instituted.

When the amendment to the court bill was passed June 1, the Juvenile Court was made one of record, Judge Bentley pointed out in her request for an increased appropriation. There followed an increase in clerical work, due to the change, she said.

Cases Increased.

Cases in the court have increased by one and one-half, Judge Bentley argued. During the 1938 fiscal year a total of 2,840 cases were disposed of by the court. Since June 1 of this fiscal year more than 600 cases have been handled by the court. At this rate the court will probably hear well in excess of 3,000 during this year.

For personal services for the utilities commission Chairman Elgen asked $118,860 for the next year, as compared with $78,000 this year. With this increase 16 additional employes would be hired by the commission. These include two engineers, seven accountants, two extra inspectors, one special investigator, three clerks and a messenger. Their salaries would aggregate $42,860.

The figures of the Metropolitan Police show that during the last fiscal year there were over 2,000 cases of persons 17 years of age handled in the Police and United States District Court. Judge Bentley stated at least that number would be added to her court, since under the new law persons of this age come under the Juvenile Court's jurisdiction.

Good Workers Lost.

Although she would not ask for increase in wages for some of the present workers, Judge Bentley pointed out that the court was losing many workers because of higher payment for the same type of work in other branches of the Government. Her staff, which at the present time numbers 60, worked 566 days overtime during the last fiscal year.

A sum of $1,170 was requested to eliminate an error in salaries contracted during the last year. A sum of $2,000 was asked for compensation of jurors. For contingent expenses Judge Bentley requested $4,000, a sum $800 under the present appropriation.

Md. Moves Swiftly, Indicts Bird, Sets Trial for Aug. 18

Baltimore, Aug. 11 (AP).—Maryland justice moved swiftly to bring the erstwhile "public enemy No. 2," Charles Bird, to trial next week following his indictment late today on seven charges of robbery.

His youg wife, Barbara, an expectant mother, was named in one of the indictments.

State's Attorney J. Bernard Wells immediately assigned the cases for trial next Thursday just 15 days after Bird's last holdup in which the bank robber, who bragged his crime proceeds had been "about $100,000," took $36 from a liquor truck driver.

In Cleveland, U. S. District Attorney Emerich B. Freed, said he would attempt to bring the Birds back here for trial after the Baltimore proceedings are completed.

U. S. to 'Be So Strong' None Will Dare Attack, Legion Told

Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War, told more than 1,000 District legionnaires last night that "within 12 months this country will be so strongly armed that no foreign aggressor would dare come to our shores."

He spoke as local members of the American Legion finished a long parade and began their twentieth annual department convention at the Mayflower.

The parade opened the conclave with a display of martial ceremony and might. Drums rattled, bugles blared, caissons rumbled and cavalry horses clattered a stern accompaniment for nearly 2,000 marchers who paraded from John Marshall place and Pennsylvania avenue to the Mayflower.

Johnson, called upon to speak extemporaneously as the brightly garbed former doughboys met for the first session of their three-day convention, credited the American Legion for its aid in pushing through the national defense program. He also declared that so long as he was in the War Department he would "keep faith with the principles of the Legion" in maintaining adequate national defense.

The Assistant War Secretary's avowal of a preparedness policy was echoed by Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commander of the District National Guard. Cox asked the Nation to maintain its armament "at as high a state of efficiency as its safety demands and as its resources and other conditions permit."

"As a Nation," he said, "it is our duty to avoid war as long as war can be avoided, but likewise it is the supreme duty of our Nation to prepare for the security of our citizens to the fullest extent of its power. Armament, created and maintained in time of peace, constitutes the best assurance against war yet devised."

Phil Conley, national vice commander of the Legion, declared that the aim of the organization is to make itself a force for good. He said that the nearly one million members of the Legion itself and the almost half million members of the auxiliary were "still old-fashioned enough to believe in democracy."

"We're surrounded by radicals," he asserted, "who use the rights provided them by the United States Constitution in an effort to destroy it. Today the American Legion is the greatest enemy of communism in the United States."

Conley also charged Government officers themselves have been guilty of aiding those seeking to overthrow the democratic system. Specifically, he said officials on the Pacific Coast have been protecting a communist agitator.

The legion department's citations for distinguished citizenship were presented last night to Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police; Isaac Gans, of the District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board; Benjamin M. McKelway, managing editor of the Evening Star; Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank, and J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Hoover was not present to receive his award.

Other speakers on the program at the session included Melvin C. Hazen, president of the District Board of Commissioners, and Mrs. Dorothy B. Harper, president of the local department of the legion auxiliary.

Thomas Mason, jr., department commander, presided. Grand marshal of the parade, led by units of the Sixteenth Field Artillery and the Third Cavalry, was Col. Jonathan M. Wainwright, commandant at Fort Myer.

Maj. Paul J. McGahan, past department commander and now head of the awards committee, announced presentation of prizes for work done by posts or individuals during the past year. The prizes and names of winners follow:

The Watson B. Miller Trophy for the outstanding example of unselfish activity in behalf of the cause of the American Legion and the department to Owen F. Holleran, of the Stephen P. McGroarty Post, and chairman of the department Americanism commission.

The Dorothy B. Harper senior trophy to the Sergeant Jasper Unit of American Legion Auxiliary.

The Julius I. Peyser membership trophy to Potomac Post, No. 40, American Legion.

The State of Delaware membership trophy to National Cathedral Post, No. 10.

The Paul J. McGahan trophy, awarded to the post showing the largest increase over its average membership for four preceding years, to Washington Police and Firemen's Post No. 29, with 280 per cent.

The Quentin Roosevelt Post, No. 11, senior membership trophy to Washington Police and Firemen's Post, No. 29, with 289 per cent.

The Quentin Roosevelt Post, No. 11, junior membership trophy to Potomac Post, No. 40.

The Frank L. Peckham trophy, awarded to the post having the largest membership for the year, to the Sergeant Jasper Post, No. 13, with 827 members.

Units adjudged best in their groups in the parade follow: Best American Legion Drum and Bugle Corps, Fort Stevens Post 32. Legion post with the largest number of marchers, Police and Fire Department Post 29. Best marching unit, Police and Fire Department Post 29. Best women's marching unit, U. S. S. Jacob Jones Post 2. Best Sons of the American Legion Drum and Bugle Corps, Sons of the American Legion, Virginia Post 24.

The convention will continue its session at 8 p. m. tonight when delegates will meet to adopt resolutions and to nominate candidates for office.

U.S. Arranges Civil Service Director Tests

New Merit System Posts to Pay From $4,600 to $6,500.

The Civil Service Commission yesterday announced an open competitive examination for director of personnel and assistant director of personnel, positions required under the executive orders of June 24 which extend the merit system widely in the Federal service.

The directors of personnel, who are to have extensive duties in the management of employes, will receive $6,500, $5,600 and $4,600 a year, the grade of the position depending upon the personnel activities. Assistant directors of personnel will receive $5,600, $4,600 and $3,800 a year, dependent upon activities.

The top age limit for applicants is 53; the closing date for applications is September 12 for States east of Colorado and September 15 for Colorado and States farther west.

Section 6 of the executive orders directs the establishment of Divisions of Personnel Supervision and Management in the executive departments and such independent establishments and agencies as the President may designate. Each division will be headed by a director of personnel.

The directors' responsibilities will include the functions of appointment, assignment, service rating and training of employes under direction of the head of the department or agency; liaison work with the Civil Service Commission, the budget officer as well as service on the Council of Personnel Administration, to be established under the orders.

The Civil Service Commission has declared the provisions concerning the personnel directors to be "the keystone of the program of personnel administration." Through examination requirements and examining process, the commission will seek personnel directors "who have a high order of administrative ability; who are qualified to understand the operating needs of departments and agencies . . . who understands modern personnel practice under the merit system as an implement of operating economy and efficiency . . . and who know the viewpoint, trials and tributions both of employes and of employers."

Applicants further will be required to demonstrate that they "are capable of gaining co-operation from and giving co-operation to operating administrators and employes."

Service Group Wins Meet at Camp Ritchie

Company C Takes Second Place in 121st Engineers Field Day.

Camp Albert C. Ritchie, Cascade, Md., Aug. 11.—Cheers of guardsmen rent the air about the parade ground this afternoon as the 121st Engineers held their field meet. The Headquarters and Service Company came through with ranking honors, gaining a 4-point lead over its nearest competitor, Company C. The top scores were 16 and 12 points. Companies E and B, tied for third place with 10 points each.

The Marines have been receiving instructions in the handling of machine guns, 81 mm. field pieces. Regular Marines from Quantico have been conducting most of these exhibitions. Continuation of practice on the range with .30-caliber rifles and rifle grenades complete their training for today.

The 104th Quartermaster Unit arrived in camp today after overnight technical training in convoy work. The organization drove into camp in three sections, carrying out tactical operations.

At appropriate ceremonies, First Sergt. Martin J. Littlefield, Company B, 104th Quartermaster Regiment, was presented with a ten-year medal from the District of Columbia National Guard for faithful service. The honor was conferred upon him by Lieut. Henry W. Boudinot, company commander.

The Marine Reserve Band this evening played a concert for the Blue Ridge Summit Fire Department's carnival.

Dinner Honors J. B. Corridon, Retiring From Customs Bureau

Fellow Workers in Office Fete Legal Aide at End of His Fifty Years' Service With the Government.

With 50 years of Government service behind him, James B. Corridon yesterday retired from the Bureau of Customs of the Treasury Department.

Last night fellow employes took Corridon to the Madrillon Restaurant and honored him for his many years of work.

On April 2, 1888, Corridon began work with the Washington postoffice, then in the old Seaton House, which today houses the Central Union Mission. The next year the old building was flooded by torrential rains and an overflowing Potomac.

"I can recall that day. We went down into the basement to rescue the postoffice books, which were kept there," Corridon said last night. "On the streets they were using rowboats."

He remained with the local postoffice 25 years. In 1915 he transferred to the Postoffice Department, where he was instrumental in organizing the air-mail service.

Corridon, while not directly in charge of the project did field work in mapping out the air mail routes.

For eight years he had charge of the division of railway adjustments in the Postoffice Department, and it was Corridon who saw that letters to the United States troops reached them safely in France.

For the last 15 years Corridon has been with the legal division of the bureau of customs. While in this department he attended the Washington College of Law, graduating with a law degree in 1926.

A native of the District, Corridon resides with his wife at 4603 Thirteenth street northwest. He has three children and four grandchildren.

He expects to continue his work in the law in a leisurely fashion. That is, as he explains, he will attend local courts and study procedure.

President Regatta Gets 2 New Events

Two new events, the four-liter American Powerboat Association championship race and two special classes for outboard runabouts, will be added this year to the twelfth annual renewal of the President's Cup Regatta, L. Gordon Leech, chairman of the racing division, announced yesterday. It was expected, he said, that the four-liter event would draw foreign competition.

The outboard runabouts will be sent away in special races and awards will be made in the order of finish to avoid events in which but two or three boats compete. The regatta will be held September 23 to September 25.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

THE TALL TEXAN.

This will probably irk Clark Griffith who sees a most violent hue of red whenever the Redskins rear their heads on the sports pages in any way, shape or form at this season of the year. Mr. Griffith, who owns and operates the Washington Baseball Club, considers the summer months as baseball's own, and he says that the Redskins are offside.

POVICH.

Moreover, he is in a mood to blow the whistle on them. Next year he will not permit the football people to use his park for their football games until his baseball season is at an end. That means until October. He does not relish all this football publicity in August and September. He says the Redskins are jumping the gun on him.

Which is probably true enough. The Redskins have moved in on the baseball season with great emphasis. Seizing on their August 31 game against the College All-Stars as an excuse, the Redskins began flooding the press with football literature during July. This week they swung into action with their first practice. They have been raising bob with the space usually devoted to baseball. Mr. Griffith has a just protest.

There are signs, however, that the Redskins, like the horseless carriage and the flying machines and the common cold, are here to stay. And thus we must dwell on them.

Will Rise or Fall With Baugh.

At their Ballston training grounds, there is talk of added power for the line and great excitement over the star graduates of the 1937 college crop who are supposed to fill Cliff Battles' shoes. But deep down, Coach Ray Flaherty knows this: The Redskins will rise or fall on the efforts of a tall, wiry Texas youth named Sammy Baugh. The Redskins will go only as far as Baugh takes them.

How the Redskins won the National professional championship for Washington last season is no secret. Slingin' Sammy won it for 'em. That Redskin line was no great shucks. Except for Battles, Flaherty didn't have a ball carrier who rated with the first dozen in the league. It was the passes of Sammy Baugh which prevailed against the power of the Giants and the Packers and the Bears. With his forward passing, Slingin' Sammy wrought a championship for the Redskins.

This year Battles is missing from that Redskin backfield. There are high hopes that Andy Farkas, George Karamatic and Jack Abbitt will bring something of the Battles' skill to the Redskins' attack. But fellows like Cliff Battles do not happen along every year. This season Slingin' Sammy must carry even a heavier burden. With no Battles to confuse the enemy defense, Baugh will draw the chief fire, for if his passes are checked the Redskins will win few ball games.

Happily for the Redskins, Slingin' Sammy is not the type to flinch under an added burden. The Texan's own competitive fury is amazing and he literally revels in the tough going. He came recommended to the Redskins as a kid who can take it and Flaherty was willing to admit that before Baugh had completed two games in a Redskin uniform.

From the outset, Slingin' Sammy was a marked man. The entire league had been forewarned of his passes. Yet Baugh made good with them. He virtually revolutioned the art of passing with his bullet-heaves that, paradoxically, were not hardship on the receiver. Baugh threw a "light" ball.

Showed Mettle at Chicago.

Down through the season it was "Baugh to Malone" and "Baugh to Millner" and "Baugh to Justice." His passes turned the tide in a half dozen games and won that many outright. Long before the season was completed, it was apparent that the tall Texan would surpass all league records for passes completed and yardage gained.

If there were any lingering doubts as to Baugh's greatness they vanished in that championship game against the Chicago Bears at Chicago. In that game, Slingin' Sammy zoomed to the heights. On a crusty, frost-bitten field with the footing as treacherous as a skating rink, Slingin' Sammy rallied the Redskins around his passes, and chucked them to the championship.

He took a horrible physical beating that day. Frail as football players go, and unprotected by the 1938 rules which give the passer some measure of protection, Slingin' Sammy was knocked down, trampled on and brutally assaulted by the panicky Bears. On one occasion, a Bear end took a punch at him in full view of the officials. Throughout the second half, when he was throwing his winning passes, Baugh was literally a one-legged player. his left leg half paralyzed from the battering he took. His throwing hand was horribly gashed and it was indeed a blood-stained ball that Wayner Milner took over the line for the winning touchdown in the last quarter.

Tall Tale of Tall Texan.

Baugh was doing all these things while a raft of his contemporaries in college football in 1936 were warming the benches for professional teams. On the Bears club, a mere substitute, was Nebraska's Sam Francis, hailed the season before as the greatest pro football prospect of recent years. Unlike Baugh, he had failed to meet the demands of pro football in his freshman year. Baugh did. With a bang!

They tell tall tales of the tall Texan youth, but the story we like best is the fanciful one they repeat about the day he first joined the Redskins.

Taken in hand by Coach Ray Flaherty, Baugh was being told the differences between college football and professional football by Flaherty. "It's a different kind of game up here," said Flaherty. "They play it harder and the bumps are tougher. If you loaf you're apt to get hurt."

"Uh, huh," said Baugh in complete understanding.

"And another thing," said Flaherty. "We're a little particular about our forward passers up here in the pro league. They've got to lay that ball up there for the receivers. We can't go leaping all over the lot trying to haul down bad passes. Those passes have got to be good. They've got to be accurate. You've got to lay them up there by the receiver's eye."

Said Baugh: "Which eye?"

Reds Edge Cubs, 8-7, in 14th Inning

Ernie Lombardi Drives Out Homer to End Long Battle.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Aug. 11.—Ernie Lombardi's home run gave the Cincinnati Reds an 8-to-7 14-inning victory over the Cubs today, their only one of the series, and kept Chicago from a second-place tie with the idle New York Giants.

Thirty hits cracked from the bats of both teams during the game. Gabby Hartnett's crew used three hurlers, and the Rhinelanders, five.

Jumping to a first-inning two-run lead, the Reds, who previously had lost four straight, found themselves tied in the second when Reynolds got to young Whitey Moore for a double, Demaree singled and Jurges followed with another two-baser.

The Reds again jumped ahead in the fifth when, batting around and loading the bases twice, they scored three runs on four hits, including a fence-busting triple by Berger. They saw their advantage fade in the sixth when the Cubs bunched five hits to tally four runs.

Clay Bryant, who started, was touched for 14 hits until he gave way to Carleton in the midst of the Reds' score-tying rally in the ninth. Yielding a safety and walk to load the bases, he was replaced by French, who retired the next 13 men in order.

"Doc" Chandler, 1st Middleweight Titleholder, Dies

Davenport, Iowa., Aug. 11 (U.P.).—Thomas (Doc) Chandler, 84, America's first middleweight boxing champion and trainer of John L. Sullivan when the latter became world heavyweight champion, died at his home tonight.

Chandler had been ill since last March, when he contracted bronchitis. The ailment affected his heart. Earlier he had boasted that he never had been ill.

Chandler followed the fight game from 1860, when prize fights were legal in only a few States, until 1889, when Sullivan lost his title to James J. Corbet in New Orleans.

Baugh Will Stunt for Fans Today in Public Exhibition

Redskins' Ace, to Join Post Staff on Monday, Will Judge Forward-Passing Tournament on Ellipse.

Meet the champion.

That is the Washington Post's invitation today to the football fans of Washington. The time: 3 to 4:30 p. m. The place: The Ellipse.

There Slingin' Sammy Baugh—champion of all forward passers—will give an exhibition of his skill in conjunction with "Baugh Day," arranged by The Washington Post in order that the fans of the Capital who last year learned to admire the talents of the Tall Texan may meet him more intimately.

Baugh, who on Monday will join the sports staff of The Post as a football commentator, will show all of his forward passing tricks and address the gathering through the loud-speaker system.

He will tell and illustrate how he throws his touchdown passes—the long ones, the short ones, the bullet heaves and the high lobs—and he will do stunts.

Slingin' Sammy has agreed to test his skill at passing by shooting at targets. From 120 feet, he will attempt to hurl footballs through automobile tires suspended in mid-air, and as a variation will throw a ball into a barrel from the same distance.

Collaborating with him in his exhibition will be the Redskins' famed pass catching ends, Wayne Millner and Charlie Malone, who will be on the receiving end of Slingin' Sammy's heaves at the Ellipse.

Preceding the Baugh exhibition, the youth of Washington will compete in the city's first forward passing tournament for boys 16 years old and under. From the city's playgrounds, 43 individual playground champions will toe the mark on the Ellipse for heaves for both distance and accuracy.

Baugh will be the judge of the competition and will present prizes to the winners.

The competition will be under the supervision of Richard S. Tennyson, assistant superintendent of playgrounds. An added feature will be the appearance of the National Training School Band which will give the first public rendition of the new Redskins' song "Hail to the Redskins" with words by Mrs. George Preston Marshall and music by Barnee.

Capital Printers Beat St. Louis to Reach Semifinal

St. Louis, Aug. 11 (AP).—Detroit was eliminated from the Union Printers international baseball tournament today and Washington, D. C., St. Louis and Baltimore thrown into a three-way tie.

Baltimore outslugged Detroit, 14 to 9, collecting 16 hits off the Detroit hurlers in eliminating the squad with its second defeat.

The Washington team handed St. Louis its first setback since the tourney started, downing the host team, 18 to 15.

Two games tomorrow will decide the finalists. St. Louis, Washington and Baltimore each have three victories and one defeat. New York, which drew a bye today, has two victories and one defeat. A second defeat eliminates a team.

Nats Return With Travis No. 1 Hitter

Shortstop on Top in Batting; Boston Series Starts.

Boasting the league's leading hitter in Cecil Travis, and hanging on grimly to their first-division berth, the Nats return to Griffith Stadium today to do battle with the third-place Boston Red Sox.

Sorely beset by their pitching failures, the Nats have been staying within striking distance of second and third place by virtue of their slugging. And yesterday, at New York, Travis took over the league batting lead.

Among the leading hitters since the season started, his average rarely falling below the .345 mark, Travis inherited the lead yesterday when he made one hit in five times at bat while Jimmy Foxx was going hitless against the Athletics. Travis now boasts a .349 average compared to Foxx's .348.

But as Manager Bucky Harris brings his talent back to the familiar grounds of Griffith Stadium, he is plagued by a new and unforeseen development—a harrowing fielding slump by Buddy Lewis. The young third baseman, obviously worn and tired by the daily grind, has been a severe handicap to the Nats in the field.

Yesterday, when he made a wild throw which led to four unearned Yankee runs, Lewis committed his fourth error in two games. His fielding lapses were individually responsible for seven unearned runs scored by the Yankees in the two games.

Today, in an attempt to get his pitching staff squared away, Harris will send Emil "Dutch" Leonard and his knuckle ball against the Red Sox. Leonard authored one of the few impressive games turned in by Washington pitchers on their road trip when he held the White Sox to five hits last week in his last start.

Despite the loss of nine of their 15 games on the road, the Nats still consider themselves in the battle for second and third place. Against the Red Sox they will have an opportunity to make up much ground. Joe Cronin's Boston club is only seven games in the van of the Nats and a game and a half farther are the second-place Cleveland Indians.

With the return of the club to Washington, Harris is expected to give young Lewis a rest and install the veteran Ossie Bluege at third base. Save for his pitching, and Lewis' fielding collapse which Harris is confident is only temporary, the Nats are in a better position for a stretch finish than at any time this year. Chiefly responsible for the encouraging outlook is the return of Zeke Bonura and Al Simmons to their batting form and George Case's improved play both at bat and in the field.

Redskins' Drill Is Featured by Line, Pass Plays

The Redskins' search for a successor to Cliff Battles was launched surreptitiously yesterday during the two-hour afternoon drill at Ballston, Va., where Ray Flaherty is grooming his men for the All-Star game at Chicago August 31.

Satisfied with the condition of the players, most of whom already are down to playing weight, Flaherty inaugurated the matinee drill of the second day with a couple of simple line bucks and pass plays. He stressed the fact that nothing new in the way of strategy will be attempted for a couple of days, but indicated that he expected to have the squad devoting full time to new formations by Monday.

It was while running off the line and pass plays that the freckled-face coach first inserted Jim Abbitt, then Maury Elder, Leroy Campbell and George Karamatic at Battles' old post, noting keenly and critically their handling of the ball.

Man of the Month

By Arch McDonald.
(WJSV-Wheaties Baseball Commentator.)

(Each day, Arch McDonald distributes 10 points among the Nats whose play was most helpful to the Washington Club. At the end of each month The Washington Post will award to the leading player a gift in token of the honor of being The Post-Wheaties "Man of the Month.")

Al Simmons moves up among the leaders in the Man of the Month contest on the impetus of his slugging display at Yankee Stadium yesterday. On the basis of yesterday's play, points are awarded as follows:

To Simmons, four points, because he made four hits in five times at bat and figured in four of the Washington runs.

To Taft Wright, three points, because he contributed a two-bagger and a pair of singles to the Nats' attack.

To Sammy West, two points, because he made a single and a triple and drove in a run.

To Zeke Bonura, one point, because he made two hits in four times at bat and figured in two runs.

The Score:

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Buddy Myer | 15 | Dutch Leonard | 5 |
| Zeke Bonura | 15 | Angelo Giuliani | 4 |
| Al Simmons | 11 | Harry Kelley | 4 |
| Buddy Lewis | 8 | Taft Wright | 4 |
| Cecil Travis | 8 | Ossie Bluege | 2 |
| Ken Chase | 7 | Elon Hogsett | 2 |
| George Case | 6 | Joe Krakauskas | 2 |
| Sammy West | 6 | Rick Ferrell | 1 |

Arm Goes 'Dead'

"LEFTY" GROVE.

'Lefty' Grove Quits Mound, His Arm Dead

Boston Pitcher Retires to Showers After Hurling Two Innings.

By the United Press.

Philadelphia, Aug. 11. — Bob (Lefty) Grove retired after the second inning of today's Boston Red Sox-Philadelphia Athletics ball game and announced that his famed hurling arm was "dead as a board."

Grove pitched two full innings, allowing an Athletic run in the second, and walked to the locker room after the final out, complaining that his left arm was "tired."

Later, Grove slowly buttoned his shirt and announced to newsmen and players who expressed concern about the arm:

"Boys, she's dead as a board."

His Nineteenth Year.

He flexed the arm, which failed him similarly on July 14 at Boston, and remarked that "this is my nineteenth year throwing them."

"Maybe she's all done. There's just so many pitches in an arm."

At Boston, the ailing arm was treated in a hospital and after three weeks' rest Grove returned to the mound and again retired after the Detroit Tigers hammered him for four runs in one inning.

The 38-year-old veteran of almost 14 years in the major leagues had won 19 games for Boston this season and lost 2. He was regarded as largely responsible for Boston's third place position in the pennant race.

Nothing but Spin.

In the locker room, Grove disclosed that he "didn't have anything but spin on the ball."

He said a gnawing pain was centered in his lower forearm. Trainer Willie Green massaged the ailing wing from the shoulder to the finger tips.

In contrast to similar occasions, Grove did not sulk nor did he storm about the locker room. He seemed resigned to the fact that the famed pitching arm may be nearing the end of its effectiveness.

Seabiscuit Aiming At Sun Beau Mark

Los Angeles, Aug. 11 (AP).—A barrel-chested horse named Seabiscuit tomorrow will try to stretch his winnings past $315,000— a mark only four others have reached since the beginning of thoroughbred racing.

The sturdy son of Hard Tack, still plugging faithfully toward the all-time mark held by Sun Beau at $376,744, will face two obstalces as he starts down a strip of powdery turf at Del Mar race track that may lead to the glory road. One is Ligaroti, trim, black speed devil from the Pampas of South America. The other is the handicap of shouldering 130 pounds while his opponent is carrying only 114.

Lefty Gomez Chalks Up His 11th Victory but Fails to Finish.

New Yorkers Get Only 5 Hits; Joe DiMaggio Raps Home Run.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Aug. 11.—Add one more feat to the Nats' dizzy 1938 record. Today they performed something of a baseball miracle. They managed to get themselves licked despite the fact that they made 17 hits to the Yankees' 5. And the score wasn't even close—9 to 6.

TRAVIS.

The Nats were doing the hitting and the Yankees were scoring the runs. All afternoon the Nats' bats were ringing out and all afternoon Yankees were crossing the plate. This strange state of affairs was brought about by the Nats' failure to hit at the proper moments and the Yankees' habit of capitalizing on nine bases on balls.

Until they came up with three runs in the ninth inning, the Nats had only three runs to show for 13 hits off Lefty Gomez and Johnny Murphy. By that time, however, the Yankees had converted their five hits into six runs.

Krakauskas Walks 6.

Young Joe Krakauskas gave up four of the Yankees' five hits in the five innings he pitched, but, more important to the Yankees' cause, he issued six walks. He also issued a home run to Joe DiMaggio in the third inning at a time when two of DiMag's pals were on base.

That four-run uprising of the Yankees which clinched the game in the third inning could have been averted by Buddy Lewis. But the Nats' young third baseman, in the throes of the worst fielding slump of his career, tossed his fourth error in two days into the third-inning proceedings and gave DiMaggio a chance to stroll to the plate with his trusty bludgeon in his hand.

The Nats wasted a mess of fancy hitting up here today. Both Lewis and Simmons swatted the Yankee pitching for four hits and Taft Wright collected three. But for the most part the Nats failed to hit with men on bases.

DiMaggio Gets Homer.

Until the Yankees came to bat in the third inning, the Nats were enjoying a 1-1 tie. Then, with one out, Gomez walked and Lewis threw Crosetti's grounder into rightfield in an attempt for a force play at second. A walk to Rolfe filled the bases and a long fly by Hoag scored Gomez. At this point DiMaggio dumped his three-run homer into the leftfield stands.

The Yanks came up with three more runs against Krakauskas in the fifth after Krakky walked a pair. DiMaggio singled one run home and Gehrig singled home another. Selkirk's long fly produced the third run of the inning and gave the Yanks an 8-2 lead. The Yanks added their ninth run in the eighth inning. It was done very passively. Travis fumbled Murphy's grounder, and Hogsett filled the bases by hitting Crosetti with a pitched ball and walking Rolfe. Then Hoag's long fly to Simmons sent the run home.

The Nats were having a horrible time of it meanwhile against Gomez, despite their frequent hits. They had the bases filled with one out in the first inning, but Travis hit

Stratton Gives Tigers 4 Hits As White Sox Maul Foe, 13-1

Dykesmen Score All of Their Runs in 2 Innings; Weird Fielding Aids Victory.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 11.—With Monty Stratton pitching four-hit ball, Chicago's White Sox, aided by some sloppy Tiger fielding, pounced on three Detroit hurlers for 12 hits today and won, 13 to 1.

The Sox scored all their runs in two big innings, counting seven times in the third and six in the eighth.

An error and weird fielding led to the first Sox outburst. With two on and one out, Roxie Lawson made a bad throw to second on Boze Berger's easy roller. Then he collided with Rudy York when the next batter, Marv Owen, hit in front of the plate.

Gee Walker drove in five runs for the Sox with a single and a double. Stratton was never in trouble in achieving his twelfth victory of the season.

3 Tied at 69 In Cleveland Open Event

Lewis Worsham Has 73; Leo Walper 77; Six Under 71.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Aug. 11.—A detachment of 196 golfers, including most of the country's best pros, chased 3,200 spectators around the Oakwood course for ten hours today in Cleveland's $10,000 Open, but when the shooting was all over the golf bugs had seen par 71 broken just six times.

Willie Goggin, of San Francisco, Calif.; Byron Nelson, of Reading, Pa., and E. J. Harrison, of Oak Park, Ill., working for three of the smaller galleries, turned in 69s. Johnny Revolta, of Evanston, Ill.; Ted Turner, of Clementon, N. J., and Ky Laffoon, of Chicago, finished their day with 70s.

Behind this sextette was a respectable group of ten members who posted 71, even par.

These includde Leo Willcox, of Marion, Ohio; Jock Willoweit, of Springfield, Ohio; Billy Burke, of Cleveland; Craig Wood, of Rumson, N. J.; Tony Penna, of Dayton, Ohio; Ed Dudley, of Philadelphia; Johnny Fischer, Cincinnati amateur; Denny Shute, of West Newton, Mass.; Sam Snead, of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., and Phil Perkins, of Cleveland.

Worsham Has 73.

Lewis Worsham, jr., young professional from the Chevy Chase, Md., club, was only four shots out of the lead with a 35-38—73. Leo Walper, Washington, D. C., driving range mentor, and two-time Middle Atlantic P. G. A. champion, was out in 40 and returned in 37 for a 77.

Sam Byrd, the one-time New York Yankee outfielder who turned to golf, almost landed among those breaking par for the course. Needing a par 4 on the 410-yard eighteenth for a 70, Byrd slapped an iron shot over the green onto a wooden bridge, from which the ball bounced up a hill. Byrd then rolled the ball to the green and took three putts for a 72.

Byrd remained in the good company of 11 others who turned the windy, damp course for 72's, however. These included Jimmy Hines, of Great Neck, Long Island; Ralph Guldahl, the National Open champion; Mortie Dutra, of Detroit, and Harry Cooper, of Chicopee, Mass. Guldahl made his first trip of the four-day tournament with Leo Diegel, who also had a 72, and Fischer, the former national amateur champion.

72 For Picard.

Snead, a heavy money winner on the professional circuit, took 35 strokes to tour the final nine holes, which he skipped over in a record 29 yesterday during a practice match.

Among those who missed the par or better figures of the day were Vic Ghezzi, of Deal, N. J., with 73; Tony Manero, Peabody, Mass., 75; Sam Parks, jr., Pittsburgh, 73; Henry Picard, Hershey, Pa., 72; Harry Cooper, Chicopee, Mass., 72, and Paul Runyan, White Plains, N. Y., 78.

The field will be narrowed to 84 after tomorrow's round and the best guess tonight was that it would take 154 or better to stay in the contest.

Miss Miley Finishes 2d, Mrs. Hill 3d

Patty's Final 82 Wins Title by 10-Shot Margin.

By Earl Hilligan,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Chicago, Aug. 11.—Freckle-faced Patty Berg made another record-garnished entry in her fairway championship diary today.

The stubby little Minneapolis star, after three years as runner-up in the event, captured the Women's Western Golf Association derby for the first time, completing the 72 holes in 308 strokes.

Her four-day march to the title opened with a sensational 73, a tournament record for a single round. She followed with cards of 78, 75 and today's final 82 for an aggregate which clipped a single stroke off the tourney mark set last summer by Marion Miley of Lexington, Ky.

10 Strokes Ahead.

Miss Berg's 54-hole total of 226 strokes enabled her to start today's final round with a 13-stroke margin over her closest rival—and the big lead enabled her to coast home to victory. Falling off her sensational pace of the three opening rounds, she slipped four strokes over par on the final five holes to wind up with a two over par 82. Even then she finished ten strokes under Miss Miley, the second place holder and winner of the long grind from 1935 through 1937. Miss Miley had a 78 today.

Mrs. Opal S. Hill, Kansas City, finished with a brilliant 76, which included a two over par 7 on the tenth hole, for a 321 aggregate and third place. Fourth finisher was Beatrice Barrett, of Minneapolis, at 322, with an 83 final round.

Miss Berg, current trans-Mississippi champion and twice runner-up in the National Open, had a two under par first nine of 39 and appeared well on her way toward clipping several strokes off Miss Miley's mark. She ran into trap trouble at the fourteenth, however, to slip a stroke over regulation figures. She was over the green and one over par at the next hole before getting a par 5 on the sixteenth.

On the par 4 seventeenth hole the Minnesota girl's second shot was short, her third was over the green and when she did get on in four she two-putted from 6 feet. Needing a par 5 on the eighteenth hole for a new record, she tightened to get on easily in three and almost dropped a 6-foot putt for a birdie, holing out from 6 inches for her 308 total.

Eleanor Dudley, of Chicago, was fifth with 326, followed by Ella Mae Williams, of Chicago, at 327 and Dorothy Traung, San Francisco star, at 329.

'Detective' Ahearn Goes A-Sleuthing—and Finds, of All Things, a Couple of Fighters!

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Disguised as a prosperous prize-fight matchmaker, Herr Goldie Ahearn went asleuthing yesterday to determine who's giving who the run-around on the Mamakos-Abrams bout coming up Monday night at the ball park, and to note with critical eye the gladiators' condition.

The flat-foot fat man hoofed it over to New Center Market where, amid the pungent odor of over-ripe tomatoes, green peppers, summer squash, sugar corn and smoked beef, Young Abrams is polishing his rapier-like blows for his Greek rival. Ahearn sniffed around in his best correspondence detective school manner, poked an inquisitive finger into cob-webby corners, and glared at Abrams and his manager in approved police style. He really looked the part.

At the street corner, after completing his investigation, he called the wagon, that is a taxi, and was transported in fitting style to the National Guard Armory on Pennsylvania avenue where Mamakos is getting in his final training licks. He invaded the gloomy, bare-walled gym importantly and scowled at Mamakos a couple of times. The Greek lad scowled back and clubbed his sparring partner flush on the chin. Ahearn cautiously swung his tummy around out of the danger zone, and after satisfying himself that things are pretty much on the level departed. He did a double-quick down the stairs when somebody suggested he could be hauled off to the gaol for impersonating an officer.

And it was a verbose official report he filed with Maj. Joe Turner, the unwilling superintendent of the Turner and Ahearn detective agency.

"This Mamakos," Sergt. Ahearn reported, puffing like a winded elephant, "this Mamakos is really tough. He was hammering Murray Kanner, he's a heavyweight you know, Eddie Saugsted and Bob Mathias, all over that ring. He boxed 10 rounds, and Joe, I'm not kidding, he didn't even take a deep breath. He looks wonderful.

"And you know what he says to me? He says, 'Mr. Ahearn, all I want Abrams to do is come out and fight me and you'll see the greatest bout ever fought at the Stadium. Can you imagine that?

"I never knew the boy was such an orator," wryly remarked Mr. Turner.

"Cross my heart," said Ahearn defensively. "Cross my heart if he didn't say every word of it. All he wants Abrams to do is quit being a cutie and come out and fight. He don't want Georgie to grab and hold on, and push him around and give 'im all that stuff. He wants him to stand up and fight. Can you imagine that?"

"I can't imagine Abrams doing that," replied Maj. Turner. "But stranger things have happened. Does he want Abrams to fall down for him along about the fifth round just long enough to be counted out?"

"You're joking now," the good sergeant said. "You're joking when you say things like that, but that Mamakos isn't. He's serious as can be."

"I certainly hope so," concluded the Major.

Meanwhile, the supporting card has been completed with Joey Green tangling with Billy Bullock in a six-round semifinal, which can easily be the outstanding bout of the night. Both lads dislike one another intensely and have fought two of the most exciting fights ever manufactured here.

Pancho Huerta and Tony Pissaro are down for a six-rounder; Vince Carino boxes Baby Face Jerry Hall in another six, and Brooks Bowen will open the show in a furor against an opponent yet to be named. Hall will be remembered as the sweet-looking youngster who knocked out Saugusted in the second round of the latter's professional debut about a month ago.

Joe Louis Agrees to Defend Title in 4 Fights Next Year

By Jack Cuddy.
United Press Sports Writer.

New York, Aug. 11.—While Lou Ambers and Henry Armstrong resumed training today for Wednesday night's postponed lightweight title fight, Promoter Mike Jacobs went to work on the big fellows in this fashion:

(1) He reached an agreement with Joe Louis for the heavyweight champion to make four title defenses in 1939. The Brown Bomber will not fight again this year.

LOUIS.

(2) He virtually completed negotiations for a heavyweight brawl at Madison Square Garden this autumn between Tommy Farr, of England, and Gunnar Barlund, of Finland, who arrived today on the Kungsholm.

(3) He reopened negotiations for a light-heavyweight title bout between John Henry Lewis and Tiger Jack Fox for the Garden in September.

Promoter Jacobs was in fine fettle as he prepared for the fight picture. The rain that washed out last night's Ambers-Armstrong lightweight tilt at the Polo Grounds failed to dampen his promotorial ardor. In fact, "Uncle" Mike seemed as happy over last night's pitter-patter as a resident of the Southwest's dust bowl.

He admitted that the Ambers-Armstrong shift from the ball park to the house that Rickard built cost him only about $10,000. And he expected the shift to result in a gross gate of approximately $150,000 instead of a possible $80,000.

Jacobs went into an early huddle with Joe Louis and Manager John Roxborough. Because of the heavy income taxes and lack of topflight competition, it was deemed best for Jolting Joe to refrain from tossing leather until next year. Then he will risk his heavyweight crown four times, fighting in January, April, June and September. The January scrap will be in the Garden. The April bout may be held at San Francisco, Calif., and the other two engagements doubtless will be outdoors in New York.

Meanwhile Barlund, the "Finnish finisher" who belted out Buddy Baer in his last New York appearance, returned from a three-month vacation in his native Finland. Jacobs conferred lengthily with Barlund's manager, Paul Damski, and Farr's manager, Joe Gould. Jacobs said he expected definite agreement shortly on the exact date and terms.

Attempting to arrange a light heavyweight title tilt, "Uncle" Mike told Matchmaker Tom McArdle to offer John Henry Lewis 50 per cent of any net gate he might draw at the Garden in September in a 15-round bout with Tiger Jack Fox, of Spokane, Wash.

Olson Defeats Boesch In Arena Mat Feature

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Bull-necked Cliff Olson, wrestling's No. 1 bad man, upset the dope and Paul Boesch last night at Turner's Arena, where he dumped the bronzed Californian in the surprisingly fast time of 15 minutes.

A howling audience of 1,100 fans, all howling for Cliff's closely cropped head, saw the blond Minnesota mauler employ the same tactics used on him by Ernie Dusek several weeks ago when Dusek won a disputed decision. It was a self-inflicted backdrop that sent Boesch hurling to the canvas and defeat.

Olson, his usual play self, had just finished rubbing a peanut in Boesch's eye, kicking him and annoying him in other harmless ways when the curly-haired Californian seized him by the scruff of the neck and sent him hurling over his shoulder. Thrice Boesch repeated the maneuver, backing Olson into the ropes to gain added momentum. But the last time he tried it Cliff held on like a cat with a fish. He held just long enough to break Boesch's cadence, then dropped on him to win. To say the fans were disappointed is putting it mildly.

Bibber McCoy won the battle royal, knocked out Johnson and flopping on his quivering carcass for the winning points. In a consolation bout between the two first eliminated, Abe Kibbens threw Slim Zimbleman in 11½ minutes. Mike Mazurki tossed Ed White in 18 minutes in another consolation.

Emil Dusek won an unpopular decision over Abe Coleman in the curtain-raiser, scoring after 28 minutes of strenuous work with a series of headlocks and a body press. The matches were moved indoors because of threatening weather, and it was surprisingly cool, which has given Promoter Joe Turner the idea of continuing indoors for the remainder of the season.

Post Scripts

Mel Almada whom the Nats sentenced to the Browns because he couldn't hit has hit safely in 27 consecutive games, as this is written . . . Add oddity department . . . Dick Lanahan, the former Eastern High lefty who had several trials with the Nats, lost both ends of the double-header, pitching for Chattanoga against New Orleans the other day . . . Dick started the first game and was shelled out in the sixth and then in the nightcap he relieved Malone in the ninth only to be charged with his second defeat of the day as the Pelicans scored a run to win, 6-5 . . . The fans' nomination of Lou Gehrig as the outstanding first baseman of the year in a current nation-wide poll again bears out the club owners' contention that they are too often swayed by sentiment to qualify as baseball experts . . . The Iron Horse undoubtedly has been the game's greatest first sacker over a period of ten years but this season he couldn't carry Jimmy Foxx's glove . . . The Red Sox slugger is leading the league in hitting while Gehrig has not been over .300 since the campaign opened . . . Add to that Foxx's tremendous margin in homers and runs batted in and Gehrig suffers badly by comparison.

The rookie sensation of the Philadelphia Eagles' grid training camp is none other than Dick Riffle, Albright College's high-scoring back, who is remembered here for his great exhibition against Georgetown two years ago. There is talk of matching Don Gutteridge, the National League's unofficial sprint champion, against the winner of the forthcoming races between George Case and Ben Chapman to decide the fastest dashman in the majors . . . Morton Cooper, Houston's 22-year-old righthanded pitching find, turned in his seventh shutout of the season recently, the latest link in a chain of low-hit victories unparalleled in the Texas League . . . ## Girls Swim Final Today

Virginia Avenue Team Wins Honors.

Sectional meets in the girls city-wide playground swimming program were staged yesterday at Anacostia and Banneker pools. The final competition will be held this morning at 10 o'clock at East Potomac Pool.

The feature events at Anacostia saw Ruth Hitt, of Virginia Avenue, win the 25-yard free style in the 10-12 years class. Margaret Millbrant, of Van Buren, won the 25-yard free style in the 15-16 years division, over Marie Eckloff, of Anacostia.

Team honors went to Virginia avenue in the Anacostia meet and to Dunbar in the Banneker events.

Softball Championships Will Be Played Tuesday

Finals in the junior and senior divisions of the District of Columbia public recreation softball championships, scheduled for today, have been moved up to Tuesday.

The scene of action also changes from the West Potomac Park diamonds to the North Ellipse. The junior game is due to begin at 1:30 p. m., and the senior tilt at 2:30 o'clock.

Pro-Amateur Golf Play Set At Aberdeen Course Monday

Event at Forrest Greens Wins P. G. A. Approval; Mixed Two-Ball Tourney Arranged.

The Middle Atlantic P. G. A. has sanctioned a pro-amateur tournament next Monday at the Forrest Greens Course, Aberdeen, Md., where Glenn Spencer is professional.

The tonrney will be a pro and three amateurs affair, the latter playing with half handicap allowance. Special privileges will be allowed the players and their families at the nearby beach.

The local P. G. A. card was completed with the tourney last Monday at Capital, but events will be added from time to time throughout the remainder of the season. This is Spencer's first year at the course and a majority of the local mentors have promised to play in the tourney.

The mixed two-ball event of the Maryland State Golf Association, carded Sunday, August 21, over the Five Farms course in Baltimore, will be for the State mixed two-ball championship, according to word from State golf officials.

Entries close next Friday, with Emmet Gary, at 16 McClellan place, Baltimore. The entrance fee is $1.50 per team, including greens fee. The low gross winners will be titled State champs while suitable prizes will be awarded the low net scores. The players will receive half the handicap allowance.

Pairings and starting times will be alloted in the order in which the entries are received. No teams will play before 12 noon.

Posters calling attention to the District Amateur, September 21-22-23 at Congressional, and the District mixed two-ball tournament, September 28, at Washington, have been distributed by Dr. W. C. Barr, of the District Golf Association. Entries close three days prior to the events. Billy Shea is defending champion in the Amateur while Mrs. Betty Meckley and Volney Burnett won the mixed event last year, with a record 71, at Chevy Chase.

Mrs. Bishop Hill Enters Shawnee Semi-Finalc

Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., Aug. 11 (AP).—The favorites, Mrs. W. D. Cross, of the Baltusrol Club, and Mrs. William Hockenjos, of Lake Hoptacong, N. J., advanced today to the semifinal round of the women's invitation golf tournament at the Shawnee Country Club, along with Mrs. Bishop Hill, Chevy Chase, Md., and Charlotte Glutting, Orange, N. J.

Mrs. Goss defeated Blanche Fennell, of Ridgewood, N. J., 7 and 5, while Mrs. Hockenjos, medalist, sank a putt on the eighteenth green to eliminate Alice Rutherfurd, of Baltimore, one up.

into a double play. In the fifth inning Travis left two runners on base when he popped up for the third out, and in the sixth, after Wright and Rick Ferrell singled, Pinch Hitter Wes Ferrell whiffed ingloriously on three pitches.

In the eighth, after filling the bases with none out, the Nats managed to extract only one run from the proceedings. Gomez complained of a blister on his pitching hand and retired in favor of Murphy while in the act of walking Taft Wright. With the bases filled, the combined batting efforts of Giuliani, Pinch Hitter Myer and Bluege netted only one run.

In the ninth, the Nats produced three hits and four runs after Lewis and Simmons had each banged out their fourth hit of the game. Bonura struck out and Travis grounded out while a run scored. Sammy West tripled to right center to drive in another run, and Taft Wright's third hit produced the third run of the inning. Which left the Nats exactly three runs shy of a draw.

I'D LIKE TO HELP THE CRIPPLED CHILDREN - HOW MUCH'LL IT COST ME?
IF THAT'S A WHITE OWL YOU'RE SMOKING - IT'S ONLY A DOLLAR. IF IT'S ANY OTHER BRAND - THE CHARGE IS FIVE DOLLARS
HEY - HOW COME?
WHAT - HAVEN'T YOU HEARD ABOUT WHITE OWL'S BEING EASIER-ON-THE-BREATH?
I'M SURE HE HASN'T - AND AT FIVE DOLLARS THE INFORMATION'S CHEAP - HENRY, PAY THE LADY!
THESE WHITE OWLS SURE KEEP MOVING - GUESS IT'S BECAUSE THEY'RE EASIER-ON-THE BREATH
BUT DON'T FORGET, GEORGE - THEY TASTE BETTER, TOO!

Smokers' Test showed Vintage Tobacco was easier on your breath

WHITE OWLS are definitely easier on your breath—scientific tests proved it. Every White Owl always has a filler of Vintage quality and—like a Vintage wine—nature made it exceptionally mild, mellow.

We maintain a vast and unique crop-inspection system . . . classify all filler tobaccos into seven grades, using only tobacco of the top three for Vintage White Owls.

All this to give you a Vintage smoke. You'll like its taste—and ladies will admire your taste for choosing it.

The Metallic Nose Knows

Scientists use a sensitive osmoscope to measure odor . . . to record its intensity and lasting power. Ten popular brands of 5¢ cigars were tested by this machine. White Owl was easier on the breath than all the others. After 30 minutes, all trace of tobacco odor disappeared from the breath of White Owl smokers.

In This Corner

(Richards Vidmer, The Post columnist, is on vacation. While he is away, Jack Cuddy's "In This Corner" will occupy the spot usually taken by "Down In Front.")

By Jack Cuddy.

Yankee Replacements.

New York, Aug. 11.—As the Yankees march toward their third straight pennant, time also marches on, bringing twilight to the careers of several outstanding Yankee players. But the club's brass hats have little worry for the future, because the organization has taken out regeneration insurance.

CUDDY.

These performers have passed or are just approaching their thirtieth birthdays: Gehrig, Rolfe, Dickey, Hoag, Hadley, Murphy and Ruffing. In addition, Shortstop Crosetti is 28, but he was always a very fragile fellow. These men will begin fading out of the big-time picture soon.

Who will take their places? How and where will Col. Jake Ruppert get replacements to keep alive his pennant-winning combination? Although Ruppert is one of the wealthiest owners in baseball, the experiences of Tom Yawkey at Boston prove that one cannot "buy" pennants nowadays. Ruppert craves pennants more than any individual connected with the game. Winning flags and championships is the romance—the religion—of this elderly bachelor brewer.

Built for Future.

Ruppert knows where he will get his replacements, and he is confident that the new men, when they come in, will plug, in championship fashion, the gaps that time carves in the line-up. He will get them from his farm system, second largest in baseball.

Jake has built for the future. Although his minor league chain is only five years old, it is extensive and remarkably efficient. The Yanks own 5 minor league clubs outright and have working agreements with 11 others. They own clubs at Newark, N. J.; Kansas City; Arkon, Ohio; Binghamton, N. Y., and Norfolk, Va.

Possessing unlimited wealth, Ruppert is not likely to make mistakes with material from his string of farms, such as Sam Breadon and Branch Rickey made with promising players from the Cardinal chain. Incidentally, the Cards' system is the largest in the game. They can tap probably 30 or more clubs. This great chain is producing many fine players, but unfortunately Breadon and Rickey of late have been letting the best ones slip through their fingers to other National League outfits. Hence, despite their vast recruiting organization, the Cards are now wallowing in seventh place.

There's not much chance of Ruppert, Joe McCarthy, Ed Barrow and George Weiss blundering like the Cards' brass hats. They're developing some fine young players around their 11 minor clubs, and you can expect to see some of those lads moving into Yankee Stadium.

They Hold Tryouts.

I mean chaps like Catcher Rosar, Outfielders Keller and Gleason, Third Baseman May and Pitchers Russo, Haley and Donald, all of whom are making a splendid showing this season with Newark, International League leader. At Kansas City two outfielders are performing brilliantly: Gallagher and Judnich. Other topflight outfielders are Holmes at Binghamton and Silvanic at Akron. Second Baseman Priddy at Norfolk is a real comer, but he'll probably have to wait a long time to hold down the Yanks' second sack on which Rookie Joe Gordon is proving a sensation.

Binghamton has a fine first baseman in big Levy. He or two youngsters out on option may become Gehrig's ultimate successor. The two first sackers out on option are Gabrielson with Seattle and Sturm with Louisville. In addition promising pitchers are developing on many of the clubs.

The Yankee chain seems to have able replacements ready for any position except shortstop. But George Weiss, vice president of the Newark club and general manager of the farm system, figures that shotstops too will come along before anything happens to the Yanks' Signor Crosetti.

Each of the 11 farm clubs holds two or three "tryouts" each season. All promising players in the club's area are invited to come to the ball park and display their wares. Those who display ability are signed up. The Yankee chain conducts no "schools" like the Cardinals. The Yanks' farm outfits merely try out prospects and train them after signing up. They don't try to train them before the tryout.

'Buzzer' Is Found; Jockey Suspended

Providence, R. I., Aug. 11 (AP).—Stewards at Narragansett race track announced this afternoon they had suspended Jockey Lucien Laurin, 26-year-old rider from Montreal, after, they said, a "buzzer" had been found in his possession just before the start of today's races, in which he was to ride one horse.

Discovery of the "buzzer," the stewards said, was made by Jimmy Ferris, custodian of the jockeys' dressing room.

A "buzzer" is a battery of special make, which can be held in a jockey's hand and which can give an electric shock to a horse and make him spurt during a race. Their use is illegal.

Accident to Colt Occurs At Saratoga

Ariel Toy Is Disqualified Because of Actions on the Track.

By the Associated Press.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 10.—A tragedy that recalled the similar fate met by Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' Sky Larking in the Champlain Handicap at Belmont Park occurred here today when Mrs. Charles Shipman Payson's Thingumabob, rated one of the best juveniles in the country, broke his left front leg during the running of the twenty-sixth Sanford Stakes. The exceptionally valuable son of Boojum-Refine had to be destroyed.

Thingumabob had started only twice. He won his debut at Belmont Park and recently captured the rich Arlington Futurity in highly impressive fashion. He had earned $31,810 and it would be hard to estimate his true value. When Sky Larking broke his leg at Belmont, it was figured that the colt was worth all of $250,000 to his owner, and it is doubtful if Mr. Payson held Thingumabob in any less regard.

Ariel Toy Disqualified.

Hugh W. Jackson's Ariel Toy, which appeared to come over and bother Thingumabob when the latter was moving up on the inside to challenge on the backstretch, finished first in the race but lost the $4,725 winner's share of the purse when the stewards disqualified him. The race was awarded to G. D. Widener's 50-to-1 shot Birch Rod, which finished a length behind Ariel Toy. A. G. Vanderbilt's Trailer, another length and a half back, was awarded the place and Glen Riddle's Get Off the show. The time, made over six furlongs of mud, was 1:14 1-5.

After the race, Eddie Arcaro, who rode Thingumabob, was broken up, but refused to blame Lee Hardy, Ariel Toy's pilot, for causing the mishap to his mount. Eddie said the colt took a bad step and the leg snapped.

Suddenly Falters.

Thingumabob, a 1 to 4 favorite, broke sixth in the field of eight. Arcaro sent him up very fast on the inside, and it appeared he might get to the front going to the first turn. Thangumabob suddenly faltered, but remained vertical. Arcaro pulled up around the bend and dismounted. After examination, it was seen that the leg had snapped clean above the ankle and there was no hope to save the expensive animal.

Birch Rod, after breaking on top, dropped back to fifth place. Wayne Wright, completing a double, gradually reached contention with the long shot, but Ariel Toy stuck to his guns. The Stewards disqualified Ariel Toy partly because he bothered Thingumabob and partly because he ducked out in front of Birch Rod in the final drive.

The Sanford is the event in which Man o' War suffered his lone defeat back in 1919.

Diavolo Triumphs At Chicago Track

Chicago, Aug. 11 (AP).—Diavolo Boy turned in the best time for six furlongs of the Washington Park meeting today and beat the favored Marle by a length and a quarter in the Phoenix Handicap. Noble Boy was third.

It was the first start for the Valdina Farm's 3-year-old son of Diavolo—Bonny Barry since the winter racing season. Diavolo Boy's time was 1:12 4-5.

Diavolo Boy came up on the inside and passed Marle in the stretch after Noble Boy had set the early pace. Paired with Eagle Pass as an entry, the Valdina horse paid $10.40 straight.

Would Dare Wins Narragansett Race

Pawtucket, R. I., Aug. 11 (AP).—W. Zakor's Would Dare came from behind in the stretch today to win the fifth race of an all claiming card at Narragansett Park and pay $26.10.

Would Dare finished in front of the Tall Trees Stables U. Demon that paid $5.70 to place to give Jockey Harry Krovitz a double. U. Demon was a length in front of Glenn Felkner's Muggins, that paid $5.10 to show at the finish. In fourth place two lengths away was Mrs. Merle Simmon's Ramus.

The winner was timed in 1:50 for the mile and 70 yards.

Browns Win Pair From Cleveland

Take First, 8-7, Finale by 8-2; Newsom Wins on His Birthday.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Aug. 11 (AP).—With Buck Newsom and Les Tietje hurling fine ball, the Browns took a doubleheader from the Cleveland Indians today, 8 to 7 and 8 to 2.

Newsom achieved his twelfth victory of the year in the opener, allowing only five hits. His wildness nearly cost him the game, however, the important part of his thirtieth birthday celebration.

In the nightcap, Tietje held the Indians to three hits until the ninth when three more safeties collected Cleveland's only runs.

Harlond Clift hit for the circuit in the fifth inning.

Grant Collapses, Rallies to Beat Guernsey

Choices Win Play in Rye Tournament

Sabin Extends Allison; Mako Defeats Hare; Hunt Advances.

By the United Press.

Rye, N. Y., Aug. 11.—Semifinal brackets in the women's division and quarter-final places in the men's competition were filled today in the Eastern lawn tennis championships at the Westchester Country Club.

The day's play was marked by the collapse of Bitsy Grant, of Atlanta, Ga., fourth-ranking player in the Nation and seeded third for the Eastern title, while playing Frank Guernsey, jr., national collegiate champion from Orlando, Fla. Grant won the first set, 9—7, Guernsey took the second, 6—1, and the Georgia mite was leading, 5—2, in the third, when he fainted.

Grant was revived and won the necessary points to win the set, 6—2, and the match. Then he collapsed again and was ordered to bed by Dr. E. J. Healey, who found his blood pressure far under normal at 70. He advised Bitsy to take a long rest from tennis, but the Atlantan treated his illness lightly and said he would play tomorrow.

The physician blamed the excessive heat for the collapse of Grant, who still has not regained all of his strength from a recent appendectomy.

Also reaching the round of eight were top-seeded Bobby Riggs, Chicago; Ronald Lubin, Los Angeles; second-seeded Frank Parker, Beverly Hills, Calif.; Jack Kramer, Montebello, Calif.; fourth-seeded Wilmer Allison, Austin, Tex.; sixth-seeded Joe Hunt, Los Angeles, and eighth-seeded Gene Mako, Los Angeles.

Riggs defeated Gardner Mulloy, Miami, Fla., 6—2, 1—6, 6—3; Lubin downed Geroard Podesta, Montclair, N. J., 6—2, 6—2; Parker beat Hal Surface, Kansas City, 9—7, 8—6; Kramer defeated Owen Anderson, Hollywood, 6—4, 9—7; Hunt defeated George Toley, Coral Gables, Fla., 6—0, 6—3; Mako eliminated Charlie Hare, England, 5—7, 6—1, 6—0, and Allison won, 4—6, 6—1, 12—10, from Wayne Sabin.

Tomorrow's quarter-finals send Riggs vs. Lubin, Grant vs. Kramer, Parker vs. Hunt and Allison vs. Mako.

Top-seeded Alice Marble won her way into the semifinals easily, scoring 6—1, 6—2, over Barbara Winslow, Hollywood. Dorothy May Bundy, of Santa Monica, Calif., who is seeded second, won, 6—0, 6—2, over Norma Taubele, New York. Third-seeded Mrs. Sarah P. Fabyan downed Dorothy Workman, San Francisco, 6—1, 6—2, and the round of four was completed when Mme. Sylvia Henrotin, of France, advanced by default over Mrs. John Van Ryn, Austin, Tex.

The semifinal rounds send Miss Marble against Mrs. Fabyan and Miss Bundy against Mme. Henrotin.

Kanner to Coach.

Maury Kanner, local heavyweight boxer, and former North Carolina University end, will coach the Warwick unlimited football team this season. The Warwicks meet Friday night at 8:30 o'clock at the home of Bernard Lucas, 231 Twelfth street northeast.

Barnegat Leads.

Neenah, Wis., Aug. 11 (AP).—The Barnegat Bay (N. J.) Yacht Racing Association jumped into an 11-point lead over the Inland Lakes Yachting Association in the unofficial standings at the conclusion of the third race in the international Class E regatta today.

He'll Fight Again February 22

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Tony Galento, the Orange, N. J., heavyweight, doesn't look as though he's ready for a fight in this picture, but his manager, Joe Jacobs, shown as he helped Tony from his bed yesterday, announced that Galento would meet John Henry Lewis on February 22 at Atlantic City. Tony, stricken with broncho-pneumonia July 21, a few days before he was to meet Lewis in Philadelphia, will leave the hospital today, Jacobs said.

The tilt was called at 11 p. m. at the end of nine scoreless innings . . . Ickey Katzen, Baltimore twirler, fanned 18, and Abe Rosenfield, Dr. Pepper moundsman, whiffed 15 . . . In fact, many of Rosenfield's friends will tell you that he turned in the greatest performance of his career as not a single enemy batsman reached first base . . . But to give you the other side of the story, listen to this record by Katzen . . . Three days prior to the Dr. Pepper game, Ickey hurled a no-hit, no-run game against the Shavitz Club, Maryland State champs . . . He hasn't allowed more than two runs in any game this season . . . And the upshot of all this is that you should be at Ballston Stadium tonight a 9 o'clock because at that time Dr. Pepper will entertain the Overnight Transportation ten in what should be the best softball game since the world's champion Briggs Beautyware squad showed here . . . There will also be a preliminary engagement between Old Milwaukee and Marine Inspection for the championship of the Commercial Twilight League . . . The winner of this battle will represent its league in the city series to be held in the near future.

Al Dowtin Leads.

Asheville, N. C., Aug. 11 (AP).—Turning loose another barrage of pars with an occasional birdie, Al Dowtin, slender medalist from Wake Forest, came through the quarterfinals of the Biltmore Forest invitation golf tournament today with a 3 and 1 victory over Chester Brown, jr., of Asheville.

With Bill Ackerman

Hardly a section in the lower Chesapeake but what reports catches of bluefish. At Messick Capt. Floyd Rollins says they are having better fishing than at any time this season, although the fish are small. The cabio running with them are also on the small side, weighing from 10 to 27 pounds.

ACKERMAN.

At Gloucester Point catches of blues are about in the same proportion, from 100 to 200 to the boat, but here Capt. T. S. Clopton reports many of them weighing up to 4 pounds.

Boats out of Ridge are catching them on the Middles. Fair in size, with the catch of 116 by Capt. Brady McKay the best so far. The cabio are running with these schools also, and, according to Capt. Taft Tippett, in good numbers, but he says it takes a real angler to stand their rushing, bulldogging tactics.

The easy fishing, where all that was necessary was to drop a baited hook overboard, is about over for this season, although in most sections during the past week and when the weather permitted some nice strings of hardheads were brought in. One of Capt Johnnie Manifold's boats, fishing on the Gooses, caughft the granddaddy of all hardheads—it weighed 6 pounds.

Instead we will have the striking fish—blues, trout, stripers. Worthy antagonists, that when you find them right, will give you not only a lot of sport, but catches to really talk about. At the same time, there are liable to be many days when they are not to be found at all, and the day seemingly wasted, if you rate your fishing trips that way—but after all isn't that just what makes the sport so intriguing.

Catches of sea trout have been made with trolled lures at Piney Point, Point Lookout, and from the Gooses up to Kent Island. A few have been taken in Herring Bay, but the best fishing here is for the stripers. Sometime each evening they raise to the top, often for only a short time, but occasionally for as much as 30 minutes to an hour or more. When they do stay up the action is continuous and the catches exceptionally good.

Capt. Bob Lee, at Shadyside, continues to swear by chumming them with shore shrimp, although his boats are bringing in from 20 to 90 by trolling, with quite a few sea trout and a few small blues.

We gave the Cacapon River as being clear and fishable last Friday, only to find that on Sunday it was "muddy as the Potomac," in spite of the fact that it has been consistently in good shape. Therefore, with a face that is exceedingly red, we ask that this stream be rated for the present with all other bass waters in this section of the Potomac watershed—as impossible to fish.

Interest is centering now on the International Tuna Angling matches that will get under way late this month at Liverpool, Nova Scotia, for this year they have moved up to insure better weather, and with the entry of a Cuban team of exceptional merit there is bound to be keen competition.

Paul Townsend, local big game angler, who captained the American team last year, will probably be leaving shortly to get his hand in before the matches on the giant fish that during the past week have been running exceptionally large.

Several weighing just under 600 pounds have been taken. The record for this season so far is 687 pounds. Tops for the ladies is the 550-pounder taken by Mrs. Cameron Bradley in an hour and 40 minutes.

The first broadbill swordfish of the season was caught off Montauk on the 8th by H. F. Jaeckle, of New York City. The culmination of seven years effort, this 265-pound fish required 8 hours and 20 minutes to bring to gaff, so that its captor might take his place with the select few that have made the grade in this most exciting and expensive of all fishing.

While fishing Saturday off Louisburg, Nova Scotia, Mrs. Michael Lerner, of New York, caught the first broadbill swordfish ever taken by a woman angler in Canadian waters. Her swordfish weighed 295 pounds, and was landed in 2 hours and 50 minutes on a 12-0 reel, 28-ounce rod and 39-thread line. Guides were the well-known Tommy Gifford and Larry Bagby, of Miami. During the fight the fish leaped clear of the water three times.

On Tuesday, Ben Crowningshield, member of the American team to fish in the International Tuna Matches at Liverpool, fishing out of Ipswich, broke the American blue marlin record with a fish that, after drying out for 12 hours, weighed 710 pounds. It is 5 pounds heavier than the displaced record fish caught by Francis R. Low off Ambrose Light in 1935.

Marlin fishing slowed down slightly during the past week at Ocean City, with the total number taken checked at 40. It is very possible that they are moving north, for Capt. Freiberger at Brielle reports an 83-pounder taken there on the fifth, and many others sighted, but there are still enough off the Maryland shore to make it worth the trip. Capt. Lev Raymond has been taking an average of one a day fishing mostly to the southard of Winter Quarter, while other boats have been getting them to the northward, in the vicinity of Fenwick Shoals.

Seemingly as to take their place, great numbers of school tuna have come in for the lush feeding. Almost daily now the boats are taking one and two, weighing between 40 and 50 pounds. Oldtimers like Capt. Red Hall have taken to "grinding" (the offshore method of chumming) for them. We are hoping this fishing can be as productive as the marlin fishing has been.

Bears on Top— Times Doesn't Like It!

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 11 (AP).—Newark's Bears led the International League pennant race by 12½ games today except in the standings of the Buffalo Times.

Because the Times is "against monopolies," News Editor Joseph Cummiskey ordered the "Big Bad Bears" dropped from the standings.

The Bears have led the league since the start of the season. Cummiskey explained:

"Once there were three little bears—a mamma bear, a daddy bear and a baby bear. And once there were 20 Newark bears. And they were big bad bears. They ate everything in the league. Times are hard and we figure someone else should have a bite once in a while, so we kicked Newark out of the league. Who wouldn't? Besides, I'm against monopolies."

Lincoln Life Names Marsh Manager Here

New General Agent Was Formerly With the Equitable Life.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Appointment of John D. Marsh as general agent for the Lincoln National Life Insurance Co., in Washington, was announced yesterday by A. L. Dern, vice president and director of agencies of the company. Mr. Marsh has established local agency offices in the Southern Building and the company has maintained an office in the District of Columbia for the past nine years.

Mr. Marsh reports that there is an excess of $979,000,000 of life insurance in force throughout the country. The company, in addition to doing business in 37 States, operates in the Philippine Islands, Panama Canal Zone and Hawaii, maintaining 80 branch offices.

Mr. Marsh was one of the youngest men to be appointed to the position of unit manager by his former company. He was given an executive position at the age of 23. Prior to taking over the agency for the Lincoln National Life he was assistant agency manager for the Equitable Life Assurance Society, in Washington. A graduate of the Managers' School of the Life Insurance Research Bureau of Hartford, Conn., Mr. Marsh also attended George Washington University. He is 31 years of age and married.

Business Trend Upward.

Pronounced betterment in business trends is announced in a recent survey of the American Bankers Association as the result of a poll of more than 1,000 business and banking leaders. Thirty-one per cent of the executives participating in the canvass state that "the trend in their business is upward," and 38 per cent said they are moving along on even keel. Thirty-one per cent still report a downward trend, the review states.

The latter group compares with 61 per cent reporting a downward movement in June, 58 per cent in May and 51 per cent in April. The present business situation contains the elements of a short boom, the survey reminds, the basis for this opinion being belief that inflation in some form will be hard to avoid.

The review calls attention to the growth of the national debt, and states it would take more than 40 years to pay it off. It also comments on importance of the assurance of profits, stresses high taxes and labor costs, as well as the desirability of balancing the national budget.

Modernization Loans.

The property modernization campaign of the District of Columbia Bankers Association continues actively, loans from local banking institutions under Title I of the National Housing act continuing without interruption, according to reports from headquarters of the organization.

Records of the office revealed that more than 1,165 of these loans for alteration and repair of property have been made by the city's banks since enactment of amendments to

Cotton Steady; December 8.41

New York, Aug. 11 (AP).—Early slight gains in cotton today were later lost under a moderate volume of hedge selling. Demand was poor. December sold off from an opening high of 8.47 to close at a low of 8.41. Final prices were 1 to 3 points net lower.

The market opened 3 points higher in response to the action of Liverpool and on a little trade and local buying. Reports of more favorable weather in the cotton belt and easiness of other markets lowered prices but the declines were gradual under Southern selling and liquidation.

Cottonseed Oil.

Cottonseed oil was easy today, in sympathy with the action of allied markets, as September liquidation and selling in advance of the July consumption estimate carried prices down to net losses of 11 to 18 points at the close. Sales amounted to 338 contracts. Bleachable spot nominal: September closed 8.07, October 8.09, December 8.11, January 8.12, March 8.15.

Heavy Construction 69% Above Year Ago

New York, Aug. 11 (AP).—Engineering construction awards for the latest week bring the heavy construction volume to date to $1,612,149,000, an increase of 1.1 per cent over the $1,594,818,000 reported for the corresponding period last year, Engineering News Record reported today. The week's total, $76,431,000 was 33 per cent above the previous week's, and 69 per cent above the corresponding 1937 week.

Private construction was 43 per cent above the corresponding 1937 week due to a high volume of commercial building and large-scale housing projects.

Stock Prices Trend Downward for Fourth Day, Led by Gilt-Edged Issues.

New York, Aug. 11.—Stocks went downhill for the fourth consecutive day, and at an accelerated pace although volume was not large. Blue chip manufacturing, coppers, motors, rail equipments and stores, were the heaviest losers with steels, oils and utilities also losing quite a bit of ground. Food descriptions were relatively steady in dull dealings. Farm equipment shares broke quite sharply here and there, Case common yielding 7 points and the 7 per cent preferred 3¾.

In the bond section, Governments were steady and recently marketed liens buoyant, but most speculatives followed the dip in shares. Japanese obligations firmed on announcement of the Siberian truce. The latter news, however, had an adverse effect on wheat markets, prices sagging to new five-year lows, net losses ranging from 1⅝ cents to 2¼ cents a bushel. Cotton closed 1 to 3 points down. Wednesday's rally in foreign exchanges failed, to hold sterling again easing against dollar rates. A further gold engagement of $925,000 was arranged in London for shipment to this country.

While today's downward movement in stock prices was the most pronounced of the week, amounting to 1.12 points for the 100 leading stocks in the New York Herald Tribune's averages, losses for the four days were not large, amounting to 2.08 points for the 100 stocks, of which 2.45 points relates to the 70 industrials and 1 point for the rails. The latter had shown gains in one of the four days.

Motors Actively Lower.

Motors were active on the downside, General Motors and Chrysler with respective losses of 1⅝ and 1⅞ points being at the top of the list of trading favorites. Anaconda, Steel common, Western Electric, Texas Corporation, Telephone, Atchison, Atlantic Coast Line, Delaware & Hudson, Pennsylvania, New York Central, General Electric and Goodyear, all actively dealt in, declined a point or more. Allied Chemical was off 6; American Can, 4½; Union Pacific, 3⅞; duPont, 3; Ingersoll-Rand, 3; United States Gypsum, 3¾, and Air Reduction, 2¾. Of 822 issues traded on the big board to the extent of 1,094,310 shares, 626 declined, only 80 advanced and 116 were unchanged.

The selling developed after an irregular opening and a half-hearted rally under the leadership of motors after the noon hour failed to bring the list back far from its lows. Offerings increased in the last hour when price declines became general.

Aside from the continued weakness in grains, farm produce generally and in live stock, with adverse effect on agricultural income on which business is depending for the expected fall upturn, the lack of an appetite on the buying side of stocks could be explained by pessimism, on the part of some operators, at political developments, as well as to the poor earnings reports for the second quarter and first half of the year. It is hard to whip up enthusiasm for corporate shares, regardless of the psychological change in the attitude of security buyers, with a day-to-day budget of quarterly reports showing deficits or sharply reduced profits compared with juicy earnings last year. In this connection, many of the brokers are counseling caution until a thorough readjustment has been effected in price levels, or until more definite evidence is forthcoming that private business is adding something substantial to the pump-priming recovery.

Japan's Bonds Rally.

Japenese bonds rallied today on the cessation of hostilities with Russian troops, but in other respects the listed bond market was a dull affair, with more losses than gains apparent. High-grade money market bonds were steady. In the speculative groups, the trend was downward, along with equities. But some of the cheaper rails that lately were under pressure resisted the movement. Turnover in all bonds was less than $5,000,000.

Gains of 2 to 4 points appeared in Japanese government bonds, while municipal and electrical issues of Japanese origin advanced 1 to 3 points. Italian issues were better, and a few of the German-Austrian issues also advanced. The main trend in Latin-American default bonds was downward, but there were a few exceptions. The high-grade Canadian, Australian and Scandinavian bonds held their ground.

Among speculative railroad bonds the losses ranged to 3 points, whereas the few increases were measured in fractions. The cheaper borderline and default bonds developed good resistance to the selling. Rail and utility holding company issues were dull and lower. Convertible industrials drifted down with their related equities. Amusement, communications and other special groups were soft.

Long term United States Treasury bonds were generally firm, but inactive. Guaranteed issues of the farm and home corporations showed more losses than gains. Among best grade utility, railroad and industrial bonds prices were well maintained, as dealers quickly distributed available new issues.

Brokers' Loans Rise $25,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $499,000,000. The week ended Wednesday and the total represented an increase of $25,000,000 when compared with the previous week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $1,143,000,000.

Bituminous Production.

The National Coal Association estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended August 6 as approximately 5,830,000 net tons.

Odd-Lot Selling Exceeds Purchases

Selling orders of small traders on the New York Stock Exchange exceeded buying orders in the week ended August 6.

The securities commission reported yesterday that customers' odd-lot orders to buy totaled 25,387 involving 691,003 shares valued at $25,141,262. This compared with 30,603 orders to sell involving 764,641 shares valued at $24,967,446.

Excess Reserves Hold Same Level

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that the amount of lendable money in the Nation's banks remained unchanged at $2,920,000,000 in the week ended August 10.

Although an increase in Treasury cash tended to reduce excess reserves of the banks, the trend was offset by various other factors.

New York Steam 3½ Per Cent Bonds Are Priced at Par and Interest.

An issue of $27,982,000 of 25-year first mortgage bonds, 3½ per cent series, of the New York Steam Corporation, guaranteed as to principal and interest by the Consolidated Edison Co. of New York, is being offered today by a group of investment banking houses headed by Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. The bonds are priced at 100 per cent and interest.

The steam corporation, over 97 per cent of whose voting securities are owned by Consolidated Edison, distributed steam for heat and power in Manhattan through 72 miles of mains and service pipes. Of the proceeds from the sale of the bonds $26,943,500 will be applied toward the redemption, on November 1, of the outstanding funded debt of the steam corporation and $478,860 will be used for general corporate purposes.

Net income of Consolidated Edison Co. last year was $35,722,779, which compares with $36,817,972 in 1936 and $34,110,930 in 1935.

Associated with Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., as underwriters are: Kuhn, Loeb & Co., Blyth & Co., Inc., Brown Harriman & Co., Inc., Lazard Freres & Co., The First Boston Corporation, Smith, Barney & Co., Bonbright & Co., Inc., Lehman Brothers and Clark, Dodge & Co.

Berry's Claims Were 'Holdup,' Inquiry Is Told

'We Ought to Blackmail Berry,' TVA Geologist Says at Hearing.

By the Associated Press.

Knoxville, Tenn., Aug. 11.—Four witnesses testified before a Congressional committee investigating the Tennessee Valley Authority today that they regarded the Berry marble case as an attempt to "hold up" the Government.

So outspoken was one witness on his opinion that Committee Counsel Francis Biddle warned he should "be advised of the libel laws of this State and the United States. . . ."

The entire day's testimony revolved about the purchase of mineral and marble leases in the TVA Norris Dam area by Senator Berry (Democrat), Tennessee, and associates.

Blunt Statements.

The blunt statements of the witnesses in brief:

Edwin C. Eckel, TVA geologist—"My idea was we were being blackmailed."

Frank Montgomery, Knoxville attorney—"In my own mind the whole thing was a fraud when I first heard of it."

John I. Snyder, director of the TVA land acquisition department—"We all felt we were running into an attempt to hold up the Government."

Alvin Ziegler, TVA attorney—"I agree there was an attempt to defraud the Government."

At Pressmen's Home, Tenn., Senator Berry declared, "I'm giving no recognition to those statements."

The Senator has denied repeatedly there was any intent to defraud the government in the lease purchases and cited as proof they were bought in 1913 before the TVA was created.

The Authority succeeded last winter in having the Berry holdings condemned as "commercially worthless" after Berry's counsel valued the marble for "at least $5,000,000."

Eckel, blunt, outspoken former Army major, declared "there had never been the slightest effort to operate the mineral desposits before we heard of them in September, 1934.

"The whole thing had the earmarks of a holdup," he said.

Would "Blackmail" Berry.

In a memorandum dated November 30, 1934, Eckel had questioned the Berry leases and suggested the matter be called to the attention of President Roosevelt.

"My idea," Eckel said, "was we were being blackmailed and I thought we ought to turn the table and blackmail him (Berry)."

"Do you call that blackmail?" Biddle asked.

"It might be blackmail to set the President after a Senator," the ruddy-faced Eckel chuckled.

Montgomery and Ziegler denied charges by Dr. Arthur Morgan that TVA counsel "soft-pedaled" evidence of "bad faith" during the condemnation trial.

Capital Raises Third of Quota For Spanish Aid

District Assigned $10,000 for Ship to Help War Refugees.

One-third of Washington's quota of $10,000 has been pledged or donated toward an American relief ship which will take 5,000 tons of clothing, food and medical supplies to Spain, it was announced yesterday.

"Purpose of the relief ship campaign is a purely humanitarian one, in the American tradition of helping the homeless and hungry with traditional American generosity," the Washington Friends of Spanish Democracy said yesterday.

There are 1,800,000 war refugees in Spain, of whom 800,000 are children, the appeal for funds stated. At the same time the Central Spanish Committee of Washington announced that $500 of its quota of $3,500 has been raised.

Active in raising money are Leon Henderson, honorary chairman; David Barr, chairman; Mrs. Charles Wood Collier, treasurer; William E. Dodd, jr., secretary, and Teresa K. Liss, executive secretary.

Among the local sponsors are Henry C. Alsberg, Louis Bean, Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, Mrs. Louis D. Brandeis, Dean R. Brimhall, the Rev. R. W. Brooks, John Carmody, the Rev. Russell J. Clinchy, Judge James A. Cobb, John F Davis, William E. Dodd, sr., Powers Hapgood, Leroy Halbert, Donald Henderson, Henry T. Hunt, Gardner Jackson, Edmund I. Kaufmann, Morris Klass, Murray W. Latimer, W. Jett Lauck, the Rev. A. F. T. Raum, the Rev. John W. Rustin, Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, Frederick Silcox, Edwin S. Smith, Dr. Roy Anson Thornley and Doxey A. Wilberson.

1st Ships Ordered For Private Firm Under Marine Act

Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the United States Maritime Commission, yesterday announced the signing of a contract with the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, Ltd., of Quincy, Mass., for the construction of four cargo vessels at an approximate cost of $2,559,000 each for the account of the American Export Lines, Inc., for use in the Mediterranean and Black Sea service.

This contract, it was pointed out, is the first of the shipbuilding contracts to be executed by a privately owned American flag shipping company in compliance with the terms of the permanent Government subsidy agreements under the merchant marine act, 1936. The signatories of the contract were J. E. Slater, vice president of the American Export Lines, Inc.; S. W. Wakeman, vice president of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, Ltd., and chairman.

The four vessels will have a speed of 16½ knots, which will make them the fastest cargo vessels in the United States-Mediterrean service.

U. S. Agents Smash Conn. Dope Ring

New Haven, Conn., Aug. 11 (U.P.).—A $500,000 narcotic ring was broken up tonight with the arrest of five men in four raids here, Federal authorities announced.

John Amici, seized as he was driving his car through the center of the city, said he made $200 a day selling narcotics, police declared.

Italy Is Prepared, Il Duce Proclaims

Rome, Aug. 11.—Italy is without illusions and prepared for any eventuality, Premier Mussolini proclaimed today to the troops of two divisions, who have just been testing new tactical plans in maneuvers in the Abruzzi Mountains.

The maneuvers are stated to have demonstrated the value of a new organization of the army division, which is designed to increase its fighting power.

Capt. Thomas' Funeral Rites Set Tomorrow

Veteran Fire Department Officer's Burial to Be in Arlington.

Charles Thomas, 66, veteran Washington fire captain, died yesterday at Mount Alto Hospital.

Services will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow at George W. Wise Funeral Parlor, 2900 M street northwest. Mr. Thomas will be buried in Arlington Cemetery beside his wife, who died in 1934.

Mr. Thomas was born in Shelby County, Ind., but had lived in Georgetown practically all his life. He served two terms of enlistment with Battery M, Fourth Coast Artillery, before and during the Spanish-American War.

He entered the Washington Fire Department in 1900, and was connected with Truck Companies 5, 3 and 10 and Engine Company 7. He was a lieutenant of Truck Company 3 when that unit became the first motorized company in Washington. At the time of his retirement in 1929, Mr. Thomas was a captain.

Known to his colleagues as "Ozzie," Mr. Thomas figured in many major Washington fires and was commended for action when the Knickerbocker Theater roof collapsed in 1922.

Mr. Thomas was a member of the United Spanish War Veterans; Woodmen of the World, Elm Camp No. 8, and Peck Memorial Chapel. The Rev. Irving W. Ketchum, pastor of the chapel, will officiate at the funeral services.

Mr. Thomas is survived by his son and daughter, Howard C. Thomas, of Chicago, and Mrs. Gladys O'Neil, with whom he lived at 1228 Twenty-ninth street northwest; three grandchildren; a brother, James, of Arlington, Ind., and a half-sister, Mrs. Melissa McKinney, of Shelbyville, Ind.

George Washburn Rites Set Today

Funeral services for George F. Washburn, 43, Metropolitan policeman stationed at the White House for four years, will be held at Chamber's parlors at 2 p. m. today. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery. Mr. Washburn died at Mount Alto Hospital Wednesday. He had been a member of the police force for 12 years. Prior to that he had served in the Navy. He was a native of Duxbury, Mass. Surviving are his wife and an 8-year-old daughter.

Pennsylvania Talk Held 'Indicated' By the President

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 11 (AP).—Democratic State Chairman David L. Lawrence said today President Roosevelt has "strongly indicated" he would speak in Pennsylvania during the fall election campaign on behalf of the Democratic State ticket.

The ticket is headed by Gov. Earle for United States Senator and Charles Alvin Jones, Pittsburgh lawyer, for Governor.

Guffey Letter Studied.

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Sheppard (Democrat), Texas, of the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee, reiterated yesterday his belief it was not a violation "of the letter of the law for a man, not in the WPA, to ask WPA employes for campaign funds."

Sheppard was answering questions about a circular letter distributed over the name of Senator Guffey (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, inviting contributions to the Democratic State committee campaign chest.

The Senate committee will "study" the Guffey letter, Sheppard said.

Navy Reports Award Of 3 Shore Contracts

The Navy announced yesterday award of these contracts for construction at navel shore stations:

Air compressors, Norfolk, Va., Navy Yard, Ingersoll-Rand Co., Washington, D. C., $35,101; condensing equipment, Norfolk, Va., Navy Yard, C. N. Wheeler Manufacturing Co., Philadelphia, $3,300; extension to power plant building, Norfolk, Va., Navy Yard, R. E. Richardson & Co., Inc., Norfolk, $18,932.

The Treasury announced W. F. Martens, Newport News, Va., had submitted a $13,880 low bid for construction at the Smiths Island, Va., Coast Guard Station.

C. A. Youngman Funeral Rites Set for Today

Was a Prominent Mason and Former Revenue Collector.

Charles A. Youngman, father of Miss Anna P. Youngman, editorial writer for The Washington Post, died yesterday at the Sibley Memorial Hospital after a brief illness.

Mr. Youngman was a collector for the Bureau of Internal Revenue for more than 30 years before his retirement in 1924. Preceding his connection with the Government he was a druggist in Louisville, Ky., where he spent most of his life.

He was active in the Masonic order, being a member of Louisville Lodge and of the Union Lodge of Perfection, Scottish Rite, also of Louisville.

He had lived in Washington at the Westchester Apartments since 1934.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Camille Sloan Youngman, and another daughter, Mrs. Mary E. Youngman.

As a hobby, Mr. Youngman turned to inventions and had obtained several patents on improvements in filtering and bottling machinery.

Funeral services will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the Hysong funeral home.

Young Attack-Slayer Is Given Life Term

Washington Clearings.

The Washington Clearing House reports total clearings of $20,029,950.70 for the week ended Wednesday, which compares with $21,881,168.07 for the corresponding period a year agoo, a decrease of 8.4 per cent. Compared with a total of $22,222,771.06 for the previous week clearings decreased 9.8 per cent.

Loans, Discounts Declined Despite Big Bank Deposits

Bank loans and discounts, including overdrafts, declined for the third successive period, reaching a level of $8,234,624,000 for all national banks on June 30, 1938, the lowest since December 31, 1936, when they aggregated $8,270,000,000, according to statistics released yesterday by Marshall R. Diggs, acting comptroller of the currency.

The decrease is highlighted all the more by the fact deposits on June 30, 1938, totaled $26,815,000,000, the highest since Dec. 31, 1936.

The contraction in loans is significant because on April 14 President Roosevelt announced his attack on the depression by earmarking on the desterlization of $1,400,000,000 of the Treasury's gold and lowering reserve requirements for Federal Reserve System member banks.

The decline indicates the two moves failed to arrest the deflationary business cycle between April 14 and July 1, when the Administration embarked on its spending-lending recovery program.

Mrs. Marranzano Funeral Saturday

Requiem mass for Mrs. Gaetana Marranzano, 82, who died Wednesday night in Casualty Hospital from injuiries in an automobile accident, will be said Saturday at Holy Name Catholic Church, Eleventh and K streets northeast. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

(Signed) KARL P. CROWDER (Seal.).
(Signed) LILI WEIBERG. (Seal.).

District of Columbia, to wit:

I, DOROTHY M. CHINN, a Notary Public in and for the District aforesaid, hereby certify that Karl P. Crowder and Lili Weiberg, who are personally well known to me as the persons who executed the aforesoing Certificate of Limited Partnership, dated the 18th day of July, A. D. 1938, personally appeared before me in the said District and acknowledged the said certificate to be their free act and deed.

(Seal.) (Signed) DOROTHY M. CHINN, Notary Public.

BYRON G. CARSON, Detrick Building, 1010 Vermont avenue. Attorney for Anacostia Market.

A true copy. Test: (Seal.) CHARLES E. STEWART, Clerk. By R. S. WAYLAND, Assistant Clerk. 21-23-28-30.4-6.11-13

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the undersigned being all of the members of a Limited Partnership formed pursuant to the laws of the State of New York and desiring to do business in the District of Columbia as a Limited Partnership, have filed a certificate of Limited Partnership in the office of the Clerk of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia; that the firm name of said partnership is G. M.-P. Murphy & Company; that the business intended to be transacted by said partnership is (a) buying or otherwise acquiring, selling or otherwise disposing of, and in any manner dealing, whether on behalf of the partnership or for others, in stocks, bonds or other securities and property; (b) transacting a general securities and brokerage business such as is ordinarily conducted by New York Stock Exchange firms and conforming to the constitution and rules of the said New York Stock Exchange; (c) underwriting or subscribing for, or assisting to procure underwritings or subscriptions for, stocks, bonds or other securities and/or otherwise financing or assisting to procure the financing of corporate or other enterprises; that John G. Pennypacker, James D. Sawyer, J. Sawyer Wilson, jr., Charles H. Baetjer, Don M. Kelley, George A. Garrett and John E. Parker ceased to be General Partners, and Frederick Osborn ceased to be a Special Partner of said partnership on July 7, 1938; that Otis A. Glasebrook, jr., Edward O. McDonnell, Alfonso P. Villa, William P. T. Preston and Charles S. Sargent are General Partners; that P. Erskine Wood, Grayson M.-P. Murphy, jr., and Walter Russell Herrick are Special Partners; that the Special Partners have contributed as capital to the Common Stock of the copartnership the following amounts in cash: P. Erskine Wood, $300.000; Grayson M.-P. Murphy, jr., $50,000, and Walter Russell Herrick, $200,000; and that the term of the partnership is to end at the close of business on June 30, 1939, subject to earlier termination on certain contingencies. The Special Partners will be entitled to the return of their contributions upon termination of the partnership. In addition, the partnership agreement provides that part or all of the contribution of each Special Partner may be withdrawn upon his death or retirement from the partnership or on certain other contingencies, but that such withdrawal shall not be made unless and until this certificate shall have been canceled or so amended as to set forth such withdrawal.

Dated this 5th day of August, 1938.

Otis A. Glasebrook, jr., Edward O. McDonnell, Alfonso P. Villa, William P. T. Preston, and Charles S. Sargent, General Partners, and P. Erskine Wood, Grayson M.-P. Murphy, jr., and Walter Russell Herrick, Special Partners. mwf—13t

Says—

You know, it all depends on how you're situated and how you feel whether somethin' strikes you as funny or sad. I suppose that's just another way of sayin' "What's one man's meat is another man's poison." But when somethin' happens to me, I try to remember that in a year or so I'll probably look back and laugh about what's troublin' me now. It's just like when my Aunt Lujy accepted the man she married.

She met Grandpa Snazzy on the street and said, "Snazzy, I've accepted Alfred and I'm going off to live in India." Grandpa said, "India? Say, Lujy, did'ja know that they have night when we have day and day when we have night?" Aunt Lujy said, "Yes, I suppose it'll seem mighty strange at first, but a body can get used to anything in time."

People's Morale Breaking, Says Rep. O'Connor

He'll Sponsor Private Jobs to Get Public Away From 'Trough.'

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 11.—Representative O'Connor (Democrat), New York, said today there were "evidences of the breaking down of the morale of the people," and declared "no democratic form of government can survive this."

In a speech before the Rotary Club of New York, O'Connor, chairman of the House Rules Committee, said:

"Make every person dependent on the Government for his bread and butter and the rest is easy for the dictator. He often plans it that way.

"First make them come to the public through—and then democracy and what we love as a republic disappears."

O'Connor said he would "encourage private employment so that we may put an end to public employment to stop this radical trend which has made such headway during the last nine years of the depression."

Private business, he added, "has the resources. Our banks and large business institutions are bulging with money ready to let it flow forth in the channels of credit and construction as soon as the barrier is lifted."

He listed as "pickets in the barrier:"

"High punitive taxes.

"Interference with private business by the snooping of countless bureaus created without discriminating between the proper regulation of business and un-American interference with business.

"Government in competition with private business.

"Uncertainty as to what will happen next in the way of new laws or their administration, or new schemes to be experimented with."

U. S. Nazis' Plans Will Be Revealed To House Inquiry

By the Associated Press.

A House committee appointed to investigate "un-American propaganda" will begin public hearings today by questioning four "mystery witnesses" concerning Nazi operations in the United States.

This was announced by Chairman Dies (Democrat), of Texas, who said the witnesses would "offer a complete picture of the Nazi movement and the allied bund in the United States."
